When undressing La Jolla's history, beach attire is among transformations that demand attention

By CLAIRE HARLIN | VILLAGE NEWS

As historian Carol Olten points out in her new book "La Jolla Then and Now," to be featured at a 7 p.m. signing event on May 7 at D.G. Wills Books, day-to-day changes in urban landscape can easily go unnoticed, while transformations that have taken place in La Jolla since its beginnings in the late 1800s seem monumental when observed over a long time.

The book, photographed and co-authored by Rudy Vaca, uses photos to capture the past and present of La Jolla, while explaining and comparing the two. It illustrates how iconic rock formations have weathered or fallen, architectural structures have been replaced or altered and commercialization has proliferated. Standing out among the intriguing changes over the last decade are those involving the people who we cannot talk to, but only observe in the black and white photos that have been left behind. A day at the beach of La Jolla Cove was a much different scene years ago than it is now, and most notably, beachgoers' attire makes that difference unmistakable.

Swimwear evolution

A 1910 photo of the La Jolla Cove shows a large group of people sitting on the sand and enjoying a picnic in "Sunday best" clothing — girls in hats and dresses and boys in suits and berets. They don't drink out of plastic or paper cups, but rather raise china cups to their mouths. No bikinis, no swim trunks, no flip-flops.

Swimwear stands out as an ever-evolving custom, and when early attire began to meet changes in modesty, those who chose to wear less met some opposition. While most of those who experienced it are no longer alive to tell about it, documents reveal there was a 1917 ordinance in La Jolla that banned people from wearing swimsuits in public. Specifically, Common Council Ordinance No. 7056 stated anyone over the age of 10 could not wear a swimsuit "unless there is worn over such bathing suit or swimming suit a coat, cloak or other garment covering the entire person

Shores residents question new neighbor's desire to fit in

By KENDRA HARTMANN | VILLAGE NEWS

At the April 26 meeting of the La Jolla Shores Permit Review Committee (LJSPRC), board members heard presentations from the architect and attorney for the planned residence of Jack Nooren, to be constructed at 8001 Calle de la Plata. Both committee and presenters, however, got more advice than they bargained for.

Residents who attended the meeting waited patiently throughout the presentations outlining the plans for the house — a modern, LEED-certified, 3,700-square-foot residence to be built on the site of one of the community's oldest homes. When it came time for public testimony, however, they didn't mince words.

"Why would [the owner] want to go in a completely opposite direction from the historical architecture of the Shores?" asked one member of the audience.

"[The historic house] is a gem within the jewel," said another. "We are destroying everything we have."

Board member Phil Merten did not speak to the historical significance of the existing structure, but he did say that, in his opinion, the new building doesn't "meet the intent of the design manual or the La Jolla community plan."

For some residents, the sentiment went even further.

"Why does [the owner] want to change the flavor of the Shores?" asked one. "Why does he want something so antagonistic to everything in the community?"

The existing home, a modest, Spanish-style structure built in 1927, was one of the original four homes built in La Jolla Shores. The construction of the four residences signaled the grand opening of the subdivision, which was attended by Hollywood stars and surfing royalty. Jackie Coogan, a child star in the 1920s who went on to marry Bettie Grable, as well as Duke "The Big Kahuna" Kahanamoku made appearances at the event.

Residents of the Shores have previously tried to have the home designated as historically significant, but the San Diego Historical Resources Board has been deadlocked on the issue since last June. Meanwhile, demolition and construction of the new structure are moving forward.

The LJSPRC does not make decisions about the historical significance of buildings, and the item was on the agenda of the April 26 meeting to determine if the new building would meet the guidelines of the planned district ordinance. The pleas of the public in regard to the older home's significance could not be used to make a decision about the new building's compliance, but they did not go unheard by board members.

"We've heard criticisms as to design and fitting in with the community and criticisms with the dimensions today," said board chair Helen Boyden. "I'd like to see the planners come back with some more information and photo surveys of the four corners facing the house."

The board voted unanimously for a continuance of the project, to be heard at the next meeting in May.

Board member Dale Naegle closed the meeting with a comment directed at the attorney and architect, to be delivered to the home's owner.

"There's obviously a lot of anxiety about this design," he said. "The architecture is good, but the house doesn't belong there. Your client might want to come down here and listen to all of this."

Dogs banned at Children's Pool

As seal pupping comes to an end on May 15, another type of pup has been banned from the Children's pool — canines.

In an effort to prevent conflicts between dogs and harbor seals, the San Diego City Council voted 6-0 on May 2 to ban dogs from not only the Children's Pool but also the areas surrounding it. This ban excludes service dogs and canines "working" for the city or police.

This ban was first proposed at a special council meeting on May 17, 2010, and it still requires another vote before it becomes law. The existing rule states dogs are banned from the beach, including the stairs to the beach, only during the hours of 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The rope at the Children's Pool, meant to separate humans and seals, who have used the beach since the 1990s, is set to come down when pupping season ends. This season beach access advocates were often found setting up chairs and swimming in the roped-off area.

