Police officer briefs LJ Town Council about sex offenders

By ADRIANE TILLMAN | VILLAGE NEWS

Twelve registered sex offenders live in the 92037 ZIP Code. One lives in La Jolla Shores. Eleven live in the Golden Triangle area.

Lt. Rick O'Hanlon, who heads the sex crimes and child abuse unit for the San Diego Police Department, said that if residents want to see a sex offender, they can look close to home.

"They come from every socio-economic background, ethnicity, age and occupation," O'Hanlon said. "Some are married with kids."

Statistics show that 90 percent of sex offenders had some sort of relationship with their victims, O'Hanlon said. It's more often a father, uncle or teacher who has molested a child than a stranger in a park.

O'Hanlon briefed the La Jolla Town Council about sex offenders at the April 8 meeting.

There are 1,393 registered sex offenders in the city of San Diego. Only one of them is classified as a sexually violent predator who is living downtown, according to O'Hanlon.

A map of sex offenders living in the area can be seen at www.meganslaw.ca.gov. A name, photo, address and a description of the offense can be seen for some of the sex offenders. The public can search the map by name, address, ZIP Code, parks and schools.

O'Hanlon's one gripe with the website is that it doesn't list the date of the offense.

"Some of them convicted crimes 20, 30, 40 and even 60 years ago," O'Hanlon said.

There are 118,000 registered sex offenders in California, O'Hanlon said. Women comprise 4 percent of them, O'Hanlon said.

Sex offenders released on parole are tracked with GPS devices in San Diego. There are 165 sex offenders in San Diego. Parolees cannot live near a school or park, nor have access to a computer.

After parole, sex offenders can live anywhere and travel anywhere, O'Hanlon said. There are no restrictions. Sex offenders must only register their place of residence each year. It is also illegal for landlords or employers to discriminate against sex offenders for housing or jobs,

Lt. Rick O'Hanlon

O'Hanlon said.

"Part of it is we want to know where they are," O'Hanlon said. "One theory is that if there are too many restrictions, you drive them underground. If they register as transient, we have no idea where they are."

Jessica's Law, which passed in 2006, imposed residential restrictions on sex offenders, but O'Hanlon said there is no enforcement provision attached to the law.

"There's no penalty attached," O'Hanlon said. "Is it a felony? Do I write them a ticket?"

Jessica's Law also enacted tougher penalties for one-time offenders. Convicts who've molested one victim now face 15 years to life in jail.

Parental advice

O'Hanlon's advice for parents is to keep an eye on people interacting with their children.

"You're your best own guardian," O'Hanlon said. "If a little birdie is telling you, 'I don't like this,' you need to ask the hard questions."

O'Hanlon monitors the interactions of his 14-year-old daughter by going through her phone and checking her MySpace page. He has also checked into the parents of her friends.

Learning self-defense tactics and carrying mace on a keychain are also recommended.

NEWSbriefs

Mt. Soledad residents settle lawsuit with city

Mount Soledad residents whose homes were lost and damaged in the 2007 landslide have finally settled their legal fight to force the city to pay restitution. The City Council agreed to pay $297,584 total in compensation to seven homeowners in a unanimous vote on April 13.

As part of the settlement, the city agreed to waive $186,100 in legal fees it incurred after winning a lawsuit against residents last October. Residents have agreed not to appeal the lawsuit.

A Superior Court judge had ruled in favor of the city that it wasn't liable for the damage caused to the homes in the 2007 landslide.

Plaintiffs had pointed to four failures in the city's water line during 2007, but ultimately were unable to link the water breaks to the landslide, according to attorney Michael Hearn, who represented 16 families in the lawsuit against the city.

The city will pay $75,000 to demolish the house at 5695 Soledad Mountain Road and $35,000 to demolish the home at 5734 Desert View Drive as part of the settlement.

Proceedings suspended for murder suspect

Criminal proceedings were suspended April 7 against a University City man suspected of killing his father after the defendant's attorney told a judge he didn't think his client was mentally competent to stand trial.

Nikola Chivatchev, 24, is accused of fatally bludgeoning his father, Alexander Chivatchev, 64, who died Oct. 7 in the La Jolla Crossroads apartment complex at 1:15 a.m. in the 9100 block of Judicial Drive. San Diego Superior Court Judge Jeff Fraser halted the murder trial, which was set to begin April 7, and appointed psychiatrists to evaluate Chivatchev in jail.

