Mayor trots out budget for review by districts

District 1 meeting tonight at UC High

By SEBASTIAN RUIZ | VILLAGE NEWS

The San Diego City Council unanimously backed Mayor Jerry Sanders' fiscal year 2010 budget proposal Tuesday, calling for 6 percent cuts in employee wages and reductions to their benefits and compensation.

The fiscal plan, which Sanders unveiled Monday at City Hall and reinforced during a last-minute appearance at the Ocean Beach Branch Library on Tuesday, is expected to close half of an estimated $60 million budget gap with $30 million worth of concessions from the city's five labor groups.

The council voted 8-0 in favor of the plan during labor negotiation hearings Tuesday.

Cutting hours or closing libraries and city recreation centers — a proposal that met stiff opposition from residents late last year — appears to be off the table this time. The mayor's budget plan does keep about 150 positions vacant but does not include layoffs.

"This is the year to protect city services and employees," Sanders said on Monday. He said a 6 percent across-the-board reduction was "fair" to all employees.

Sanders and District 1 Councilwoman Sherri Lightner will host a budget town hall meeting this evening, April 16 at University City High School, 6949 Genesee Ave., from 6 to 7 p.m.

District 2 Councilman Kevin Faulconer will also join Sanders in a community budget town hall meeting Monday, April 20 at the Ocean Beach Recreation Center, 4726 Santa Monica Ave., from 6 to 7 p.m.

Faulconer said the budget proposal acknowledges the need for "some serious restructuring" to employee salaries and benefits.

"I think we're asking all [city] employees to join in and make some of the sacrifices," Faulconer said. "We need to make the tough decisions just like they're making in the private sector."

The Deputy City Attorney's Association, white-collar workers represented by the Municipal Employees Association and the International Association of Firefighters Local 145, came to an agreement with the mayor's office to negotiate details of a 6 percent reduction.

Fly creates a buzz in the jazz world this spring

By BETH WOOD | VILLAGE NEWS

Even savvy jazz fans may be puzzled upon first hearing the beautifully sparse and melodic "Sky and Country," the second record by the trio Fly. While detecting a musical difference, listeners may not at first pinpoint what specifically makes the combination of bassist Larry Grenadier, saxophonist Mark Turner and drummer Jeff Ballard stand out from more traditional groups. However, when Fly launches the 2009 Athenaeum Jazz at The Neurosciences Institute spring concert series this Saturday, the audience will likely notice fewer exchanges of show-off solos and a more unified musicianship, with the trio members deeply in tune with each other, literally and figuratively.

"It's like tossing a ball around or having an intense conversation with more than one person," said Ballard, describing the trio's interaction. "It's like a team riding in the Tour de France, each member taking turns taking the lead or offering total support to the one who is in front at the moment... this is not a sax-led trio; it is a collective trio, a pure democratic music group."

In 2004, Fly made a promising area debut in the Athenaeum Jazz at the Studio series in San Diego's University Heights, around the time of its first album. Ballard and Grenadier are also two-thirds of the acclaimed Brad Mehldau Trio and each have collaborated with Pat Metheny and Danilo Perez, among many others. Turner, now recovered from a post-recording power-saw accident last November that damaged his left hand, has garnered much praise over the years for making his tenor saxophone's higher registers sound especially sweet and clean. He also has performed with pianist Mehldau, as well as guitarist Kurt Rosenwinkel, drummer Paul Motian and San Diego's sax master, James Moody.

Fly's three versatile members have created a special dynamic, partly because they've been friends for years — Californians Grenadier and

City says no to dredging during spawning seasons, analyzes alternatives

Report: lobster, grunion at Pool prohibit projects more than seals

By ALYSSA RAMOS | VILLAGE NEWS

Attorneys representing animal activists and ocean users have battled for years over the intended use of La Jolla's Children's Pool, mainly regarding a harbor seal colony that converted the beach into their rookery. In an effort to comply with a judge's 2005 order to return the area to its 1941 configuration, San Diego city staff compiled an environmental report last month, analyzing potential impacts from dredging the sand and looking at alternatives, including opening four breakwater sluiceways.

According to the March 23 draft environmental impact report (DEIR), even if the city removed the seal colony, the spawning seasons of two additional protected species would continue to prohibit projects in the area except for four months of the year.

La Jolla's harbor seal colony is protected by the Marine Mammal Protection Act (MMPA), which prohibits projects including dredging during the colony's "pupping season," typically December through June, according to the DEIR issued by the City of San Diego Development Services Department (DSD). But the spiny lobster and grunion spawn November to May and March to June, the report says.

"The proposed project and subsequent maintenance activities could result in potential impacts to unique, rare, endangered, sensitive, or fully protected species,"

DSD staff said.

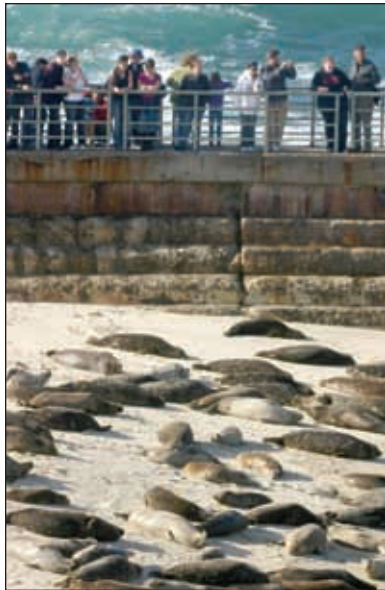

According to the DEIR, an archaeological site sits close to the Children's Pool. During available months, construction crews must hire a biological monitor and an archeological monitor, the report said.

"... It must be assumed that deeper sands potentially containing cultural resources could be affected, thus leading to a finding that significant impacts on archaeological resources could result," staff reported.

"The Children's Pool [cement] breakwater was originally constructed in 1931 to reduce wave action and create a shallow, calm swimming area for human use," DSD reported. The proposed project includes three primary components: city crews would excavate sand, transfer it to decontaminate it and then replace it for reconfiguration. Crews would maintain the reconfigured Children's Pool every two to five years.

"Specifically, excavated sand from Casa Beach will be transferred in 200-300 cubic yard increments by a front end loader... up the beach access ramp... to a conveyor system," DSD reported. "Because the sand is known to contain unsafe levels of fecal coliform, it will first be decontaminated by exposing it to the sun's ultraviolet rays."

Construction crews will spread contaminated sand in 1- to 2-foot-thick layers, expose it to ultraviolet rays and rake it until bacteria counts return to safe levels, the DEIR said, adding that

"since sand buildup on Casa Beach and in the pool will likely occur after project construction, maintenance of the restored condition... will consist of smaller scale sand excavation and transfer every two to five years."

DSD staff analyzed alternate options, including year-round and seasonal joint use; no project; and opening the sluiceways.

"The four breakwater sluiceways would be opened instead of dredging in order to increase water circulation in the Children's Pool and potentially reduce the level of contamination in the water and the sand," DSD reported.