Former LJ real estate agent gets 180 days

By NEAL PUTNAM | VILLAGE NEWS

A former La Jolla real estate agent was sentenced April 26 to 180 days in jail for stealing jewelry and credit cards from a couple who took him in after he lost his real estate company. He was ordered to pay nearly $37,000 in restitution.

Steven Swilley, 49, who is also known as Steven Swilley-Francoeur, has a projected release date of Aug. 20, according to the San Diego Sheriff's Department. He had been free on $25,000 bond, but was remanded into custody by San Diego Superior Court Judge Theodore Weathers.

Deputy District Attorney John Cross said Swilley stole "because of drugs," specifically methamphetamine.

"He steals their money. Their credit cards to go to Nieman Marcus," Cross said.

"He's a sweet talker, manipulator."

JOHN CROSS
Deputy District Attorney

Lance Rygg said he and his wife took Swilley into their home when he lost a place to live in 2010.

"He paid us back by stealing all the jewelry in our house," Rygg told the judge.

Cross asked the judge for a one-year jail term.

"He's a sweet-talker, manipulator." Cross said.

According to the probation report, Swilley sold the items he got from Neiman Marcus and the couple to use for money to purchase drugs. He is banned from returning to Neiman Marcus, Target and Ralph's supermarket.

Weathers placed him on three years of probation and ordered him not to drink alcohol for three years. He was ordered to pay a fine of more than $1,300, probation costs and fees for a court-appointed attorney, according to court records.

He pleaded guilty to burglary and identity theft on March 7 and six other burglary charges were dismissed.

SENIOR TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIPS

La Jollan keeps swinging at 94

By CLAIRE HARLIN | VILLAGE NEWS

Dorothy "Dodo" Cheney may be 94 years old and slightly slowed by arthritic knees, but she takes no mercy on the tennis courts — and that's evidenced by the 380 gold balls she has won and prominently displayed in the La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club's trophy case.

At this year's United States Tennis Association (USTA) National Senior Women's Hard Court Tennis Championships, set to take place at the club May 9-15, Cheney is coming back for more, and she is the top-ranked woman in the super senior age group, 90-and-over. The club's annual Spring Senior Championships for men will take place in conjunction with the women's events. Although the men's events are not national championships, they will feature many senior players who regularly compete in national tournaments.

Cheney will be the first to tell you that she loves to win and it's the competition that keeps her going. She's not only used to winning, but it's in her blood.

Cheney is the daughter of 1956 hall-of-famer May Sutton Bundy, winner of the 1904 U.S. Championships and Wimbledon in 1905 and 1907, and Tom Bundy, a U.S. doubles champion (1912, 1913 and 1914). Dodo and her mother were the first mother-daughter combination in the International Tennis Hall of Fame.

Dodo has been winning titles against her like-aged competitors since at least 1957, when she won the first of her 13 consecutive USTA National Hard Court Women's 40-and-over singles titles. When she was 62, she won her last 40-and-over doubles national title. Since then, she has dominated the over-50, over-55, over-60, over-65, over-70, over-75 and over-80 divisions. Cheney was inducted into the International Tennis Hall of Fame in 2004. Last year, she received the Lifetime Achievement Award from the San Diego Hall of Champions.

The La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club is expecting more than 300 tennis players to take on its courts this weekend, with the women's tournament attracting the best players from all over the country. The club started both the men's and women's events and has hosted them since their inception. Named "Club of the Year" for 2011 by the San Diego District Tennis Association and rated one of the "Top 25 Tennis Resorts" by Tennis Resorts Online, the La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club's reputation as a top tennis destination started when it attracted its first major tournament, the Pacific Coast Men's Doubles Championship, in 1942.

Admission to this week-long tournament is free and open to the public, with a snack bar and dining facility on site. There is a nominal fee for on-site parking. Draws will be posted at the beach club and available online at www.LJBTC.com. Daily matches will start at 8 a.m.

Ask The Lawyer

Question: I am confused about the estate tax exemption amount because it has changed. What effect does it have on my parent's estate?

Answer: There is an unlimited federal estate exemption this year. No matter the size of your estate if you die in 2010, there will not be any estate tax on it. You must file an informational return by the due date of the individual tax return.

However, in 2011, the federal estate tax exemption amount changes to One Million Dollars. Any estate over that amount will be required to pay an estate tax. The tax rate starts at 41% and goes up to 55%. That means if your parent dies next year and has an estate of 2 million dollars, there will be an estate tax of $410,000.00. That is a whole lot of money.

What can be done about this? There are a number of things that can be done to help save some taxes. The first is for married couples to have a Marital Trust or AB Trust. This must be done while both spouses are still alive and it will shelter Two Million Dollars from estate tax. I even advise couples to get married to save $100,000 or more in taxes!

Another way to reduce the size of an estate is to gift. One person can give $13,000 per year to anyone. You can set up irrevocable trust and fund it with some of your assets. You can give a gift of One Million dollars also. You will have to file a gift tax return, but no tax is due on it. Of course, gifts to charities can be made in any amount now and at your death and that amount will not be included in your estate for taxes. Let us sit down together and plan to save taxes.

except the head, hands and feet." The ordinance further stated it was "unlawful for any person having on a bathing suit to sit or lie on that portion of the beach or parcel of land known as 'The Cove' in La Jolla, and extending from the Park northwardly for two blocks." The law carried a fine of "not more than $25" or imprisonment for up to 25 days.