If Chivatchev is found to be mentally incompetent for trial, he would be sent to a state mental hospital for treatment. If he regains his mental competency, he would be returned to San Diego for trial.

Chivatchev will be evaluated May 6, and doctors will prepare reports for another judge to rule in a May 24 hearing.

Chivatchev has pleaded not guilty and remains at the downtown central jail on $1 million bail. His mother testified at the preliminary hearing and said her son struck her husband repeatedly with a dumbbell while he was asleep.

KOALA

chisement that all students at UCSD feel simply because our administration is so inept," Gregorian said.

He dismisses the critics who say the tabloid undermines free speech.

"All speech will offend someone eventually," Gregorian said. "So, great, let's just ban all speech. People don't want to live in a world where they have to deal with things that they don't agree with. They simply don't understand the wide variety of things that currently exists that they disagree with."

"I can use myself as an example. I'm an atheist. I walk around my campus, and here's a Christian guy who's talking about the earth being created in seven days. All of my research is predicated on the notion that evolution exists and that we evolved slowly in the development of life. For this [guy] to come out and say that the earth poofed into existence in seven days is an affront — it's an affront to everything I believe and it's insulting."

Gregorian doesn't believe the Christian should be muffled nor should The Koala be banned.

As for using student fees to fund a tabloid that is offensive and hurtful to many students, Gregorian said it's about the principal of the matter.

"Once Associated Students — as an agent of the government — extends a limited public forum, they have no choice but to fund everyone in a viewpoint-neutral manner," Gregorian said. "So it's not that it's important that they fund us. It's that — principally speaking — they must fund everyone equally."

Gregorian laughs at all the media attention he's received in the past few months. Gregorian jokes he's become like a wizard from the effect he has on people.

"It's truly ironic that I have the ability to muster that kind of power," Gregorian said.

GLASS

expressive glass art by the celebrated artist Dale Chihuly, considered to be the greatest living glass artist in the world, will be installed at the Salk for a short period of time, although a few pieces will remain until September.

The exhibition of 12 glass sculptures will be open to the public from April 22 to 27.

This display is made possible through the sponsorship of Joan and Irwin Jacobs, who are admiring fans of Chihuly. The Jacobs thought Chihuly's sculpture would work well in the setting of the institute. Chihuly agreed, stating, "The stark visually powerful architecture of the Salk Institute is just one of those kinds of places where I know my artwork and the architecture would come together just right."

The centerpiece of the exhibit is called "White Tower," a white-to-pink colored 15-foot-high glass structure with a traditional Czech motif resembling a snow-covered Christmas tree or an icy spark from a Tesla coil. "The Sun," another piece, also about 15-feet-tall, looks like a blazing Medusa-haired star. Of it, Chihuly says, "It's mysterious ... like something you have never seen before."

The "Niijima Floats" are glass boats filled with large spheres, each about 40 inches in diameter and weighing approximately 60 pounds, with surfaces richly covered in gold and silver leaf and foil. "Chandeliers" are large hanging sculptures assembled from hundreds of colorful tentacle-like glass components. "Reeds" look like translucent spears that jut out from the ground, and "Macchia" (meaning spotted) are curvy-lipped vases that explore unique color combinations.

The creator of these wondrous works has been described as a "frizzy-haired, eye patched, swashbuckling bundle of kinetic energy."

He is said to be full of life and excitement and considered to be "an unquestioned genius," with eight honorary doctorates to his credit. For many years, Chihuly has been the leader of the avant-garde in the development of glass as fine art.

Chihuly was born in Tacoma, Wash. in 1941. He studied at the University of Wisconsin under Harvey K. Littleton, initiator of the first glass blowing program in the U.S. In 1968, Chihuly was awarded a Fulbright Scholarship to apprentice at the Venini Glass Factory on Murano Island near Venice. Since 1971, he has been based at the Pilchuck Glass School in Washington, which he founded.

Chihuly's work is in more than 200 museum collections worldwide — that, in addition to a solo show at the Louvre in Paris in 1986. His glass installations can be found in such diverse locations as above the canals in Venice, at the Tower of David Museum in Jerusalem, the Belaggio Hotel in Las Vegas, the Ritz Carlton Millennium in Singapore, the Getty Educational Center in Los Angeles and Benaroya Hall in Seattle.