According to the city, the four sluiceways — openings below the cement breakwater — are cemented shut beneath about 7 feet of sand. Although city workers would initially need to remove about the same amount of sand, according to the report, this alternative would most likely have a beneficial effect on water and sand quality, the report said.

"This alternative could have a beneficial effect on water quality as the open sluiceways would provide increased water flow in and out of the pool therefore improving water quality," DSD reported. "Sand movement through the sluiceways could provide a beneficial effect on the sand, potentially decreasing contamination levels."

Regarding biological resources, "the amount of sand... would be minimal," the report said, and would not impact the surrounding habitat.

City staff said the Year-round Joint Use Alternative would "allow seals and humans to use the Children's Pool at will." But the health risks to humans would increase and seals might be harassed, the report said. The Seasonal Joint Use Alternative allows humans to use Casa Beach and the Children's Pool July 1 through Jan. 1 and seals take possession from Jan. 2 through June 30, DSD said.

Although staff said these alternatives lessen biological impacts, both would have potentially significant impacts on human health, public safety and hazardous materials, and water quality; and the Seasonal Joint Use Alternative would affect recreational resources.

The city looked at a "no project alternative" but said that would "not achieve any of the basic project objectives... nor would it comply with the court order to return the Children's Pool to its 1941 configuration."

Meanwhile, Bryan Pease, attorney for the Animal Protection and Rescue League's Sealwatch, announced Tuesday that "SB428 just passed in committee and could be voted on by the assembly as soon as Thursday. This is the bill to allow the San Diego seals to remain at Casa Beach."

Pease petitioned San Diego City Council members to create legislation that would move to the state legislature, adopting additional wording to the state's 1931 tideland grant at La Jolla's Children's Pool. According to Pease, adding the phrase "marine mammal wildlife viewing" to the area's list of uses would help solve years of battling between ocean users and animal activists. Pease said he hopes the senate bill, sponsored by state Sen. Christine Kehoe (D-San Diego), would negate the need for dredging and chasing seals away from the Children's Pool.

"The federal court has not issued its ruling yet regarding keeping the temporary restraining order in effect that I obtained last October and argued the Friday before last in favor of keeping," Pease said.

DSD staff said the city would not need to mitigate for seven areas under the California Environmental Quality Act, including land use;

Local 127 did not reach agreement with the mayor's office, forcing the City Council to impose the reductions during Tuesday's session.

Reductions result in the loss of about $200 per pay period for some labor and skilled-trade employees, according to Joan Raymond, AFSCME Local 127. The union represents about 1,990 of the city's lowest-paid employees, she said.

"It means the difference between paying mortgage or our rent, and feeding our families," Raymond said. "[The cuts] need to come in a way that's more creative and doesn't take food off the tables of our families."

Raymond proposed cutting some of the "fat" and not the "muscle" of city operations.

"If it's money they're looking for, we can find millions and millions without punishing our families," Raymond said.

Unions represent about 10,500 city employees.

Brian Marvel, president of the San Diego Police Officers Association, said the mayor's reduction to healthcare compensation would affect some officers more than others and that it threatens the department's ability to recruit officers.

"If the mayor's proposal is imposed on us, our department will not be able to compete for qualified officers in this [job] market," Marvel told the City Council on Tuesday.

In addition to compensation reductions, the mayor's proposal suggests bridging the remainder of the $60 million deficit, in part, by dipping into about $17 million worth of hotel room tax reserves as a "one time" source of funds to help pay for a new fire-alert system, community development plan updates and unfinished projects slated for completion in the 2010 fiscal year. Using the tourism tax dollars for ongoing operations, however, will ultimately require City Council approval.

Liberty Station development, a library in Logan Heights and park and recreation facilities sit on a list of projects expected to open in 2010, Sanders said.

The city also has about $500 million to $700 million in deferred maintenance and capital projects.

City officials blame the budget gap on dwindling sales- and tourism-tax revenue the last few years, according to Chief Financial Officer Mary Lewis.

"We don't see any signs that people are spending money," Lewis said Monday.

The mayor's proposal balances the fiscal year 2010 budget, said Lewis, who added that unfunded pension obligations could leave the city accountable for an estimated $200 million payment in fiscal year 2011. That alone would "unbalance us," creating a larger deficit in 2011.

"If we have to add $30 million to $70 million in our [yearly] pension payment, we're going to have to find a way to balance the budget," Lewis said.

Unfunded pension liability is estimated at about $1.3 billion, to be paid over the next 19 years, Lewis said. An unfunded retiree healthcare deficit looms at about $1.25 billion. ■

Runners start in Del Mar and then make their way south through Torrey Pines State Park, racing up a long hill and then down a winding La Jolla Shores segment to end at La Jolla Cove.

"It starts at the Del Mar Race Track. There will be two waves, according to time," Bonner said.

"Manfred is a very hands-on producer, offering ideas, trying to see what else the songs had to offer," Ballard said. "The man has been doing this for many, many years and that experience showed. It was great working with him. I look forward to doing that some more."

Another experienced musical veteran with whom Ballard worked was Ray Charles. In the late '80s, Ballard was the drummer in the late R&B star's touring band.

"Ray Charles taught me something about completeness in playing," Ballard said. "For him, it was like playing a song for the very first time, and it felt, too, like it could be the very last time, because of the crucial importance he placed on every aspect of playing. "It is being fully in the moment. And that moment was on fire with Ray... and

"I'm going to get there at 4:30 in the morning."

Bonner said buses will begin shuttling racers from La Jolla Cove to Del Mar at 5 a.m. Sunday morning. The race begins at 7:10 a.m.

After the race, La Jolla Kiwanis Club will host its annual beer garden, followed by the awarding of prizes and medals at 10 a.m. This year, the organization hired a band to play the event.