Historical reports reveal the ordinance caused much discussion, and was the object of opposition in a San Diego Tribune editorial. In protest, a woman named Frazier Curtis wore overalls over her bathing suit in public, thus staying within the law but "scandalizing the community," wrote Howard S. F. Randolph in "La Jolla Year by Year," the first history book on La Jolla. The ordinance ceased to exist by the 1930s.

Some photos of beachgoers in the 1920s show women swimming in dress-like outfits with long, loose sleeves. Others show women wearing identical, dark wool dresses that extend to the knee. They walked to the beach in overcoats.

In her research, Olten wondered like anyone else how anyone could swim in those fabrics that were worn before stretchy textiles like nylon and Spandex came about.

"You kind of wonder how it was to swim," said the La Jolla Historical Society historian. "The fabric would have just carried you down."

A growing archive

The historical society is home to more than 10,000 vintage photos, a collection that began with donations in the 1940s with Randolph's writing of "La Jolla Year by Year." Since then, the society has acquired donated photos that range from casual snapshots to professional photographs. The prints have been used in books like "Then and Now," which went on sale April 11, and they are also used in exhibits at the society's Wisteria Cottage, located at 780 Prospect St.

To show modern-day La Jollans what beach life and attire was like in decades past, for example, the society was lucky to acquire a series of photos taken in the early 1920s of a lady named Daisy Sheppard and her friends posing and enjoying themselves at the Cove. With cameras being a rare commodity in those times, the photos are a rare glimpse into life during the 1920s, a time of great "freedom" and progress in La Jolla, Olten said.

"When they were given to us, the owner thought we wouldn't have any use for these old photos, but we were so happy to get them," said Olten, stressing that other La Jollans with vintage photographs in their possession should consider donating them to be preserved for posterity in the society's archives. To donate old photographs, stop by Wisteria Cottage between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Mondays through Fridays or call the society at (858) 459-5335.

GUEST COMMENTARY

Leaders propose new lines for City Council District 1

By JOE LACAVA | VILLAGE NEWS

By now you have heard about the City's 2010 Redistricting Commission. Its task is to re-evaluate the city council districts in light of the 2010 census and to include an additional council district (the ninth). CD1 was the fastest growing in the city and is now significantly in excess of the 2010 target for each district (199,000 versus 144,000). Changes to the current Council District 1 (CD1) will be significant and the Commission is asking us to weigh with our thoughts for the new CD1.

Other groups in the city are proposing their own vision for redistricting the city. We recognize their good efforts; however, we don't want our portion of the city to be backed into a new district cobbled together with the leftovers from other proposals!