Daily, one-hour guided tours on April 22 to 27 will be available to the public, leaving every 15 minutes and costing $15 per person. Parking will be available in the Salk East Lot directly off Torrey Pines Road North for $5.

On April 25, Chihuly will give a lecture and a book signing with tickets at $50. There will also be a gala with reception, dinner and entertainment. Call the institute for details, (858) 453-4100.

Plein air artists capture the light of the moment in nature

The history of artists painting in gardens has produced some of the masterworks of Western art — not the least of which are the paintings of the great French Impressionist Claude Monet, who planted his beautiful gardens at Giverny to provide subjects for his canvases.

In California, the history of artists painting in natural landscape grew greatly with the plein air movement of the early 20th century which, locally, produced notable artists such as Alfred Mitchell, Maurice Braun, Charles Fries and Carolus Verhaeren.

With its annual tradition of “artists in the gardens,” the La Jolla Historical Society’s Secret Garden Tour continues arts’ time-honored fascination with outdoor light and its visual dance with color and plant and floral subject matter.

This year for the May 15 garden tour, artist Dot Renshaw has assembled a team of 11 painters who will occupy settings in each of the gardens and record their impressions on canvas in oils, watercolors and acrylics. Besides Renshaw, who paints in pastels and oils, the artists are Sandy White, Patricia Jasper, Roger Helgar, Diane Estrada, Jane Fletcher, Faye Richert, Lynn Shulnik and Carol Shamrock (the latter will bring two art students from La Jolla High School — Alexie Tarakjian and Diana Polyak — to share in the work).

During the years,” Renshaw said, “I and my fellow plein air friends have been in glee chasing and capturing the light of the moment in nature we experienced. Details are not essential, just how the light feels on the planes of the scene, temperature and edge quality of the subject in relationship to the atmosphere and depth.”

Renshaw began painting 40 years ago on camping trips in the outdoors with her parents and college friends.

“I was awestruck by the emotional impact of painting outdoors enveloped by nature and capturing the essence that I saw, felt and smelled,” she said.

Specifically, she calls herself an “environmental plein air painter” since her primary concern is to capture disappearing scenes in the California environment due to development and changes in the climate — similar to the original movement of the plein air painters of 100 years ago who began to record the outdoors disappearing because of the Industrial Revolution. The first venturing into the American wilderness formed the Hudson River Valley school of artists. A similar group formed in California between 1890 and 1930. Besides the aforementioned Mitchell, Braun, Fries and Verhaeren, notable artists included Edgar Payne, Guy Rose and Franz Biscoff. Their work remains highly collectible today.

The Secret Garden Tour’s plein air paintings are available for purchase similar to past years. Also, as in previous tours presented by the La Jolla Historical Society, a committee will select one piece of art to be featured on the following year’s poster. # Should our libraries survive or thrive: Outsourcing as an option

VIEW FROM 52

By Sandy Lippe

While March 20 was the official beginning of spring, it is also the official dark day of the dumbing down of San Diego. From the 11th floor of City Hall, the heart of the decision-making, to the outlying communities that are the heartbeat of the city, the main library downtown will be shuttered on Saturdays for the next 18 months, and all branch libraries will be cruelly closed on Mondays for the same period of time. The city budget ax was wielded on the library system again.

When I open the door of a library in La Jolla or University City or anywhere in this country, I am always amazed at what I get as a taxpayer: newspapers and periodicals, books, of course, DVDs, activities for me and my adult children, story time and loving librarians helping my grandchildren become readers and researchers. My University Community library has a meeting room I visit monthly as a member of a community association board. Three schools surround my library. With critical cuts in school librarian talent, I am glad these students in elementary, middle school and high school have our public library.

Having had a love affair with libraries since I was a child, that love endures today. “Librarians are soldiers of truth, universal literacy and privacy,” according to writer Salter Reynolds. Librarians are described as “being watched over by angels.” Friends of the Library at both La Jolla and University Community library assist the “angels” by providing extras: activities, funds for books, movie afternoons and whatever their librarians deem important for the patrons.

I understand the unprecedented economic crisis crushing cities across the country, but I do not understand San Diego closing Central Library on busy Saturdays or closing all branch libraries on Mondays. La Jolla, Serra Mesa, and Point Loma have endowments that will keep their Sunday hours open. University Community library cannot afford the $150,000 three year commitment to have the library open on Sundays at $50,000 a year.

