Big grays still a mystery

By JOHNNY McDONALD
VILLAGE NEWS

We can recall Kirk Douglas strumming a ukulele and singing in a Disney movie, "I've got a whale of a tale to tell you."

Well, this time of year curious San Diegans will board all sorts of boats to get close glimpses of the mass migrating pods of whales passing by, not far from our shores. And maybe they'll have tales, too.

Although we can get within spouting range, scientists are still trying to learn more about them.

"We don't know about their life-span in the water or their specific methods of communication," said Kristin Evans, director of education at Birch Aquarium. "There's still a lot of mystery about these animals."

Regarding ship-whale collision reports, Evans said, "I can speak to the migration but not the complications they might encounter."

A few weeks ago, the carcass of a fin whale was found on the Point Loma shore, an obvious victim of a collision with a ship.

"These spectacular animals travel between 12,000 and 14,000 miles from the Bering Sea, leaving in October to eventually reach Mexico's lagoons," she said. "It's a time for humans and these huge animals to meet ... hopefully it's positive. Although they begin passing here in December and early January, the largest number goes by in February."

"Their return to the north in late March or April is swifter and usually farther out at sea, possibly because of a different current."

The whales aren't in a hurry, usually moving about three to five miles an hour, occasionally diving to the bottom for food.

The aquarium charts Flagships Cruises' tour boats for sight-seers. Passengers are likely to spot frolicking dolphins and porpoises along the way.

Evans said the whales, numbering about 20,000, have been at the brink of extinction twice, but have been able to bounce back.

Name change — The La Jolla Motor Car Classic at the Cove will now be known as the La Jolla Concours d'Elegance and is scheduled for April 1.

After all, that's really what it's been for the past seven years anyway.

La Jollans IN LOVE

Two pairs of college sweethearts will spend Valentine's Day together — one for the very first time as a married couple, the other for the 53rd year in a row.

By MARIKO LAMB | VILLAGE NEWS

Rodger and Mary Heglar

One was a quiet scholar; the other was a feisty "folk-singing, guitar-playing, beer-slinging" type of gal. At the beginning of their relationship, some said they wouldn't last six months because of their differences. But they had one underlying foundation that was solid as a rock: love.

On Valentine's Day this year, Rodger and Mary Heglar will celebrate their 53rd anniversary together, defying the odds their fellow graduate student colleagues gambled against them — and by quite a margin.

The duo met at the University of Michigan in 1959.

"She snuck up on me," Rodger said. "I hadn't left Seattle for a whole year yet, and bam! I was married."

Mary, an undergraduate journalism major and anthropology minor, and Rodger, who was working on his anthropology doctorate at the time, frequented the same lounge on campus where they met.

"I walked in and there he was. He was studying for his doctorate, and he hung out in the lounge," said Mary. "Pretty soon, I started hanging out in the lounge."

After getting married on an icy, cold Valentine's Day by the county court judge in Ann Arbor, the duo finished up school, took their honeymoon in August, and began their lives together — eventually landing at San Francisco State University.

"Rodger was one of the pioneers of forensic anthropology. We were connected to the San Francisco Medical Examiner's Office, so he would teach in the daytime, and at nighttime, he'd go out on these homicide cases," Mary said. "When we came down here [to San Diego] in '88, he was connected here to the San Diego Medical Examiner's Office for years. He still gets cold cases."

Mary, too, was a pioneer in her own right as one of only two female reporters at the time to cover Formula One racing — even publishing a book, "The Grand Prix Champions."

"It worked out very well, thanks to Rodger," she said. "Talk about teamwork — he made sure our daughter got to school and did all the house stuff when I was off with these people."

More than 23 years ago, the couple retired — White Sands in La Jolla beckoned them in from the minute they walked through the door — and both remain active on the Residents' Association, where they have each served terms as president and vice president.

When it comes to breeding — or not — head-gear is all important. There is a season — Tern! Tern! Tern!

By JUDITH LEA GARFIELD | VILLAGE NEWS

Who doesn't get excited when royalty comes to town? Presently holding court in our midst is the royal tern (Thalasseus maximus), a standout among shorebirds, always terrifically turned (dare I say) out in a sophisticated mix of neutrals and just a pop of color. Co-mingling with other species adjacent to the beach break at La Jolla Shores, the royal tern might be just another avian marked by black, gray and white plumage that hangs out here or passes through the area but for its dagger-like orange-red bill — talk about a snazzy accessory! But a purely minimalist look can be striking, too, and this is true for the royal tern, who is typically decked out in a white forehead, wispy black crest, pale-gray back and wings, white under parts with just an edge of dark, and ebony legs and feet. Sizewise, a royal tern is crow-size, but lacks the gift of gab heard from the latter. Though usually taciturn from my experience, a verbalizing royal tern calls out in short, clear shrills, also communicating with a longer, rolling and more melodious whistle.