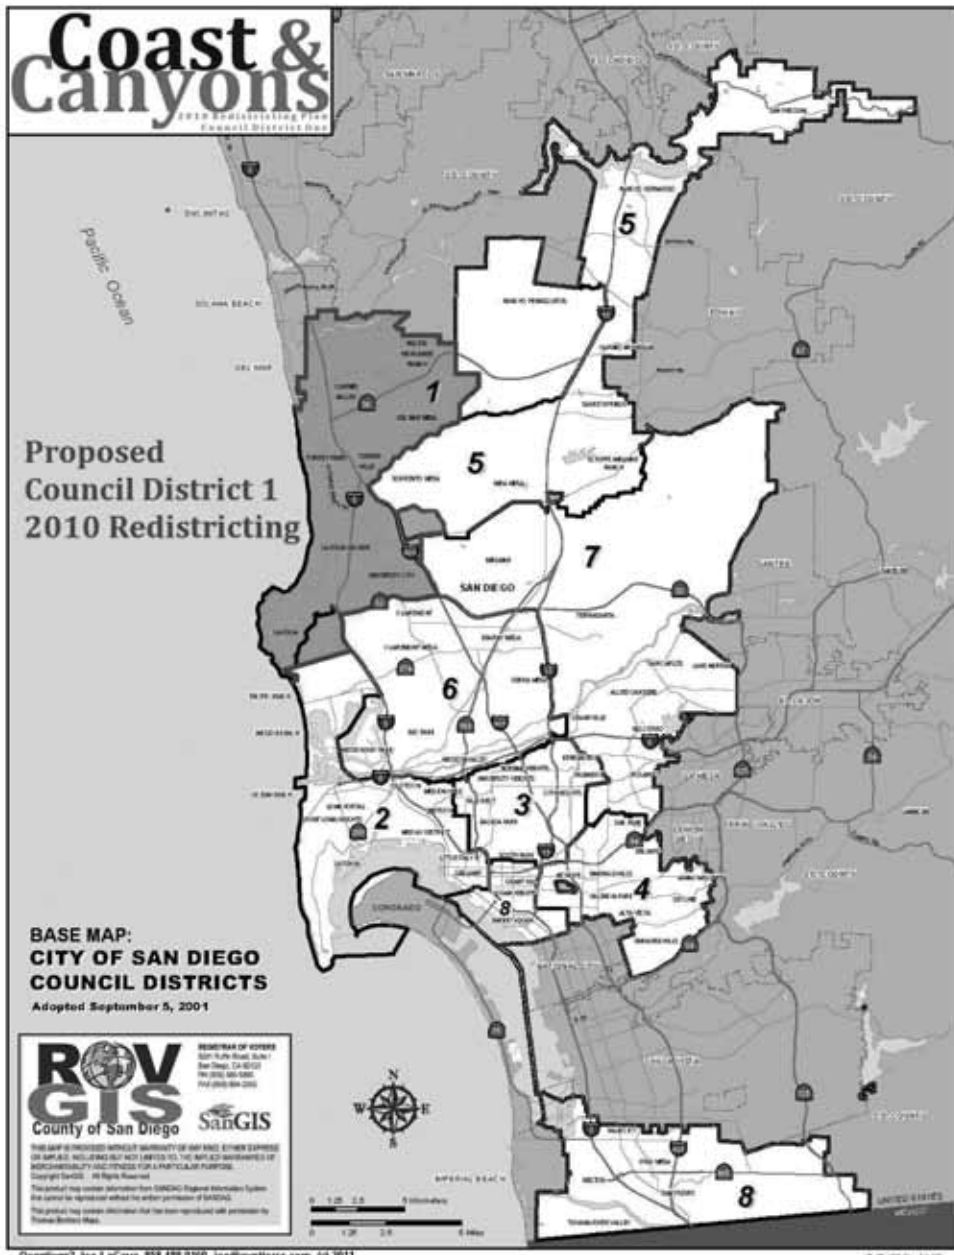

Some of your community leaders have developed a template for the new CD1 that we call the "Coast & Canyons Plan." A growing number of community organizations are endorsing it. The new CD1 would include the communities of Carmel Valley, Del Mar Mesa, Fairbanks Country Club, Flower Hill, La Jolla, Pacific Highlands Ranch, Torrey Pines, Torrey Hills and University City. This is essentially the old CD1 except that Rancho Penasquitos, Black Mountain Ranch and Torrey Highlands would shift to an inland district. The proposal also returns portions of University City and La Jolla to CD1. There are compelling reasons why this proposal is as good for the current constituents of CD1 as well as the city. Further, the proposal exceeds the requirements of the city charter.

Please send your support for the Coast & Canyons Plan to redistricting_2010@sandiego.gov. Better yet, join us at the Commission's May 11 meeting (La Jolla Library, 7555 Draper Ave, 6 p.m.) to request adoption of our plan.

La Jolla moms shine through student essays

Every mom is special, but some truly stand out and deserve to be recognized for the sacrifices and dedication they've made for their children and their families. Time Warner Cable, in seeking to know who those top moms are, recently held a contest in which students from fourth to twelfth grade wrote essays of 150 to 500 words telling why their mom is the best. The contest is in its tenth year.

The essays were judged by a panel of local journalists, politicians and teachers who selected the 50 best moms for 2011, based on the children's explanations. The writers of three essays — one from each school level: elementary, middle and high school — were awarded a new Sony VAIO laptop computer. In addition, the winning students' teachers received a $250 gift card for supplies for their classrooms.

Two La Jolla moms made the cut, and the student authors shared their words with the Village News:

Best Mom: Gisele Chalhoub, La Jolla
Student: Talia Chalhoub, grade 7, Muirlands Middle School

"The saying, 'mom knows best' is actually true in my case. My mom is not only a mother who loves and cares for us, but a leader for everyone. People should be more like her. Unique, intelligent, creative and patient. Without her, I would not have been born, my family would not have been created and the world would not have received the best gift of all: a loving, kind, magnificent beating heart."

Best Mom: Neda Mesri, La Jolla
Student: Yassi Mesri, grade 5, Bird Rock Elementary

"Moms. We all know we can't live without them. They're so helpful and kind. They're also funny, but sometimes embarrassing. We all love them. My mommy, Neda Mesri, is the best mom in the whole entire universe. One reason why she is the best is because she is always there for me. For example, when I'm feeling glum, she'll comfort me while I tell her what's wrong. Then, she'll help me think of a solution for my problem. My mommy's solutions always work."

Gala paves the way to a second chance of success

By JOHNNY McDONALD | VILLAGE NEWS

At the fifth annual Art of Success gala on May 5 at the Museum of Contemporary Art in La Jolla, patrons will have a chance to dine, dance and bid the night away. Meanwhile, their money will be hard at work for the homeless and ex-convicts of San Diego County.

A nonprofit program called Second Chance, the beneficiary of the gala, is the city's guiding force for those on a pathway toward reentry into the employment market — and it's no small job.

"The first week [of instruction in the program] is geared to test their willingness to find work," said Second Chance president and co-founder Scott Silverman. "Many will agree they have never dealt with anything but a prison sentence after spending their entire life lying, cheating and manipulating. It's pretty powerful."

Silverman has been running the program out of the San Diego Rescue Mission for the past 12 years. In that time, more than 5,000 people have graduated from the program that consists of monthly, four-week, 150-hour refresher courses. In addition, the program hosted a job fair in Balboa Park on March 30, offering employer information and individual resume critiques by human resource professionals.