Going to the library is going to a superior social system. Many media leaders, some City Council representatives and mayoral appointees in San Diego see libraries as being replaced by corporate bookstores or the Internet. Obviously, these folks haven’t been to a library to witness the large crowds of diverse backgrounds. With Mayor Sanders’ experience as a policeman, he knows that you pay for social services up front, libraries, park and rec for our youth especially, or you may end up paying for social services on the way out in the form of Juvenile Hall.

Where will the children go on Mondays? Many families don’t own computers and their children depend on libraries for these services. How many latchkey kids look forward to going to the library on Mondays to be in the company of caring adults? Children don’t vote, however. How many staff members, mostly women, will see the cut in hours as watering down literacy and opportunity to learn for all generations. University Community lost its talented head librarian and now its talented youth services librarian must wear two hats, serving children and serving as head librarian. This would not happen at La Jolla’s library.

In two days of November 2008, when University Community library was scheduled to be closed for lack of visitors, over 1,000 people signed a petition to keep U.C.’s library open. In every community in San Diego, libraries give a positive identity to a community. Shutter a library and who would want to move into the neighborhood? Cut the hours and staff, and you take away the opportunity for people to have a safe place to visit, freedom to do a myriad of things: use a computer, find a job, research a topic, talk to a real person, a dying art in our high tech environment, read and learn.

Compare our city libraries to our county libraries. Poway’s library is open 61 hours a week, including 4 hours on Sunday. With the exception of privately-endowed libraries like La Jolla, Serra Mesa and Point Loma, all other city libraries will be open a pathetic 36 hours a week. Imperial Beach’s county library is open 54 hours a week.

Privatizing the staff of libraries has been suggested by some people concerned about the ever increasing deficit in our city by the sea. Libraries are more spiritual in nature, like a house of worship, than a business with the bottom line as the goal, but perhaps we need to look at this option. Riverside County outsourced library services in 1997 by hiring Library Systems and Services, Inc., a Maryland-based operation. All library employees, except the county librarian, janitorial service and landscape maintenance company, work for LSSI. Library hours were increased, staff was added and the library system was divided into three districts. Temecula Public Library is open 63 hours a week. Grace Mellman Community Library is open 41 hours.

If government is to serve the people instead of serving itself, then those who govern should listen to the people. “We want our libraries!” is a rallying cry of fairness, not a selfish mandate. It is a cry from people that this core service is critical to the community, especially when we see our social safety net slipping away. San Diego County continues to keep the doors of its libraries open even though the county has suffered the same economic crisis our city has. The city of San Diego should drape the doors of our libraries in black as a sign of mourning of yet another step backwards in this latest dumbing down of our city.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Don’t pave paradise

La Jolla should not pave paradise and put up a skateboard park. For almost 100 years, the La Jolla Recreation Center has provided a place where the community can recreate. Toddlers and young children use the tot lot while their parents and grandparents watch and socialize. Elementary-aged children use the field everyday with after school programs and sports. Teenagers and adults use the basketball courts and the tennis courts. Seniors use the auditorium for their exercise classes and dances. And La Jollans of all ages come together as a community for Easter Egg hunts, pancake breakfasts, Christmas parades and numerous other events several times each year. And, almost every community group uses the various rooms to hold their meetings.

The idea of a skateboard park at a historical facility across from churches, a pre-school, museums, a women’s club and residences is just a poor choice. It will not only hurt the immediate area, but will also turn all of the streets and sidewalks leading to the Rec Center into virtual skateboard highways, creating noise and antagonism throughout the village of La Jolla.

On April 28, La Jolla Parks & Recreation Inc. (the advisory group for the Rec Center) will vote on the whether or not a skateboard park should be a part of the Rec Center. Even if the proposal passes, it is sure to end up in countless years of litigation just like the seals at Children’s Pool and other controversial ideas. All of this comes just as the Rec Council was ready to begin the public vetting process for the refurbishment of the La Jolla Recreation Center and bring a real positive change that all La Jollans would enjoy for years to come.

Even if the community decides that La Jolla needs a skateboard park, the Rec Center is not the appropriate place. La Jolla should not pave paradise and put up a skateboard park or we will be forced to live with its ill fated effects in perpetuity.

Corrections

• The home known as the “Silver Ship” cost $40,000 to build in 1981 and $5,000 for the carport, not $3,500 as reported in the April 8 issue. The La Jolla Village News regrets the error.