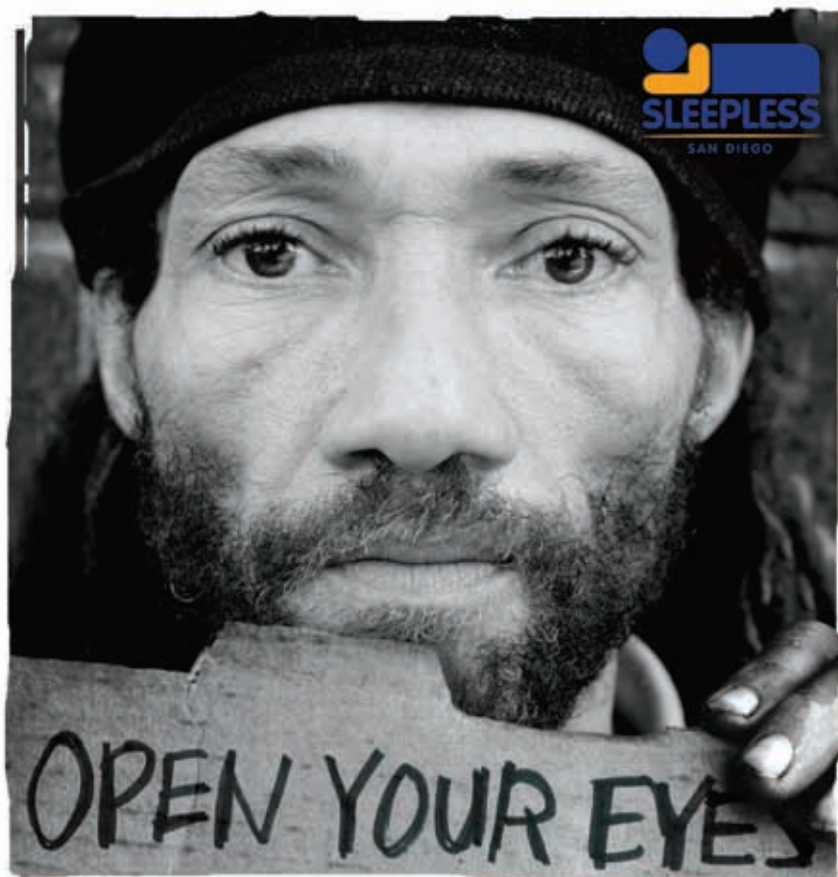

The evening before the races, on Saturday, April 25, La Jolla Kiwanis Club will sponsor a pre-race Carbo Dinner from 5 to 7 p.m. at Washington Mutual, 7777 Girard Ave. Admission is free for participants and $5 for the public. For information, visit www.lajolla5k.com. ■ that was every time we played! That example made me realize the importance of consistency and the tremendous importance of hearing and knowing every little nuance in the music."

This seems to have rubbed off nicely on Ballard. Turner and Grenadier share with him that knowledge of nuance and the importance of hearing each other, which should make the performance of Fly an aural treat.

Fly starts off this year's Athenaeum Jazz at The Neurosciences Institute series on Saturday, April 18 at 8 p.m. The Neurosciences Institute is at 10640 John Jay Hopkins Drive. # Spear fishers report great white shark attack off LJ

By ALYSA RAMOS | VILLAGE NEWS

About one year after the fatal attack off Solana Beach that killed a doctor, a deaf man last week came forward as the sole witness to a Great White Shark attack off La Jolla's coast. Though experts authenticated the man's report, local divers remain wary of his story.

Raymundo Ayus Jr. said he introduced his friend to spearfishing Monday, April 6 at about 6:56 a.m. in the waters off South La Jolla, but what happened during the trip tore their friendship apart.

Ayus and his friend dove into the Pacific Ocean off Camino de la Costa, he said, when the duo caught a big white sea bass. But a large predator snatched the fishermen's prize.

Ayus said a great white shark shoved him, stole the newly caught 50-pound sea bass and then circled him — disappearing and reappearing — until Ayus swam safely through a kelp bed to shore. Despite Ayus's detailed description, some divers said they don't believe the story, claiming the men may have encountered a smaller sevengill shark.

"It was a sevengill shark. Those things have been taking fish," said a local spear fisherman, who said he's been diving in the area more than 20 years.

Ralph S. Collier started the nonprofit Shark Research Committee in 1962, investigating attacks and encounters, mainly involving great white sharks. Collier said he believes Ayus's attack.

"I've investigated these since 1962. It's factual. It did occur — there's no motivation for this man to report it as a stunt," Collier said, adding that he regularly interviews shark attack witnesses about shark encounters. "I'm satisfied the event was factual."

Ayus, 32, said he has been diving for more than 20 years, mostly in Florida. New to the area, Ayus said that for the past two years he has been learning about the waters off San Diego. But Ayus is not a stranger to sharks, either.

About 16 years ago, a bull shark attacked Ayus while he was diving in Florida, he said. Two large half-moons meet on Ayus's right forearm, forming a scar from the bull shark's mouth. Despite Ayus's knowledge of spearfishing, diving, fish and sharks, the man said he was hesitant about reporting the incident.

"I don't want the other divers to think of me as a shark magnet," Ayus said.

Ayus's diving buddy would not come forward, he said. Ayus said the friends stopped speaking after the incident.

"We had a falling out because he broke the golden rule: Dive buddies stay together," Ayus said.

"About 20 minutes into the dive I looked up and saw my buddy waving. As I swam toward him I realized he had shot a white sea bass and it was tangled 60 feet below in the kelp," Ayus reported. He dove down to the cut the bass free, in an effort to aid his inexperienced friend.

"Kelp has little fish swimming around. They moved away, so I looked and saw the nose of a shark open up its gums and teeth," Ayus said.

The predator was dark gray with a white belly, Ayus said. She was scratched many times on her nose and one gill was torn a little bit, he said.

"The worst part was seeing the gums and teeth coming out," Ayus said.

Those teeth took the men's catch — the sea bass — and then turned right, shoving Ayus with her fin.

"It feels like sandpaper. It feels like a push," Ayus said.

Collier said the moment the shark made physical contact with Ayus, the encounter officially became an attack.

"She went poof [disappeared] and left me there. She circled me and then disappeared," Ayus said. "I thought, 'This is it, I felt like a guppy.'"

Ayus swam toward the shore, he said, noting that the shore's safety was about 100 yards away so he dove down to look one last time.

"I dove, looked around and I didn't see her, so I went as fast as I could," Ayus said.

Ayus reached the shore, where his buddy was waiting, he said. Ayus reported the incident to a local diving website and Collier's shark research website, he said.

According to Collier, the shark was probably a female.

"From early spring, babies are born so females come closer to give birth to their offspring," Collier said.

Collier said he worked with the Office of Naval Research and the Smithsonian. Through Collier's current nonprofit group, he started a shark-tagging program in an effort to research the great white shark's behavior, but the program ran out of funding.

"After they gave birth, the sharks would go to the islands because that's where the pinnipeds were, but now the pinniped population inhabits the coast from the Oregon border to the Mexican border," he said.

In addition, Collier studies and reports shark sightings and sightings of marine mammals with shark bites, he said.

"If you go back 20 years ago, you never had seals at Children's Pool. This affords the great whites to feed without moving away," Collier said. "That's something we have been looking at for a number of years."

Great white sharks feed on marine mammals, including seals, sea lions and dolphins, Collier said. The marine mammal and pinniped population has increased along the California and Oregon coast, Collier said.

"A number of seals and sea lions were reported to us washing ashore with a bite in them. Now it's happening all year," Collier said. "Several were reported prior to Dr. Martin and after that."

Dr. David Martin was the swimmer killed by a great white shark a year ago this month off Solana Beach.

Collier said a shark-bitten dolphin washed ashore at Cardiff last week and surfers reported sharks around that area. At this time of year, historically, reports escalate, he said. For information, visit www.sharkresearchcommittee.com. ■

Community forums to address school cuts

San Diego Unified School District board member John de Beck plans to meet with Bird Rock, Point Loma and Mission Bay cluster schools to discuss recent school budget cuts.

De Beck plans two meetings for the beach community schools he represents.

The Point Loma Cluster Schools (PLCS) Foundation will host a town hall meeting Wednesday, April 22 from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the Correia Middle School Auditorium, 4302 Valeta St.