Seasons, breeding and juveniles reveal slightly altered looks but in the same "color" palate. Winter is the only time I see royal terns on the sandy beach at La Jolla Shores, and during this time, the bird's crown is almost entirely white with just some inconspicuous black spotting forward of the black crest. During February, the onset of breeding season, royals acquire a black skullcap of plumage that covers the rear half of the crown and extends forward to completely envelop the eye area. Breeding birds of both sexes share this inscrutable look. As for nesting, it won't happen in La Jolla because tern couples prefer an estuary to an open coast. Even so, they have no history of nesting in any significant numbers in San Diego's inland waterways, preferring to

ARTS finds a way to survive

ARTS: A Reason to Survive, a nonprofit based in Liberty Station in Point Loma was burglarized in late January, prompting employees and the children who frequent the organization to wonder who would rob such an establishment.

Five iMac computers were stolen in the burglary, along with their contents: the artistic works of several of the children, including music recordings, graphic designs and photography projects, to name a few. Also stolen was an information video describing the program, which uses visual, performing and literary arts to help children coping with issues like homelessness, terminal illness and domestic violence.

"The computers will be replaced, but a lot of students lost their work," said La Jollan Kathryn Stephens, director of development for ARTS. "But for them, they're so used to facing adversity, they kind of shrug it off and start re-creating what they lost."

Stephens said insurance will cover part of the loss, but only at the computers' current value — and some of them were up to four years old. The organization will have to make up the difference — including some expensive software that was also lost in the theft.

In response to the theft, some La Jollans are rolling up their sleeves to help. Jennifer Spengler and her husband, Michael, owners of Studio M Photography in Bird Rock, are organizing an online fundraiser to help ARTS recoup what it lost.

During the month of February, donations to the organization will give back to the donor in the form of a photo package from Studio M. Cash donations between $50 and $500 will be rewarded with a session and prints, depending on the amount of the donation. Donations can be made online or in person.

Rodger spends his time capturing ever-changing scenes around La Jolla with the tip of his paintbrush, working on plein-air creations. He also teaches art classes to residents and small private parties. Mary, meanwhile, enjoys watching sports like football, basketball and attending events like the Festival of Sail.

The qualities Rodger and Mary saw in each other more than 50 years ago remain alive and still growing today.

"It was her openness and her intelligence," said Rodger, turning to his wife. "I thought, 'This is one sharp person.' Still are. Always will be. Very well read, very educated. Realistic. There didn't seem to be anyone quite like you amongst everyone I knew."

"It's not an easy thing to express," said Mary. "You were well-grounded. I like the way you approached whatever you were doing. You were fully engaged. The sexual attraction was there, of course, but it was the way you approached your work. It was the way you were with your buddies. You just had style."

Even after 53 years of marriage, the two are still discovering more about each other.

"New things come up all the time," Mary said. "We don't stagnate. We are always pushing the envelope, so we always learn about each other."

As for what advice they can offer to newlyweds?

"Learn to communicate. Don't let things build up or nag at you. Talk things out and figure out your priorities — what's really important. So the toothpaste is squeezed from the bottom and you do it from the top — how important is that?" Mary said. "Communication is a priority."

Rodger agreed.

"Even in our written marriage vows, it said there would be space between us, but respect for each other," Rodger said. "I can't imagine any other person, I really can't. The wrinkles are coming, some things aren't working quite right, but we're equal in that, and it's understood. If something happens to one person, the other person absorbs that, then helps or worries about that without hovering over each other."

And in the end, all you need is love.

"Of course love is at the base," said Mary. "Once you've got that, it's a given."

Yu Xie and Will Collins

Newlyweds Yu Xie, 28, and Will Collins, 30, are certainly open to sound advice, while also forging their own path — a life that will undoubtedly contain many years of good food, fine wine and each other's company.

The two first met at UC San Francisco as medical students. A year and a half ago, they moved together from San Francisco to start their internal medicine residencies at UC San Diego.

Collins said Xie was the "prettiest girl in the room, and she always seemed to be laughing and smiling," a trait that couldn't help but catch his eye.

Xie said she was taken by Collins' kindness to her and everyone he encountered.

In October last year, the two made their love official by tying the knot in an ocean-front wedding ceremony at the La Jolla Country Club.