• In the April 8 article titled “LJCPA critical of 3-story Whitney project,” the floor area ratio was incorrectly defined as the footprint of the building. The floor area ratio is a numerical value obtained by dividing the total gross floor area, including all floor levels, by the size of the lot. For example, a 6,000-gross-square-foot building on a 10,000-square-foot lot would have a Floor Area Ratio of 0.60. The footprint of a building refers to the lot coverage, which may include open courtyards and plazas. The article wrongly interpreted architect Phil Merten’s explanation. We apologize for the error.

Torreys take out Vikings with comeback on diamond

By LEE CORNELL | VILLAGE NEWS

In a spirited rivalry game between crosstown baseball teams, La Jolla Country Day came back from an early deficit to beat La Jolla High School 7-4 under the lights at LJCD on April 9.

"It was a good game all-around," La Jolla head coach Gary Frank said. "It was a close game that could have gone either way, but they got that big play when they needed it."

Early-on, things looked good for the Vikings as they took a 2-0 lead in the top of the second inning. La Jolla got on the scoreboard first when Max Strohl knocked in Kevin Usselman with a long single off the centerfield fence. Jake Linsky scored later in the inning on a wild pitch.

The Vikings continued to pour it on in the top of the third when Robby Ortiz scored on a RBI single to left field by Usselman to make it 3-0. They added one more run in the inning when Strohl walked with the bases loaded to push in Usselman from third for a 4-0 Vikings lead.

With the bases loaded and two outs, La Jolla (5-7-1) was poised to put the game out of reach but a sensational diving catch by La Jolla Country Day left-fielder Connor Gerhart kept the game close and ended the inning.

"It was a tough read in the lights," Gerhart said. "But I got a good jump and made the play. Momentum change is huge in games and that proved to be it."

In the bottom of the third, LJCD (12-3) started to chip away at the lead when outfielder Frank Brown tripled to right, scoring shortstop Tommy Edman and making the score 4-1. The Torreys did their most damage an inning later.

LJCD infielder Austin Rooke got it started with an RBI single to make it 4-2 and then Edman knocked in two more with a single to right, tying the score at four. Jason Gilberg followed with a double to left, bringing in Gerhart and Edman and giving the Torreys their first lead, 6-4. Brown finished off LJCD's offensive outburst with an RBI single to make it 7-4.

"They just hit them where we weren't," Frank said. "That's the name of the game and that happens some days."

Gilberg pitched three scoreless innings in relief to earn the win for the Torreys. The southpaw is now 4-1 in six appearances this season.

"They swung at pitches I wanted them to swing at and my fielders did a great job behind me and made some plays," Gilberg said.

Despite the loss, Frank is eager to continue the rivalry and showcase high school baseball in the La Jolla community.

"We're excited for this crosstown rivalry. It was a lot of fun under the lights," he said. "We'll bring them over to our place next year and hopefully we'll have a different outcome."

La Jolla's Jake Linsky slides into home plate to score a run against La Jolla County Day on April 9. But the Vikings could not hold on as the Torreys came back for a solid 7-4 victory. PAUL HANSEN | Village News

La Jolla lacrosse team looks for improvement

By THOMAS CONROY | VILLAGE NEWS

Coming off the best season in the program's history, the La Jolla Vikings boys lacrosse team has had an up-and-down start to their 2010 season. But head coach Matt Rosenberg is optimistic that a change in their fortunes will occur once City League play begins.

High expectations were in store for a team that finished 15-5 last season and lost in the quarterfinal round of the CIF playoffs to Rancho Bernardo. The Vikings returned six starters — including their entire frontline attack — but after five games, they stand at 2-3 and struggling to find any form of consistency on the field.

"We lack depth on the roster, as our starters are logging heavy minutes this season," Rosenberg said. "Our struggles have been trying to replace a couple middies from last season. Casimir Morawski and Kit Livingston were very important to our success, as they were athletic and covered a lot of ground for us."

The hope is that an early season position switch between attacker Matt O'Hara and midfielder Max Ruttman will be the answer to their defensive woes. And each player has fed off of the move.

"The switch has gone well, as each is a good team player," Rosenberg said. "O'Hara is one of the best athletes on the squad, and his maturity level quickly [helped him understand] that the position change was for the betterment of the team. Ruttman makes sound decisions in the offensive zone and he has shown to be a good finisher around the net."