"This is so parents can hear directly from de Beck and have an open dialogue about the budget cuts and what they mean for our schools," PLCS foundation president Polly Traylor said.

The foundation had originally scheduled the meeting for earlier this month but it was postponed due to scheduling conflicts, Traylor said.

Coming together through service
for one another

By MAXINE LANCELOT

I have lived on the same street, in the same house since I was born 16 years ago. I have seen neighbors come and go, and I have grown attached to the ones who finally decided to stay. I have grown used to the constant singing of the musical family next door and the basketball rhythmically pounding the driveway of the family across the street. I have grown used to the summer gatherings at Standley Park where the Community Association President won't remember anyone's name, but she will offer everyone an extra newsletter. I have grown used to the neighborhood alcoholic, who leaves an empty Cutty Sark bottle on my house's front lawn every fifth Tuesday, and I have even grown used to the incessant hum of military jets, rumbling to and from Miramar Marine Corps Air Station.

My community is made up of all these little regularities though they may seem singular to those who do not experience them as often as my neighbors and I. It is when these regularities are interrupted, however, that the true meaning of community reveals itself. On Dec. 8 of last year, a fighter jet on its way back to the air station ran out of fuel and crashed into a pair of houses two streets up from where I live. Thankfully, the pilot managed to eject himself from the plane; he landed, incidentally, three houses down from my home. Four inhabitants of Huggins Road, however, were not so fortunate. Two babies, their mother, and their grandmother were all killed.

I cannot remember ever having encountered the Yoon family, but the death of all but one of its members brought to light the value of community. Two nights after the disastrous crash, people from all over my neighborhood formed a kind of procession in front of the remains of the Yoon house. A half-melted plastic tricycle and charred teddy bear formed an altar around which dozens of candles were left burning. Mrs. Kay, the Association President, organized a drive to collect gift cards for Mr. Yoon and the retired couple whose house was also destroyed. Then, she even dedicated the next newsletter to the victims of the crash. Our community formed a shield around Mr. Yoon, trying to answer reporters' questions in his place.

Even after the initial anger and fear stemming from an it-could-have-been-me mentality wore off, we all emerged with a new sense of togetherness. A protectiveness of Mr. Yoon and all of those directly affected by this fundamental tragedy moved strangers to join together and help, both financially and emotionally. A responsibility to help those in a time of great need gave my family and neighbors an opportunity to realize how giving can cause a novel comprehension of what it is to be part of a community.

Giving without regard to payment is what marks a truly meaningful action. In the days following the plane crash, many of us learned what it means to be selfless. When high-school students hear the words "community service," many of us tend to think immediately of requirements and how we try to get the maximum credit with the minimum effort. Community service, however, does not have to be beach cleanup or ladling out soup. Service should not be performed in order to graduate — it should be performed because it is worth the effort to help a fellow human being. Sympathy is part of what makes us human. Deciding to act upon that feeling is what makes a good person. ■

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Pinnipeds and humans
don't mix on beach

On Tuesday, March 31, 2009, a rope was placed on the La Jolla Cove beach as a barrier to keep people away from a juvenile Northern elephant seal which had hauled out on the beach earlier in the day. I applaud the actions of the City of San Diego to keep people away from this elephant seal by placing the rope barrier on the beach.

It is time to realize that pinniped populations are increasing off the coast of San Diego and the presence of pinnipeds on La Jolla pocket beaches will only increase. Pacific harbor seals, California sea lions and Northern elephant seals are now using the Children's Pool, South Casa Beach and the La Jolla Cove. It is only a matter of time before these La Jolla pocket beaches will have to be closed to humans because of the presence of these marine mammals.

Pinnipeds and humans cannot use the same beaches, it is just not possible. Enforcement of the Marine Mammal Protection Act means closing these beaches to humans because there is too much interference by humans into the daily behavior patterns of pinnipeds using the beaches. Anyway, people do not want to use beaches where pinnipeds are present because they are not clean like public beaches should be.

It is time to realize that marine mammals off southern California are on the rebound and they are reclaiming some of their original territory. It is also time to remove the Children's Pool seawall so harbor seals can use their historic seal rock area instead of having to use the beach at Children's Pool and the South Casa Beach on the other side of the seawall.

Robert Johnson
San DiegoAnswer to easing jet noise is in quieter planes

Re "Airport Authority seeks to reduce noise" (Village News, April 2, page 3):

The San Diego County Regional Airport Authority should start thinking outside the box. They have been soundproofing one house at a time for years now at an amazing cost.

This is not even a good stop-gap measure, because it means one must close oneself in the house when we have this wonderful weather outside. One cannot sit on one's deck or patio when this happens, or even walk to the beach, the store or library.

The answer is to quiet the planes. Then everyone everywhere would benefit. Some of you do not think it possible to have quieter planes. The newer planes are quieter; the noisiest ones should not be allowed.

My family has lived in Ocean Beach on land subdivided in 1887, before man could fly. They moved here in the early 1920s before jets, before Lindbergh Field. I was born in 1938 and well remember the time before jets.

I think it is time that the Airport Authority represents the people of San Diego and sets noise limits. They should charge any carrier that exceeds the set limits with significant enough fees to compensate those of us who are held prisoners in our homes or caught outside with our fingers in our ears.

The answer is quieter planes.

OBITUARY

Barbara Dawson, 92;
educator, historian,
tennis champion

Barbara Dawson, longtime resident of La Jolla, passed away peacefully on April 6 of complications from Alzheimer's disease. She was a native of London, England and immigrated to La Jolla in 1920 with her parents. She graduated from La Jolla High School in 1934, and then attended San Diego State College where she earned a bachelor's degree in 1938. After graduation she received a fellowship to Claremont Graduate College. She earned a master's degree in school administration from San Diego State College in 1954.

She was a teacher in the San Diego Unified School District for a few years before ultimately becoming a school principal at Carver, Central, Cleveland and Jackson elementary schools.

Active in the community after her retirement, she was one of the founders and the first president of the La Jolla Historical Society. For 19 years she also served as a member of the Education Committee of the San Diego Zoological Society and helped raise funds for the Wild Animal Park. She volunteered for the Old Globe Theatre, served as a member of The Bishop's School Board of Visitors and was on the Bishop School's Headmaster's Advisory Council from 1985 to 1987. In 1992, Barbara was selected as one of the San Diego Woman Club's Women of Achievement in the area of sports. Lastly, she and Patricia Daly-Lipe co-authored a book, "La Jolla, A Celebration of

Its Past," which was published in 2002 after being serialized in the Village News.

Her number-one passion in life was playing tennis, which she did on an almost daily basis at the homes of her many friends and as a member of a tennis league until she was 87. In the late 1940s and early '50s, Barbara was the San Diego City and County Women's Singles Champion. Then in 1951 she and Maureen Connolly teamed up and won the San Diego City and County women's doubles championship. Barbara has been ranked nationally as a senior singles and doubles tennis player. When she was not playing tennis, she loved golf, traveling around the world, playing bridge, knitting, sewing and photography.