"The ceremony was outdoors on the first fairway overlooking the ocean. It was a perfect day — most are in La Jolla — and there were even whale sightings that day," Xie said.

Collins' brother-in-law officiated the 120-guest ceremony, and the family dog, Downy, served as the couple's ring-bearer.

After escaping to the beach at sunset for photos, Xie changed into a traditional Chinese dress for the reception, and the two showed off their dancing skills with a choreographed dance from a YouTube video.

"We think we did a good job because afterward people asked if we took dance lessons," Xie said.

In addition to chemistry and partnership on the dance floor, Xie and Collins share the same sensibility, as well as an understanding for each other's demanding work schedules.

"We both enjoy talking to the other. We laugh at the same jokes," Xie said. "We are doing our residency together, so we can be supportive and understanding of the stressful schedule. We can also share stories with each other about the patients or experiences that really affected us."

When the two are not working, they enjoy hiking and playing tennis, and both emphasize family as a top priority.

"We try to have dinner with our families regularly and go back to China once a year to see Yu Xie's family," said Collins. "I am trying to learn Mandarin so I can talk to Yu Xie's family when we go back to China."

Calling each other husband and wife is new and exhilarating, said Xie.

The two intend to keep that excitement up by celebrating their monthly anniversary on the eighth day of each month, trying a new restaurant around town they have never tried before.

The two will spend their first Valentine's Day together as husband and wife over sushi, a movie and a mini-version of their wedding cake for dessert — and the anticipation of the next 50 years together, built up from a solid foundation of love.

La Jolla post office gets some clout in its corner

Erin Demorest, representative for District 1 City Councilwoman Sherri Lightner, announced the councilwoman is working with the mayor's office, local congressional representatives and a U.S. senator to try to save the Wall Street post office.

"We know that is important to a lot of you in La Jolla, and we hope you all can join us in fighting to save that post office," Demorest said.

Trustee Joe LaCava reiterated the importance of the community to get involved quickly.

"This is really important for us as a community to come together and get organized on this," he said. "This movement is only two weeks old, but it's going to be a very fast fight. This could be over in 60 to 90 days. The post office has the right to move that fast, so I hope you all pay attention and get involved, and stay tuned and try to figure out a strategy to benefit the community as a whole."

Fireworks shows may be off CEQA's hook

State legislators are seeking ways to change the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) to exempt certain one-time special events employing fireworks shows from environmental review, announced Demorest.

"The La Jolla Fireworks Show and a lot of special events that are near and dear to us are at stake, so we want to do everything we can to try to preserve those," she said.

For LJ Shores PDO, size does matter

The city attorney responded to trustees' requests in September for the City Council to confirm that citywide floor area ratio (FAR) constraints exist in all zones, including the La Jolla Shores Planned District.

"The city attorney was not comfortable with that approach at all," said Demorest. "They are recommending that we go through a full La Jolla Shores PDO amendment process to amend the PDO to include floor area ratio if that is the route that the community wants to go."

Lifeguard station to get a new lease on life

Trustees voted to approve a site development permit and coastal development permit for a proposed modification to the La Jolla Cove lifeguard station, including the addition of an accessible ramp from the street level to the mid-level deck to comply with ADA requirements.

The project entails three components including the replacement of the tower itself, a new view deck, and a new, sloped ADA-compliant walkway from the park level to the view deck and mid-level landing. Two benches, cubbies and an informational sign for the La Jolla Cove Swim Club will also be constructed as part of the project.

The project is expected to begin in the fall.

Shores neighbors call for committee member's resignation

La Jolla Shores resident Peggy Davis and neighbors urged Michael Morton's resignation from the La Jolla Shores Permit Review Committee, due to what she said was his misrepresentation of the Gato project, located at 8368 Paseo del Ocaso, which is currently under construction.

"Michael Morton's behavior has been unethical, self-serving and we request Michael Morton's resignation from the La Jolla Shores PRC. We are also requesting that he not serve on any La Jolla community committee that represents La Jolla, including the La Jolla Community Planning Association," she said. "Michael Morton presented untrue statements to the La Jolla Shores Permit Review Committee, the La Jolla Shores Community Planning Association, and development services at the city of San Diego. If you go down there, you can see the community's concerns about this massive structure that should never have been built."

Jones' former housekeeper gets 4-year prison term

By NEAL PUTNAM | VILLAGE NEWS

A former housekeeper of La Jolla cookbook author Jeanne Jones was sentenced Jan. 30 to four years in state prison for stealing jewelry from Jones.

Carla Rosela Carrillo, 44, was also ordered to pay more than $16,000 to Jones. Her boyfriend, Lamont Long, 30, will be sentenced March 2 and is expected to share that restitution order.