Injuries and a couple of tough early season losses have contributed to the Vikings' problems, and there was no tougher loss than the 9-8 double overtime thriller to Bishop's on March 24. Heading into the fourth quarter, the Vikings held a one-goal lead only to see it slip away. They received a momentary reprieve when senior Michael Soumekh, one of the leading scorers in San Diego County, netted his fifth goal of the game with 1 second remaining on the clock to force overtime.

The Vikings are missing an important member to their starting lineup in senior attacker Taylor Bourgeois, who has missed several games due to a sore back. The coaching staff is hopeful for his return soon, as the school's spring break has given Bourgeois almost two weeks of much-needed rest. The Vikings will also need his offensive explosiveness around the net to have any hope of making a move in the second half of the season.

With league play underway, the Vikings want to get on a bit of a roll similar to last season, when they had two seven-game winning streaks. Rosenberg knows the road ahead will be difficult, as they must navigate through a tough league schedule, including road games at Cathedral Catholic (April 28) and Coronado (May 14) in the coming weeks.

It's not an unrealistic goal, as Rosenberg is fully confident that his team can turn their season around.

It isn't enough that they've got the attention of some of the world's greatest designers, now the La Jolla Fashion Film Festival has the world's biggest trade publications covering the event.

"We just have to refine it at this point," said event producer Fred Sweet as the Fashion Film Festival, set for April 23-24, comes down to the wire.

Sweet, who doubles as CEO of San Diego Model Management, was recently interviewed by Vogue magazine and can confirm that Women's Wear Daily (WWD) — the top trade publication in the world — will be sending representatives to the event.

For this small production, Sweet and his staff "are very, very excited" as they gear up for international exposure of the first American fashion film festival. Magazines and newspapers from all over the world, some of which, Sweet said he "never even heard of," will be attending.

Industry professionals already confirmed to personally introduce their films include Janet Pytowski, Carl Cortes, George Manzanilla and Robertino Fonseca, with more set to confirm before month's end, Sweet said. To add even

Sami Ladeki has developed a taste for success

By HILLARY SCHULER-JONES | VILLAGE NEWS

La Jolla businessman Sami Ladeki operates nearly 20 restaurants across two states, and, in spite of a sagging economy, business is booming.

For some people in his situation, this would be the time to step back from the long hours and constant pressure to reap the benefits of years of hard work. For Ladeki, however, the drive to improve and grow is nowhere close to waning.

Ladeki has more than four decades of experience managing restaurants across the country and in international locales, and he has called La Jolla home for more than 20 years. He opened his first Sammy's Woodfired Pizza in 1989. The chain has since expanded to include 12 locations in San Diego County and five in the Las Vegas area. In recent years, he has also added Roppongi Sushi and Mosaic Catering to the Ladeki Restaurant Group umbrella.

With so many facilities to manage, one might expect Ladeki to assume the role of a sort of Wizard of Oz — the man behind the curtain who calls the shots, but is seldom seen. Yet Ladeki is still driven to learn from his customers and make improvements, and he is a fastidious observer of human nature.

"In the restaurant business, you not only have to have the culinary part of it ... you also have to be a good observant of human behavior — what they like, what they don't like, what they are eating, which restaurant they like the most," Ladeki said.

Ladeki has built his empire on this attention to the decisions his customers make. He said that when he eats at his own restaurants (which occurs frequently), he monitors where his customers choose to sit, noting whether they prefer areas with low ceilings or vaulted spaces, or if they choose a booth over a table. He uses these observations to make improvements at his existing restaurants and to perfect his designs at new locations.

He is equally interested in how his customers order their food. Sammy's once introduced a chopped salad with pepperoni to the menu, but Ladeki noticed that several times people asked to replace the pepperoni with chicken. He tried the combination himself, deemed it restaurant-worthy, and had the chicken version added to the menu as well.

These studies of human behavior extend beyond the food and seating options to the overall customer experience, Ladeki said. He will not build a restaurant at a location that requires drivers to make a U-turn to get to the entrance, he said, because he has watched people drive past establishments that aren't easy to access.

Ladeki likens the restaurant business to the fashion industry, where tastes change quickly and designers must constantly tap their creativity to stay ahead of the trends.

"We are constantly, on a daily basis, experimenting with new items at both restaurants (Sammy's and Roppongi)," Ladeki said. "We are always innovating and renovating ... like fashion — it changes, food changes. Every year they have a new show, a new length of skirt. You have to be relentless about always bringing new products."