She is survived by her three children, Diane Dawson, Douglas Dawson and Joanne Dawson; her sister, Phyllis Reinen; four grandchildren and ten great grandchil-

A small family service is planned. A celebration of life will be held Tuesday, April 28 from 1 to 3 p.m. at the La Jolla Historical Society's Wisteria Cottage, 780 Prospect St. In lieu of flowers, please send contributions to the La Jolla Historical Society, 7846 Eads Ave., La Jolla, CA 92037; to St. Paul's Retirement Homes Foundations, 328 Maple St., San Diego, CA 92103; or to San Diego Hospice, 4311 Third Ave., San Diego, CA 92103. ■ de Beck will also attend a town meeting Monday, April 27 at Bird Rock Elementary School, 5371 La Jolla Hermosa Ave., at 5:30 p.m.

"I strongly encourage you to attend this local opportunity and let board members know our opposition to a part-time principal," FOBPE president Dawna Deatrick said in a statement.

Parents, administrators and students held a rally at a recent school board meeting in opposition to several cuts. Board trustees voted then to end busing to magnet schools and to consolidate one principal for every two schools that have fewer than 400 students.

Interfaith service will honor Ellen B. Scripps

The Massachusetts National Memorial Committee is holding an interfaith service at St. James by-the-Sea at 743 Prospect St. to honor the memory of Miss Ellen Browning Scripps on Patriot's Day, Monday, April 20 at 11 a.m.

The Massachusetts Committee will be reading a formal Memorial Declaration to raise national awareness of the significant contributions that Scripps made to the local community and American society as a whole through her philanthropic work.

A bagpiper brigade will welcome local citizens attending.

Speakers will include John Bolthouse, executive director of the La Jolla Historical Society; Dr. Ramona Trevino, CEO and principal of the prestigious Austin Charter School; and Capt. Ed Sullivan, Massachusetts Field Representative, National World War II Memorial Committee.

"The evaluation of environmental issue areas in this EIR concludes that the proposed pro-

Rose Creek Cottage

A lasting treasure of Pacific Beach, the Rose Creek Cottage has been hosting weddings and events for nearly 90 years. Built in the 1920s as a dining room addition to Fredrick Tudor Scripps' estate house. Now the Catamaran Hotel, in 1955, the property was sold to Vernon Taylor and Clinton McKinnon for a hotel. The old home was razed in 1959. The dining room was spared and became the Catamaran Wedding Chapel. Three decades later, the chapel stood in the way of proposed expansion. An agreement was secured with the Navy to lease a patch of land at the bottom of Garnet near Rose Creek, where it sits today. The "Cottage" is beginning to host third generation weddings for locals and, thanks to the Internet, is planning events for people from all over the world. Mark & Maggie Johnston of Wedding & Event Designers manage the Rose Creek Cottage for the Pacific Beach Town Council. They help people arrange for everything they will need for an elegant yet affordable event. The Cottage can accommodate up to 75 guests. Mark & Maggie can arrange for full service catering, cake, flowers, photography, limo, music, officiant...everything but the groom!

Strings attached: Old Globe's 'Opus' probes harmony of all types

By CHARLENE BALDRIDGE | VILLAGE NEWS

Michael Hollinger's "Opus" is as thrilling, well constructed and turbulent as any Beethoven string quartet. It plays through April 26 at the Old Globe's temporary arena stage at James S. Copley Auditorium in Balboa Park.

Playing in a string quartet, says fictional first violinist Elliot, should be "a discourse among four reasonable people." The reality is quite different. Because it is written out, with tempo and dynamics usually indicated as well, classical music is controlled; human behavior is not.

Hollinger ought to know. He trained at Oberlin College as a violinist, and then switched to play writing. "Opus" presents a gripping, intriguing character study of five musicians, each sensitive and, in varying degrees, volatile.

String quartets, especially younger, American quartets, are less autocratic than before; even though some still believe the first violinist is the boss. First violinist Elliot (an extraordinarily sensitive yet restrained performance by Jim Abele, who played the second husband in the Globe's "The Pleasure of His Company") may yearn to command, but in truth the Lazara Quartet is run democratically; a majority, preferably unanimous, decides.

Having met as students at Philadelphia's Curtis Institute of Music, the fictional quartet is named for an 18th-century string-instrument maker. As part of their community property they possess two Lazara instruments, a violin and a viola. Second violinist Alan (Jeffrey M. Bender) and cellist Carl (Corey Brill, also UCSD, MFA) are voices of reason, and yet, they express strong opinions as well, ultimately deciding who stays and who goes. In the case of violist Dorian, they agree with Elliot to oust Dorian, the violist.

With his tousled hair and romantic good looks, Dorian (Mark H. Dodd) is a perfectionist and the most emotional of the quartet. The audience learns in later flashbacks that he disrupted the final session in Lazara's complete recordings of the Beethoven string quartets. After being released from his contract, Dorian disappeared, off his mood-swing meds, his longtime, verboten affair with Elliot ended.

When the play begins, the remaining three are auditioning for a new violist. A White House command performance looms, so the position needs immediate filling. They choose a young woman named Grace (excellent Katie Sigismund, a UCSD MFA graduate), who hesitates and not because she knows the quartet's inner strife.

She has an audition the following week for first chair viola in the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra. The others berate her, asking, "You'd trade playing in an orchestra for this?" She changes her mind.

In live performance, quartet playing is most exciting for players and audience alike. One never knows when a string will break. According to Emerson Quartet cellist David Finckel (in an archived 1999 interview), the audience doesn't pay to see perfection. "You want to be spontaneous," Finckel said. "The concert is the place to take chances. It should be unpredictable, alive and fresh."

The same can be said for Hollinger's play, which unfolds, in director Kyle Donnelly's sure hands, like a piece of chamber music, rife with movement, intertwining and overlapping dialogue, solo and duet sections. Although the actors do not play their instruments, they do a believable job of miming, albeit without hand vibrato, which kills the illusion for regular concertgoers. Because the players switch places around the playing space and the placement of speakers is phonically stationary, it's sometimes unclear who's on first (pun intended).

Lindsay Jones' otherwise unerring sound design uses music of Bach, Beethoven, Pachelbel, Bartok and even the Beach Boys. Kate Edmunds' scenic design is composed largely of music stands. Denitsa D. Bliznakova's costumes are attractive, and York Kennedy's lighting design is immaculate.

The denouement, which takes place immediately after the White House performance, is thrilling, turbulent, shocking and bravely unresolved. It puts one in mind of the true and ugly breakup of the Audubon String Quartet, which resulted in a long court battle and altered many lives.

Thanks to extraordinary direction and casting of magnificent actors, there are no dull movements in "Opus," which fairly flies along in one allegro vivace act. It's a brilliant piece of theatre, the best work yet seen in the Globe's temporary arena space.