Silverman said he expects as many as 70 will turn out for the next indoctrination and close to half will complete the exercises that offer everything from resume help to navigating the Internet. On average, about 70 percent find jobs.

"We (the taxpayers) can spend $60,000 to keep someone in prison or we can help them find a job to earn $20,000 to $30,000," he said. "If they haven't worked for sometime, they'll probably need to start all over again, but the only thing they need to control is their attitude."

Silverman can recall many success stories of past graduates, but a favorite is one about a woman named Angie.

"She went to work two years ago at Vons, stocking shelves," he said. "Later, she was selected for butcher's training. Now, she's only one of four women in San Diego County serving as a butcher."

Because of her achievement, Angie was nominated to the Second Chance board of directors. In effect, she's now one of Silverman's bosses.

"The woman who answers our office phone was involved in a bank robbery when she was 14," Silverman added. "Forty percent of the staff are graduates from the program."

Second Chance has been so successful, in fact, that Silverman and his staff are now seeking to improve the lives of others in the community.

"We've expanded with programs for juveniles and veterans to help them make the transition into the community," he said. "Once employed, young people are encouraged to go back to school."

Silverman hopes the gala will provide some much-needed support.

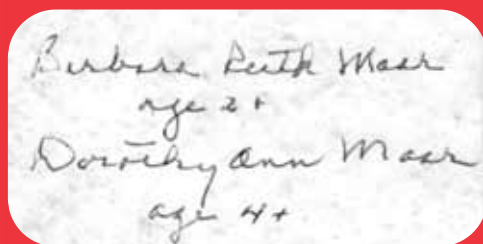

"The state of California doesn't invest in us," he said. "We do it with the private sector."

The event, which includes an auction to benefit the Second Chance program, will begin at 6 p.m. at the museum, 700 Prospect St., and will be attended by District Attorney Bonnie Dumanis, Police Chief Bill Lansdowne and Sheriff Bill Gore.

Student rockers battle it out

Student musicians from La Jolla High School will compete for the crown on May 6 in the school's annual Battle of the Bands. Each band will play about three to four songs in the event, which is open to the public and will raise funds for the school's music program.

According to Michael Fiedler, the school's instrumental music director, music programs start with nothing, so it's crucial to hold fundraisers in order to be able to do things like fix instruments, buy supplies and buy music.

Fiedler said he's expecting up to 200 people to attend the event, which began as a social outlet for students.

"When I first started teaching here, a couple students came up to me and said, 'Let's have a Battle of the Bands.' They were really gung ho about it," he said, adding that the event has been a success ever since. "The fundraising aspect came as an afterthought. We charge for tickets, so we might as well raise money for the program."

While some participating bands have been formed for a while, Fiedler said, many students came together to form bands specifically for this fundraiser.

Faulconer, residents link arms to shield libraries from cuts

Councilman collecting signatures to preserve District 2's seven library branches serving La Jolla, PB, downtown, OB, Point Loma and Mission Hills

By PATRICIA WALSH | VILLAGE NEWS

Calling libraries the “heart and soul of the community,” District 2 City Councilman Kevin Faulconer joined Friends of the Ocean Beach Library and the OB Rag on Saturday to collect signatures to thwart proposed cuts to San Diego’s city libraries.

The recommended cuts would reduce each library’s operating hours from 36 to 18.5 hours a week. They are part of Mayor Jerry Sanders’ proposed $1.1 billion operating budget for the city’s 2012 fiscal year, which takes effect July 1. The signatures were to be presented to the City Council during the library department’s budget review today, May 5.

The City Council’s final vote on the budget is scheduled for June 30.

“I’m going to vote to keep libraries open at levels they’re open now. The city needs to make cuts in other areas,” Faulconer said in front of the historic Ocean Beach Branch Library, where a crowd of supporters wore “I Love My Library — Support-MyLibrary.org” stickers and carried signs. Among the sign messages was “America’s Dumbest City.”

Sanders’ proposed 2012 budget includes cutting $14 million from recreation centers, beach fire pits and libraries, which would take a $7.1 million hit by closing library doors all but two days during the week and every other Saturday.

Recreation center hours would be reduced from 40 to 20 hours a week beginning Sept. 6, and fire pits would be eliminated. The Fire/Rescue Department would receive an additional $8 million to restore idled fire engines, and the police department would lose $5.5 million and about 28 full-time positions.

Unchanged from 2011 is $6.4 million in funding for the arts.

“There is room in every department to make changes,” Faulconer said. “But our library department, they have done fantastic with less money. Our neighborhood volunteers have really picked up the slack.”

Since 2000, city library hours have been cut from an average of 51 hours a week to 36 hours a week, according to city records.

“Our libraries should be free and open to the public, just as our beaches remain that way,” Faulconer said. “As we saw with Proposition D, neighbors want City Hall to spend the money that it has wisely. Where we will be able to save literally hundreds of millions of dollars is pension reform, and that’s why I’m pushing for a measure on the June ballot.”

“When there’s a choice between libraries and an affordable pension, I know which side most voters are going to weigh in on,” he added.

Noting that the city also needs to get creative on financial solutions, Faulconer talked about his idea to install solar panels on streetlights.

“It not only generates electricity for light but potential revenue back to the city,” he said.