Ladeki's passion for keeping up with these changes also fuels his desire for growth. He said he has plans to open another Sammy's in Huntington Beach in September, and he is scouting locations in Santa Monica for the chain's 19th location. He is also looking for a second location for Roppongi in North County.

Re-imagining Wonderland

By WILL BOWEN, Ph.D. | VILLAGE NEWS

"Who in the world am I? Ah, that's the great puzzle!" asks Alice, finding herself in the enchanted world of Wonderland in Lewis Carroll's timeless classic, "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland," first published in England in 1865.

The chamber ensemble Art of Elan will team up with Colette Harding Contemporary Dance Company, Philadelphia-based composer Joe Hallman and narrator Dorothy Annette to present "Alice: Re-Imagining Wonderland through Music, Dance, and Spoken Word," with costumes and sets by Deven P. Brawley and lighting by Chris Plonka. This world premiere event, scheduled for April 16 at 8 p.m. and repeating on April 18 at 2 p.m. at the Museum of Contemporary Art's Sherwood Auditorium, will attempt to answer Alice's eternal question in a coming of age story that mixes reality and fantasy with a new twist, and costumes very different from Sir John Tenniel's original book illustrations.

The Art of Elan, now three years old, is a chamber ensemble forged by flutist Demarre Gill and violinist Kate Hatmaker. Gill is a graduate of Julliard and is the principle flutist with the San Diego Symphony. Hatmaker, a graduate of Carnegie Mellon, is a violinist with the Symphony and teaches at Coronado School of the Arts. Together, they have sought to re-vitalize interest in classical music by "presenting short colorful energy-packed concerts anyone can relate to."

Their goal: "to develop a loyal following and a trusting relationship with audiences by promising to always put on a great show which is one hour in length."

Composer Joe Hallman, who wrote the score, has been called "One of the

Pier review: Remains of the day at La Jolla Shores

By JUDITH LEA GARFIELD | VILLAGE NEWS

Piecing together a bit of La Jolla Shores history demands that one look both above and below the waterline. It was 74 years ago, in 1926, that ground was broken at La Jolla Shores for a beach and yacht club on the present site of the La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club. To investors, it seemed like a good idea. You know the story — build a marina and they will come. All you have to do is some dredging. Long story short, two breakwaters were proposed from Alligator Head (at the Cove) northward to tame the surf, thereby creating a safe entrance to the harbor. However, between the sticker shock for the project and discovery of the submarine canyon under the would-be breakwaters, the entrepreneurs in question threw in the (beach) towel and abandoned the yachting aspect.

Still, the La Jolla Beach & Yacht Club concept soldiered-on with the construction of a hotel and adjoining pier. The pier is little remembered today, and I have found no one to offer details of its inception and demise. From the few existing historical documents and photos, I estimate the hotel and pier opened sometime in 1929, alas another unfortunate business decision because of its synchronous timing with the infamous stock market crash. Under these trying circumstances, it is unclear whether the pier was maintained or left to fend for itself. Certainly, the public's interest in vacationing must have taken a nosedive. At some point in the early 1930s, the pier disappeared from the photo records. Mounting financial problems finally forced the club's investors to fish for another buyer. In March 1934, with new owners (tennis aficionados!) entrenched, the era of the now-renamed La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club began.

All these decades later, vestiges of the pier remain. In summers when good vis-

Confident of their idea, Beach & Yacht Club investors (prematurely) had an architectural firm create a rendering of the marina concept. (unknown author, date) most creative forces in the world of music today." He is currently composer-in-residence at Traverse Arts Project and an adjunct faculty at Drexel University.

"This was a fun and challenging project," Hallman said. "Not only did I have to consider the dance, but the narrative of the story — the drama and the nonsense that are intrinsic to the whole of the piece."

The dance portion of the show was choreographed by Colette Harding of the Colette Harding Contemporary Dance Company, drawing on both the story and Hallman's music. Harding earned her MFA in dance from UC Irvine where she is trained in both ballet and modern dance.

"In our story, Alice is young and care-free, but then lives a crazy journey meeting unusual characters," Harding said. "She learns from their mistakes and nonsense, and grows into a beautiful, dignified and mature woman."

Tickets are $25 for adults and $15 for students. Reserved seating and an invitation to a post concert reception to meet the artists costs $50.