"Opus" continues at 7 p.m. Sundays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays; 8 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays; and 2 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays through April 26 at the Old Globe arena space, James S. Copley Auditorium, San Diego Museum of Art, Balboa Park. For tickets ($29-$59), visit www.theoldglobe.org or call (619) 23-GLOBE. ■

Triangulating tastiness

Sushi rocks! So it seemed at the 15th annual Taste of the Triangle, held this year inside and outside at the Hilton Torrey Pines. When the reception began, there were tidbits arrayed around the ballroom walls, donated, like all the offerings, by local purveyors. One lonely tray of sushi sitting on a large table was wiped out almost immediately before most folks had even arrived. Fortunately for the hungry hordes there were other, refilled samplings available to munch while listening to the music of the Standley Middle School string quartet and the Classic jazz trio and perusing items in the silent auction. There was time to see a demonstration of the school laptops, underwritten by Las Patronas and matched by EdUCate. Among the auction items available was one of those personal chef dinners by Paul McCabe of the hot, new Kitchen 1540; another was an extravagant kitchen remodel valued at $50,000. On the terrace outside were diverse offerings like tea tastings from Infusions of Tea, pasta from Barolo, Leucadia and Lorna's and paté from French Gourmet, plus scallops from Kitchen 1540, blue crab salad from Chef Bernard's Marine Room and, of course, Torreyana Grill, under the auspices of its executive sous chef because, it turned out, Chef Larry had left just days earlier.

Lacrosse teams net strong play

By DAVE THOMAS | VILLAGE NEWS

With the local scholastic lacrosse team off and running, several teams are battling for winning records early in the season.

On the girls side, La Jolla High came into action this week with a record of 2-4 for head coach Jenn Tapscott.

Key players to date have included Sarah Shigley (senior attacker), Cami Felt (junior midfielder) and Margaret Nettleton (senior midfielder).

"Cami, a newly transitioned midfielder, has come up big in the middle of the field, while Sarah continues to be a strong threat when in the 8 and around the crease," Tapscott remarked. "Margaret's speed has allowed her to dominate ground balls and has also caused many turnovers in the midfield. She is a dynamic player who is seen as a threat on both ends of the field. It is important to note Mackenzie Gloven — who unfortunately is out of commission due to a knee injury — however, had a very strong first three games."

According to Tapscott, the Lady Vikings have proven they can overcome adversity and have strengthened their ability to play as a team, relying on each other in difficult situations.

"This year we have many threats on attack which should be difficult for other teams to stop," Tapscott remarked. "Our team defense continues to be strong, and we are excited for the rematches we will see towards the end of the season against the teams we came up short against."

At La Jolla Country Day (LJCD) School, the Lady Torreys dropped a 14-1 decision to The Bishop's School in recent action.

The LJCD coaching staff noted that despite the score, goalie Stephanie Rothenburg made the Lady Knights fight for every one of their goals.

"Stephanie had 23 saves yesterday — a remarkable performance for which we were all grateful," LJCD assistant coach Karen Elitzky noted. "Our other force on defense was Christina Planas de Miguel, who gets better every day, and it is difficult to believe she picked up a lacrosse stick for the first time this spring. She fought hard for every ground ball and won four of the five we had all game. She also made two beautiful interceptions near our goal. Jodi Morris worked hard on defense, too, and her speed, leadership and diligence are consistent assets to the team."

LJCD had five shots total, one by Roya Bagheri, three by Liv Hipkins and one by Veronica Lee, who converted on a penalty shot in the first half.

In other recent action, LJCD posted an 8-3 win over Great Oaks High to avenge an earlier season defeat.

Leading the offense were Bagheri with two goals and one interception, Hipkins with three goals and two assists and Lee with three goals and one assist.

According to Elitzky, Brianna Alexander also played her best game to date, making strong midfield transitions and adding one assist to the tally.

"Our defense reinvented itself, stepping up and stifling the Great Oaks offense, who shot at will against us in the first game," Elitzky said. "Jodi Morris had the charge of guarding their top player — who scored nine goals on us last game — and she did it magnificently. Jodi held her to three goals, but it must be noted that of the three, one was a penalty shot and another occurred when Great Oaks was a (wo)man up."

Rothenburg made four key saves in goal for the Lady Torreys.

On the boys side, Bishop's posted a pair of wins in recent action, topping Torrey Pines 7-6 (Mike P. Jensen three goals, Trevor Gudim two goals, Zach Negroni three assists) and Santa Fe Christian 13-8 (Mike D. Jensen three goals, two assists; Gudim three goals, one assist; Kyle Jester two goals, one assist; Robby Stiefler one goal, two assists).

Elsewhere, La Jolla Country Day School came into this week with a record of 5-3.

Jason McCallum and Hunter Higgins had three goals each versus Eastlake on Wednesday in a 7-6 victory.

— Editor's note: La Jolla High did not respond with information on its boys team. ■

Sluggers score victories in annual Lions Tournament

By DAVE THOMAS | VILLAGE NEWS

Baseball teams from both La Jolla High and The Bishop's School secured wins last week in the annual Lions Tournament.

La Jolla High (7-5) captured a pair of wins as it opened up play with a 12-2 victory over Lowell High (San Francisco). Kyle Zimmer pitched four hitless innings in his first high school pitching performance to earn the win.

The La Jolla offense exploded for 17 hits, including seven doubles. Victor Rangel led the way, going 3-for-4 with three doubles. Dustin Ouellette also had three hits, two RBIs and a double.

La Jolla fought back to earn an 8-5 win over West Hills in the second game of the tournament.

Patrick Christensen put his name in the record books by earning his 20th career victory, breaking Jacob Grosz's school record of 19. Zimmer had two triples and two RBIs, while Ouellette and Jake Linsky each drove in two runs as well.

La Jolla fell to Otay Ranch 10-0 in the final game of the tournament.

SIO scholar demonstrates reef work swimmingly

By STEPHANIE A. ALDERETTE | VILLAGE NEWS

Visually stunning might be the words to describe what student Loren McClenachan, a graduate student at Scripps Institution of Oceanography, 2300 Expedition Way, achieved after publishing her study called "Historical Photographs Expose Decline in Florida's Fish Reef."

"The research was part of my Ph.D. thesis on long-term ecological change in the Caribbean," McClenachan said. "This work was done about the Florida Keys because historical documents have been well-maintained in state and local archives, but other research has shown that declines in large fish populations have occurred throughout the region and around the world."

The busy scholar did her research from 2006 to 2008. Her intensive study was published in an online paper in January and will also be published in an upcoming issue of the journal called Conservation Biology.

"I used photos of trophy fish that were displayed on the Key West docks to show declines in the size of the largest fish caught from the 1950s to today," she said. "The largest fish caught each day by passengers on charter boats are typically hung on a display board so that the customers can pose for photographs and the fishing company can advertise for future trips."

During her travels, the student viewed 1,275 photographs and discovered some amazing facts, such as an 88 percent decline in the estimated weight of large predatory fish. Her work includes a companion paper that will be published in the Endangered Species Research journal.

"I found that the largest trophy fish that were common in the 1950s were rare by the 1980s, and today, the average length of trophy fish is half what it used to be," McClenachan said. "This research gives a real-life example of 'shifting baselines syndrome,' where people accept less and less from the sea from generation to generation, and as a society, we begin to forget how things used to be in a more natural state."