Among those carrying signs to protest the proposed cuts were Ocean Beach residents Gretchen and Kristoffer Newsom and their 3-year-old son, Leiff.

“This is not just a small public library. It’s a portal to the world,” Kristoffer said. “It’s a symbol and one of the foundations of a free society.”

Carol Pekin, a 30-year-library patron, signed the petition and said, “I’m disgusted. This is an important resource in the lives of people. We want an educated voting populace.”

Currently, there are 37 library branches and programs throughout the city of San Diego, seven of which are in District 2 in the communities of Ocean Beach, Point Loma, Mission Hills, Pacific Beach, La Jolla, and in Downtown the Central Library and READ/San Diego program.

On a typical day, according to library department statistics, San Diego’s city libraries attract 26,000 visitors who check out 28,000 items; 6,701 people use a computer and 1,000 patrons attend library programs. Last year, 30,000 children were enrolled in the library’s summer reading program.

“One of the great things about libraries is it cuts across every age group and every demographic,” Faulconer said. “This is what I consider to be an essential city service.”

During the petition signing Saturday, the Ocean Beach Branch Library was humming with activity — all eight computers with Internet access were in use, visitors with laptops accessed wireless connections, while others read newspapers and books. In the children’s area, Holly Robinson, 25, was helping her 16-month-old daughter, Olivia, use a computer-learning program designed specifically for small children.

“We walk here two to three times a week,” Robinson said. “It saves a lot of money. We rent videos and I check out books for classes at Mesa College. I’m really upset they’re trying to close libraries. What about our children?”

Boone Riddle, 29, who said he moved to San Diego from Denver just a week ago, waited briefly in line to get his freshly-minted library card to check out two books.

“The staff was very helpful and I found the books I wanted quickly,” Riddle said. “The fast pace of our lives ignores education, and if the government depreciates libraries by deprioritizing learning and reading, it hurts our children and our society.”

Common Care Giving Misconceptions

Caring for a parent or spouse is an emotional subject which is likely the reason so many myths surround it. This article is designed to dispel some of these myths. It's a must-read for anyone currently involved in care giving including those who are considering hiring or perhaps even becoming a caregiver.

Adult Children No Longer Provide Care for Aging Parents at Home

While stories of adult children abandoning their aging parents make for interesting reading, this is just not true. What is true is that families live further apart from one another than ever before and that situation sometimes presents caregiving challenges. Advances in communication make it easy for adult children and aging parents to stay in regular contact. Many children also care for their parents but the stress may be great.

Most People Have a Plan in Place Before the Need Arises

Not true. If you don't yet have a caregiving plan, you're definitely not alone. Most adult children do not tackle this issue until they are forced, meaning it doesn't usually happen until a parent becomes ill, starts showing signs of the onset of age-related conditions such as dementia or Alzheimer's disease, or until one aging parent dies and the other has trouble resuming life after the death of their spouse.

Caregiver Resources are Insufficient

This is not true. Caregiver resources are fragmented and sometimes difficult to comprehend or access. But they're out there. New legislation regarding caregiving and care receiving is constantly being introduced and approved. Contact Innovative Healthcare Consultants, a geriatric care management and care giving company for assistance and answers to your question. Call 877-731-1442 or see our website at www.innovativehc.com.

Find the hidden OCTOPI

‘Masters of deception’ are marine highlights for divers

By JUDITH LEA GARFIELD | VILLAGE NEWS

As a kid, a visit to the dentist was the lowlight of my day. The highlight was, well, the Highlights magazines in the waiting area. While trying to relax my nervous self, I would turn to the “Hidden Pictures” page and try finding all the objects camouflaged in the black-and-white drawing. Flash forward to adulthood, and I’m still playing the game, albeit with changes. For one, I search under water, and for another, the camouflaged “objects” are living creatures. The grown-up game doesn’t come with an answer page, but the number of finds possible is limitless. And, of course, my immediate surroundings are a sight that’s more pleasant.

One find particularly prized by divers is that of the octopus because it is a master of deception. At first, the octopus’s wealth of disguises seem like overkill for an animal equipped with eight arms, a sharp beak, venom and a big brain (researchers put their smarts at the top of the invertebrate heap, comparing their intelligence to that of a house cat). In actuality, having a soft body and no protective shell on its back makes this mollusk a tempting target for various fish and mammals. When desperate times call for desperate measures, the octopus changes skin color and texture to identically match the background. The tools used for this transformation are chromatophores (literally, colored bodies), sacs of yellow, red, brown and black pigments that cover the body’s dermal layer like a rash of hives. Unlike an allergic reaction though, the cephalopod controls which of the pigment spots to expand and contract to achieve the desired colors and pattern. What’s more, a selection of skin textures, such as smooth, pebbly or spiky, are available to achieve an optimal match to background.

Life being imperfect, the octopus’s cover is still sometimes blown, requiring it to simply flee from a predator. Using a form of locomotion, jet propulsion, (not devised at Cal Tech), the animal employs its funnel to which jets of water are passed. The result is a speedy, yet backwards, exit. For an extra measure of security, the cephalopod may squirt a cloud of dense, dark ink, which it synthesizes and stores for just such emergencies. The few seconds that it takes until the smoke clears and the predator realizes it’s been duped is typically all that’s needed for the octopus to escape. I can further attest that the ink ejected is not just any blob but a doppelganger of the real deal. How it does this is a mystery. I wonder that the predator is as flummoxed by the decoy octopus as I am amazed by the sleight of ink.