Fashions, blondes and bunnies

Starry, starry nights

with Vincent Andrunas

After a short hiatus, the Fashion Group International of San Diego returned with its 11th Style Awards gala, titled "Night of Stars." The purpose was to recognize leaders in varied San Diego industries, raise funds for The Monarch School and provide scholarships for students studying for careers in the fashion industry. Sue Wong won the Fashion Industry Style Award and Virginia Napierskie took the Community Outreach Style Award. The Media Style Award went to recently-retired social columnist Burl Stiff, whose articles appeared regularly in The San Diego Union-Tribune for 34 years (and still graces those pages on occasion). Always very well-dressed himself, Burl has had a career-long affinity for style and fashion. For this event, he rewrote the lyrics to "Puttin' on the Ritz," which was sung by Kimberly Layton while a runway show featured four celebrity models. The women were Darlene Davies, Joyce Glazer and Jeanne Jones, all in couture designs by Burl himself, and Lael Kovtun in a striking outfit he purchased for her at a New York auction. Burl spoke briefly about some of the highlights of his career and received a very long and enthusiastic standing ovation. Diana Cavagnaro and Julie Fought co-chaired the event, which also included dinner and a fabulous fashion extravaganza/designer showcase presented by Gretchen Productions.

Broadway San Diego's production of "Legally Blonde" opened at the Civic Theatre one recent evening, garnering rave reviews. Broadway San Diego's Presidents' Club, which has a number of La Jolla members, was there in force, as they are at every opening night. Besides getting the best seats, members enjoy other VIP benefits, including special parking, souvenir programs and more. Members are also invited to the post-performance cast party at the nearby Westgate Hotel, where the show's stars were friendly and approachable, clearly enjoying their two-year tour with the show.

Popular La Jolla realtor Tom Groff and his buddies (including 14 co-hosts) were at it again recently, partying and collecting bunnies and stuffed toys just before Easter for distribution to needy kids. Admission to their Gala Easter Ball was free to the 750 or so invited guests — as long as they dressed in formal attire and brought a stuffed Easter toy (worth at least $25) to donate. The black-tie soiree was held in the Grande Ballroom of the Hilton La Jolla Torrey Pines hotel. Tom and the co-hosts (surprise — they're all single guys) covered all the expenses, including a VIP pre-party with a beautiful spread of food and wines for the hosts and some of the cutest bunnies. During the main party, the ballroom gradually filled with revelers enjoying the huge dance floor, making new friends and generally feeling good about collecting all those toys. The dance floor was the largest the Hilton could put together, and DJ Matte kept it full throughout the night. The next day, vans hauled the Easter booty off to Rady Children's Hospital, the Polinsky Children's Center and Athletes for Education.

TIDELINES

ibility meets calm water, I see remnants of the pier gravesite while snorkeling the area. Depending on the sand's ebb and flow, railroad ties, which were used as pier supports, may be more or less exposed from year to year. The ties themselves are now a habitat that supports a thick algal turf for sponges, bryozoans and barnacles to attach, and good hiding for fish-like blennies, sculpin, halibut and stingrays. Sometimes I'll see bright-red kelp crabs clamped onto a post, tearing off clumps of encrusting algae and stuffing the salad into its mouth.

After concluding that the site had never been mapped, I waited for a particularly good reveal, then called my friend, Spence, a civil engineer, to help visualize the layout of the remains in a more concrete way. We descended with scuba gear and stretched a measuring tape across one rail tie, securing it around one end to determine length. When we tried to remove the tape, it wouldn't budge for a small octopus claiming ownership. After some tug-o-war, the cephalopod liberated the tape from its suckers and we established the metal remnants at about 15-foot-long each. Based on the completed map, it appears the pier gave way right where it stood. We estimate the site at 20-feet wide and 100-feet long, although the standing pier was longer.

Whether this area marks the scope of the sunken pier ruins remains murky. Clearly, however, there can be no mystery that visitors who strolled the pier's walkway during its heyday experienced an incomparable topside vista. These days, the pier retains a unique panorama, albeit under water, for visitors who instead must don a diving mask and swim its length.

Judith Lea Garfield, biologist and underwater photographer, has authored two natural history books about the underwater park off La Jolla Cove and La Jolla Shores. www.judith.garfield.org. Questions, comments or suggestions? E-mail jgarfield@ucsd.edu.

The pier and hotel are open for business but dredging an opening from the marina to the ocean has been abandoned. (unknown photographer, date)

Pier remains provide snorkelers with an underwater archaeology adventure, and when viewed up close, a dense community of life.