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's (NOAA) Preserve America Initiative, NOAA Office of National Marine Sanctuaries, NOAA Coral Reef Conservation Program and many other organizations provided funding for the extensive study.

McClenachan, a graduate student in marine biology at SIO, has also done research on the globally endangered goliath grouper fish. Her work has been called historical marine ecology, a field that can help describe the structure of ecosystems which existed in the past and also help establish goals for restoring large predators.

Entertainers take it to the streets at Busker Festival

By MARTIN JONES WESTLIN & KEVIN McKAY | VILLAGE NEWS

Two buskers from Ocean Beach will fight to regain their street-performance grand-prize crown this weekend as the Seaport Village Spring Busker Festival returns bigger and better than previous years.

Megan Fontaine and Derrick Gilday, who make up the busker team of Mango and Dango, claimed the crown during the inaugural event in 2007. After taking a few years off from traditional busking to create their circus "Zirk Ubu," Mango and Dango will once again enter the April 18-19 fray against professional street performers from as far away as New York.

The duo has reportedly been traveling across Southeast Asia for the last three months to sharpen their skills and earn extra cash while perfecting a Southeast Asia-themed act that will debut this weekend.

It's only three years old this year, a flea on a continuum the size of a dog (the Europeans, after all, have been at it for centuries). But the busker festival has gained such a reputation for its grass-roots entertainment value that the event's brass had no choice but to add a nightly performance slate this time.

Buskers After Dark, which will feature a DJ guest appearance, is designed to complement the daytime entries, featuring an array of street-performing sword-swallowers, stilt-walkers, jugglers, acrobats, comedians and musicians. And again this year, the

Fishing devotees hooked on Day at the Docks

By ANTHONY GENTILE | VILLAGE NEWS

Fishing enthusiasts and fun-seekers who simply want to spend a day bayside can celebrate the start of the fishing season in style Sunday, April 19 when Day at the Docks returns for its 30th year. The event will be held at San Diego Sportfishing Landings in Point Loma from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"It's the only show of its kind on the West Coast," said Day at the Docks press coordinator Gary Graham.

There is no cost for the event, which features a wide variety of fishing activities, food and entertainment. Graham said what makes Day at the Docks unique is that it all takes place in one day.

"Most of the events are multi-day events. This happens on one day," Graham said. "The exhibitors you talk to say that it is the best single-day event (around)."

Day at the Docks will be marking its third decade Sunday, and Graham said he expects about 25,000 participants.

"It's right on the waterfront, at the home of where sportfishing was born in Southern California," Graham said.

Anglers can be schooled during Day at the Docks, with seminars geared for all levels of fishermen. Lecture topics range from "10 Percent of the Anglers Catch 90 Percent of the Fish" to "Fishing Lines and Secure Knots" to "Trolling With Rapala Jigs for Yellowtail and Tuna."

Those in attendance will also have the opportunity to pick the brains of the crews of the San Diego sportfishing fleet, whose boats will be open to the public during the event. Graham said most of the captains of the 70 boats moored there will be on their vessels during the open house.

"If you're a beginning angler or an expert, it's an opportunity for you to talk to the guys that can make you better than you are right now," Graham said. "You can talk to the guys that do it every day for a living and do it better than most. These are the guys that started this business."

A number of tackle vendors will be demonstrating and selling their products at Day at the Docks. Graham said the event allows smaller retailers to show off their unique products.

"Because of the low cost, we get the entrepreneurs that have something to offer to the sportfishing community," Graham said.

For the competitors, there will be a casting contest at the pier north of H&M Landing at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m., and a knot-tying contest throughout the day at the Izorline booth with a tie-off at 3:30 p.m. Raffle tickets will also be sold for raffles held on the main stage.

A trio of musical acts will provide live music on the main stage as well. Classic rock 'n' roll band Pound Dog will start off the day at 9 a.m., followed by the Bayou Brothers at 12:30 p.m. and fisherman musicians Three Legged Dog at 3:15 p.m.

For those who aren't the biggest fans of fishing, cooking seminars will be held all day at the Catch, Prep & Cook Center.

There, experts will show people how to prepare sushi and ahi and even get a taste of the famous fish tacos by Shauna Barton of the South Bay Lady Anglers at 3:30 p.m.

"There's almost 200 exhibitors and they're showing not just fishing stuff," Graham said.

For $2, attendees can also take a boat ride around San Diego Bay from Point Loma and H&M Landing.

Even the littlest anglers will not leave Day at the Docks empty-handed. For kids, there will be an art area and an area

Hollywood: a walk on The Dark Side

By JAMES COLT HARRISON | VILLAGE NEWS

Hollywood is the quintessential fantasy town. It runs on tinsel, glitter, smoke and mirrors and... scandals. There is nothing more titillating than a juicy scandal, especially if it involves a movie star. Politicians have their scandals too, but they usually involve only bedroom escapades with hat-check girls. But with movie stars we are intrigued by many of their bizarre deaths.

Now available on DVD are two intriguing films about some of the more notorious events of the past few decades. Little Dizzy Home Video (now there's a company name for you!) is presenting two films based on the same idea. The first one is "Hollywood: The Dark Side: Death & Scandal" and the second one is "Hollywood: The Dark Side: Frank Sinatra and Marilyn Monroe." Believe it or not, pabulum singer/actor Pat Boone of the white buck shoes is one of the producers.

The film company has dredged up old, murky scenes of some of the stars at their best and worst. Some of the scenes look like mimeograph copies of an old 1950s kinescope shown on television. Production quality is not so swift with these DVDs but there are some nicely shot color scenes interspersed with the black and white cutting-room floor sequences. But if you love movies and stars as much as I do, you will overlook the blurry quality of some of the old film.

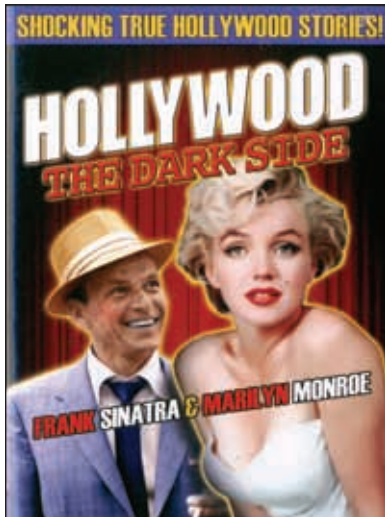

In "Death & Scandal," a brief look is taken at many major stars whose lives ended in sudden and untimely deaths. Gorgeous Natalie Wood drowned off Catalina in a very famous story about her fear of water. Vacationing with her then-husband Robert Wagner, Natalie slipped off a small dingy on their yacht and ended up on the beach. A devastated Wagner was inconsolable because they had been so much in love and were Hollywood's Golden Couple since their teens.