The chromatophores may also take on the opposite function, that of promoting visibility. Time when an octopus doesn’t want to be invisible include when taking an aggressive stance or in social situations, like wooing a mate. Here, the octopus dons color, pattern, and textural skin changes that make for an eye-popping splash. Whether it’s to hide

SCIENCE briefs

New ending to an old ‘tail’

In stark contrast to normal cells, which only divide a finite number of times before they enter into a permanent state of growth arrest or simply die, cancer cells never cease to proliferate. Scientists at the Salk Institute have uncovered a clue to one of the mechanisms underlying cancer cell immortality.

Their findings, published in the April 22 issue of Molecular Cell, reveal an unanticipated structure at chromosome ends, which could be a key ingredient in the biological “elixir of life,” potentially making it an attractive chemotherapeutic target to shorten lives of cancer cells.

“How tumor cells evade cell death is still baffling to us, but we think we may have solved a small piece of this puzzle,” said Jan Karlseder, Ph.D., a professor in the molecular and cell biology lab and leader of the research team.

A lynchpin to the immortality of malignant cells is the ability to maintain telomeres, the specialized ends of chromosomes. Like slow-burning fuses, telomeres become shorter each time a cell divides, acting as a cellular clock ticking down a cell’s age. Eventually, cells are depleted and they enter senescence, a permanently arrested state. To escape this inevitable demise, about 90 percent of human tumors rely on a huge boost in the levels of an enzyme called telomerase, which adds DNA to telomeres, thus turning the clock backwards.

‘Hyperthermals’ a guide to anticipated climate change

Bursts of intense global warming lasting tens of thousands of years have taken place more frequently throughout history than previously believed, according to evidence gathered by a research team led by the Scripps Institution of Oceanography.

Richard Norris, a professor of geology at Scripps who co-authored the report, said releases of carbon dioxide sequestered in the deep oceans were the most likely trigger of these ancient “hyperthermal” events. Most of the events raised average global temperatures between two and three degrees Celsius (3.6 and 5.4 Fahrenheit, respectively), an amount comparable to current conservative estimates of how much temperatures are expected to rise in coming decades as a consequence of anthropogenic global warming. Most hyperthermals lasted about 40,000 years before temperatures normalized.

“These hyperthermals seem not to have been rare events,” Norris said. “Hence, there are lots of ancient examples of global warming on a scale broadly like the expected future warming. We can use these events to examine the impact of global change on marine ecosystems, climate and ocean circulation.”

The hyperthermals took place about every 400,000 years during a warm period some 50 million years ago. The strongest of them coincided with an event known as the Paleocene-Eocene Thermal Maximum, the transition between two geologic epochs in which global temperatures rose between four and seven degrees Celsius and needed 200,000 years to return to historical norms. The events stopped taking place around 40 million years ago, when the planet entered a cooling phase. No warming events of the magnitude of these hyperthermals have been detected in the geological record since then.

A blue jewel, a centennial year and a think tank

with Vincent Andrunas

Last Wednesday, the ladies of Las Patronas (LP) threw a brunch to remind us all that their 65th annual Jewel Ball is coming up on August 6 — just over three months from now. Widely recognized as the most significant social event in the greater San Diego area, the ball is a very hot ticket (wait just a little too long, and you may become sadly familiar with the words “sold out”). The spectacular event (for which LP members labor practically all year long) also does more to help numerous community causes than most people can imagine, with proceeds consistently in the high six figures — and more. In a social sense, it’s great fun, and a perfect place to “see and be seen.”

Brunch attendees enjoyed a “fashion show” of evening gowns from the past six decades, and were treated to a preview of the décor for the 2011 Jewel Ball, dubbed “Sapphire.” Take note: this will be one of the glittering jewels in Jewel Ball history, and attendees are in store for some nice surprises.

Our San Diego Symphony (SDS), currently celebrating its centennial year, has been doing much to ensure that they’ll be around to celebrate a second centennial 100 years from now. One of their most successful stratagems has been their Partner With a Player (PWP) program, an idea credited to SDS Artistic Director Jahja Ling and implemented six years ago. Participants choose an SDS musician to partner with, to the tune of $10,000 to $150,000 per year. Seventy-eight SDS musicians now have partners; only four “orphans” remain (so there’s still a chance for other donors to participate!).

Partner: Ted and Joyce Strauss, Bill and Lori Walton, Jahja Ling (SDS artistic director)

Partner: Marjie Atwood, Rachel Grosvenor, Ward Gill, (SDS executive director), Becky Ivans-Downer and Russell Downer

PWP participants gathered at Symphony Hall on last Thursday for a cocktail reception, concert, and dinner.

Partner: Lisette Farrell, Sheryl Sutton, Evelyn Lamden, Dave and Phyllis Snyder

For the concert performance, which featured nine movements by eight noted composers, the partners were seated onstage adjacent to the musicians they sponsored, enjoying a unique and thrilling musical experience. Sponsors and musicians then enjoyed a fabulous dinner created by Jeff Strauss and his Pamplemousse Grille. As part of SDS’ Centennial Campaign, this year’s PWP program generated $950,000 in revenue — a $400,000 increase over last year. Additionally, some very generous sponsors stepped up to endow their musicians’ chairs with a melodious $1 million to $2 million, ensuring their continued future funding. Others donated similarly significant amounts to name various areas of Copley Symphony Hall, and an anonymous $500,000 matching grant will double other donations made through June 30. Altogether, SDS, having achieved Tier 1 status as one of the country’s top symphonies, is enjoying a very significant centennial year, and ensuring its long-term future.

The mission of Girls Think Tank (GTT) is to inspire, empower and organize people within our community to advance basic human dignity through activism and advocacy. Founded in 2006 by a group of female attorneys, the group has widened to include men, and homeless people actively contribute as well. La Jolla’s Bill and Michelle Lerach lent their showpiece seaside manse for the organization’s Big Easy Masquerade fundraiser this past Saturday. Nearly 300 guests, most in masks and costumes, arrived to laissez les bon temps roulez, enjoying the house and extensive gardens, tempting libations, the Zm Zzy jazz band, tasty New Orleans-style buffet foods by Authentic Flavors, and decadent desserts by Michelle Lerach’s own Cups organic cupcakery in La Jolla.

The highly-successful event was beyond a sellout, suggesting this popular group has a great future in store. Live and silent auctions attracted many, and a casino with blackjack, craps, and roulette — and even a Texas hold ‘em poker tournament — added to the excitement. Raffle prizes were drawn every 45 minutes. Elva Salinas, dressed as a southern belle, won a first prize in

La Jolla designer: Royal Wedding an 'affair of the hat'

Rhodes reminisces about making dresses for Princess Di

By CLAIRE HARLIN | VILLAGE NEWS

Everyone is talking about the Royal Wedding. Everyone. But what better person to opine on the glamour and fashion of the majestic marriage between Prince William and Kate Middleton than La Jollan Zandra Rhodes, an internationally known fashion designer who has experience designing dresses for none other than the late Diana, Princess of Wales. Not to mention, her star-studded client list also includes Jackie Onassis, Elizabeth Taylor and Freddie Mercury of the rock group Queen.

But this past week, Rhodes was in London, where she headed after appearing for "Brit-Week" at the Neiman Marcus in Beverly Hills. She said she watched the Royal Wedding on TV at a party with friends, and her main take on the event is that it was "an affair of the hat."

"You are more aware of the hats than anything else, besides the beautiful bride and her dress, of course," she said in a May 3 telephone interview from Seattle, where she is working on costumes for the "Magic Flute" opera. Rhodes' designs were also featured last month in La Jollan John Malashock's acclaimed production of "The Floating World."

Rhodes designed about a dozen dresses for Princess Di in the 1980s, she said, her most notable being a pale pink off-shoulder dress that was worn with pearls when the princess was pregnant. She said it was a "beautiful, classic dress, something that could have belonged to Grace Kelly."

She said she was honored to have been commissioned to make dresses for Diana, who she said "did the job well, and wore her clothes well."

This sketch illustrates Zandra Rhodes' design of a classic, pink dress worn by Princess Diana in the 1980s. Drawing by Zandra Rhodes or display, it takes a fraction of a second (like blushing) to bring out yellow, brown, white, pink, or a variety of mottled colors.

Highlights Hidden Pictures are now also online but this version has a twist. When players find an object, which is camouflaged in the monochromatic picture, they tap it with the computer mouse, and it turns to color. So we are once again in synch because in my underwater version, the camera's flash does the same, separating the octopus from its otherwise background camouflage. Play my interpretation, and see if you can find the octopi in the pictures posted here. Some are easy, some not so much. For the later, first look for the eyes (black slits), then find the rest.

K9 PHYSICAL THERAPY/REHAB CUTTING EDGE K9 REHAB www.cuttingedgek9.com We have Been Featured On Local And National News, Radio And A Number Of Local Papers And Magazine Articles. Swimming is one of our strongest recommendations for most K9's. It is an ideal form of exercise for a number of reasons. We offer assisted swimming in a warm water environment. The benefits are: • Non-weight-bearing (reducing stress on joints) • Facilitates full use of the front and hind legs vs. partial use as seen with underwater tread-mills • Dogs are often able to actively swim although unable to move their legs on land (due to stroke/ spinal injury) • Allows manual techniques by therapist/ manual resistance to an affected limb • Swimming in a controlled environment is the safest way for clients to exercise. • Speeds recovery following injury/ surgery • Improves function and quality of life

• Works reciprocal muscle groups throughout the session (helps correct muscle imbalances) • Reduces pain and inflammation • Reduces canine obesity thus decreasing the risk of other health-related problems • Increases strength, range of motion and cardiovascular conditioning • Prevents overheating through proper water temp • Increases tolerance for extended cardiovascular training • Decreases recovery time • Reduces post-exercise soreness • Provides good cross training for the competitive, athletic dog (619) 227-7802