James Dean is included because he was already on his way to becoming a teen idol when his Porsche crashed on a lonely highway and killed him instantly. Although he only appeared in three top Warner Bros. films, he was mourned and turned into an icon whose image has symbolized rebellious youth. Ironically, his film "Rebel Without a Cause" included two other stars who also had mysterious deaths — the aforementioned Wood and Sal Mineo, who was stabbed to death outside his apartment building in Hollywood for no apparent reason. His killer was found later in jail on another charge, but he admitted he had killed Mineo.

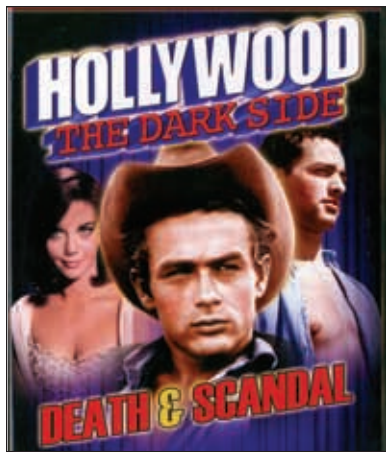

Other stars chronicled in "The Dark Side" are George Reeves (TV's "Superman"), Elvis, Jimi Hendrix, Dorothy Stratton, John Lennon, Buddy Holly, TV's Bob Crane and many, many more. The film is a good time-filler and evokes many memories.

The other DVD in this series is "Hollywood: The Dark Side: Frank Sinatra and Marilyn Monroe." With only two subjects to be given the biographical treatment, more time can be spent on each of the individual stories.

Sinatra was the original "bobby-soxer," starting a frantic trend that exists to this day with teen musical favorites. Originally planted in Sinatra's audience by his publicists, screaming girls would faint and carry on like maniacs. Soon, the publicists did not have to pay girls to go crazy. Frankie became a star even though he only weighed about 80 pounds soaking wet. He gained weight in later years, causing his wife Ava Gardner to quip, "Frank weighs 125 pounds. He's 25 pounds of muscle and 100 pounds of (male anatomy)!" Which could explain some of his appeal with the ladies.

Marilyn is more popular now 50 years after her death than when she was alive. Although I can personally attest to the fact, having met her on the set of "Some Like It Hot," she created a sensation every day when she came out on the sand at Coronado beach for her scenes. Thousands of fans followed her around like lemmings. Apparently Sinatra also followed her around and managed to canoodle with her secretly throughout the years. Marilyn, of course, was crazy about John F. Kennedy and was tight with his brother-in-law, film actor Peter Lawford. In fact, Lawford was one of the last people to speak to Marilyn on the phone the night she died. Was it murder or accidental overdose? I think it was both. I never believed she killed herself. Although she had recently been fired by 20th Century Fox on "Something's Got to Give," the studio was renegotiating her contract and she had several good films lined up. She had recently bought a new house and was buying Spanish-style furniture to complement the architecture. She was not depressed; she was happy. Take her own life at 36? I don't think so.

Aaron Steigerwalt had three hits, while Zimmer and Jake Linsky each had two hits in a losing effort.

"It was a very successful week for us," La Jolla High head coach Gary Frank commented. "Unfortunately, we just ran out of pitching on the third day. We have improved a lot over the past month; I'm excited to start Western League action and see how we stack up."

Meantime, The Bishop's School also won two of three games in the tournament.

Bishop's opened play with a 14-

6 win over Imperial, as Kyle Gantz picked up his third victory of the season. Cade Sears went 3-for-4 with three runs scored and a double, while Sam Brier also had three hits and added two doubles and three RBIs.

In an 8-4 loss to Clairemont, Sears had one homer and two RBIs, while Demian Tschirn had three hits, two runs scored, a homer and an RBI.

Bishop's wrapped up play with a 14-4 victory over Calvary Christian, as Peter Fraga pitched a complete game and recorded five strikeouts.

Q. What is a REIT?

A. A real estate investment trust (REIT) is a company that invests its stockholders' money in real estate, often purchasing and operating a diversified portfolio of commercial properties. The properties owned by the REIT should create rental income that may be passed to investors as distributions. While past performance is not a guarantee of future results, real estate has historically posted positive long term returns. REITs are designed to deliver income to investors in the form of dividends as well as potential growth through the appreciation of the properties.

There are two basic types of REITs:

Traded REITs are bought and sold just like traditional stocks and are subject to the same sort of market fluctuations as exchange traded stocks. Traded REITs can often trade at significant premiums or discounts to the value of the underlying real estate portfolio.

Non-Traded REITs are not publically traded and provide an investment that is more closely tied to the actual performance of the underlying portfolio. Though lacking immediate liquidity, non-traded REITs historically have lower pricing volatility over time as compared to the traded REITs.

Direct real estate can be an investment asset that does not typically follow the exact same fluctuation patterns as stocks and non-traded REITs can allow individual investors access to this asset class. Given the uncertainty of the stock market, some added diversification in a real estate investment is worthy of consideration. As with any investment, you should examine the suitability, risks, fees and expenses of each offering and consult your tax professional as to any tax effects each type of REIT may have. As always, please let us know if we can be of assistance in helping you better plan your financial future.

LEGAL ADS 700

Termination #08-7-01208-1 filed December 19, 2008 (natural mother, Michelle Lorraine Crawford).

NOTICE
You are notified that a petition has been filed in this matter requesting that your parental rights to the above-named child be terminated. You have important legal rights, as described below, and you must take steps to protect your interests. This petition could result in permanent loss of your parental rights.

A preliminary hearing concerning the petition will be held at 9:00 a.m. on the 26th day of May, 2009, before the court at the Denny Juvenile Justice Center, 2801 10th St., Everett, Washington, in the department which is handling Dependency matters. The purpose of the hearing is to determine whether parties should be found in default and an order of termination entered; to appoint attorneys, if necessary; to determine facts not in dispute; and to hear pre-trial motions.

A fact finding hearing (trial) will be held at 9:00 a.m. on the 18th of June, 2009, at the Denny Juvenile Justice Center, 2801 10th St., Everett Washington, in the department which is handling Dependency matters.

SUMMONS
YOU ARE SUMMONED TO APPEAR at both of said hearings regarding your child. If you fail to appear at the first (preliminary) hearing, the court may take evidence against you, make findings of fact, order that your parental rights be terminated without further notice to you, and cancel the second (fact finding) hearing.

ADVICE OF RIGHTS
1. You have the right to a fact finding hearing before a judge, unless you are found in default at the preliminary hearing.
2. You have the right to have a lawyer represent you at the hearings. A lawyer can look at the files in your case, talk to the Department of Social and Health Services and other agencies, tell you about the law, help you understand your rights, and help you at hearings. If you cannot afford a lawyer, the court will appoint one to represent you. To get a court-appointed lawyer you must contact the Denny Juvenile Court at (425) 388-7953.
3. At the fact finding hearing you have the right to speak on your own behalf, to introduce evidence, to examine witnesses, and to receive a decision based solely on the evidence presented to the judge.
You should be present at the hearing.
You may call the Department of Social and Health Services for more information about your child. The telephone number is (425) 388-7970