Carrillo was also given eight months consecutively for stealing clothing from a Gap store in La Jolla while she was out on bail for stealing jewelry from Jones. San Diego Superior Court Judge Eugenia Eyherabide gave Carrillo credit for having already served 480 days in jail.

Carrillo pleaded guilty Sept. 23 to residential burglary of Jones' residence that involved her taking jewelry and giving it to Long, who sold some of it at jewelry stores. Long pleaded guilty to receiving stolen property.

Deputy District Attorney C.J. Mody said all of the clothing taken from the Gap store was recovered, so no restitution was ordered in that theft. Carrillo also pleaded guilty to burglary in that case.

Court records show Carrillo was convicted of burglary in 1999 and attempted theft in 1995. Long, who is free on bond, has no criminal record and he is expected to get probation, said Mody.

In an unrelated case, four men were sentenced Sept. 16 to long terms in prison, also for stealing jewelry from Jones' house during a home-invasion robbery and assault on Nov. 5, 2010. Most of the stolen jewelry in that incident was recovered by police.

Thomas Walter Clark, 42, got 45 years in prison on Sept. 16 for the robbery in which a housekeeper was sent to the hospital. Aaron Espinoza, 24, and Hector Guerra, 31, each got 26 years and four months, and Miguel Ocegueda, 25, received 14 years and four months in prison.

UCHS boys' soccer in line for record season

By MORGAN CARMODY | VILLAGE NEWS

Coming off of last season's CIF win against St. Augustine High School, University City High School's (UCHS) boys' 2011-12 soccer team had some big shoes to fill. The team is aiming high, again aspiring to get into the CIF competition — and to win.

The team is currently ranked 19th in California and 41st in the nation.

Under the skilled leadership of head coach Erik Andersen, the season has seen success with an overall record of 14-1-2, with ties against Cathedral Catholic and St. Augustine. The team recently had its first loss against Cathedral on Feb. 1.

Both Cathedral and St. Augustine are competitors in the Western Athletic League and are, Anderson said, "probably our toughest competition."

The team's strengths, Andersen said, lie in the defense, a concept the team has been working on of late, as well as in "good leadership from the seniors and the captains."

As for their success thus far, Andersen said humility has taken hold.

"You don't hear the boys talking about it," he said. "Though it does put more of a target on our back. ... Other teams want to knock you off a pedestal."

Captains Martin Cisneros, Travis Nicklaw and Spencer Williams know their success at this point in the season is merely the icing on a cake yet to come.

"It feels good, but it doesn't mean anything until CIF," Nicklaw said.

Williams agreed, adding the team must continue focusing on what has gotten them this far.

"We need to maintain and execute these shutouts," he said.

Andersen said one of the struggles the team has faced was "trying to get everyone on the same page." Cisneros echoed this in saying, "We're just becoming a team."

Andersen, who is also the assistant director for the club soccer team Notts Forest Football Club, said the majority of the boys also play club soccer in the off-season. Their dedication to the sport, as well as to academics, has to be real.

"Injured or not, they are expected to be here," he said.

The team is also spending time focusing on getting healthy and recovering from injuries. Andersen has had a chance to develop his bench and his JV team — which bodes well for future seasons — so UCHS can continue its reign.

"We have a good group for next year," he said.

UCSD's basketball team faces final hurdles

By MORGAN CARMODY | VILLAGE NEWS

UCSD's women's basketball team has jumped twelve rankings since the beginning of the season to finally achieve the number one rank in the USA Today/ESPN Coaches Poll for Div. 2 schools with its undefeated record thus far.

"We don't talk about it," head coach Charity Elliott said of the ranking, "and try to keep blinders on."

It's this unwavering determination that has proven successful for Elliott and the team. Although she acknowledged the ranking is a "huge honor," she tries to keep her team focused, she said.

"We are constantly talking about 'our standard' and asking ourselves if we are playing to our standard," she said.

The UCSD standard seems to be marked by a fast tempo game with great defense and an upbeat playing style.

The team was disappointed it did not make the regional tournament last year after losing to Cal Poly Pomona in the CCAA tournament, Elliott said, but it was perhaps that loss that helped them build this season's team when they started training last spring.

Their hard work, meanwhile, seems to be paying off. The only losses the team has suffered so far were two exhibition games, against perennial powerhouse Stanford and SDSU — both Div. 1 teams. Elliott said those games were actually "good confidence boosters," because the team was able to "find out in a hurry their strengths and weaknesses against that caliber of team."

Some of her team's strengths, she said, is coming from its seniors, Chelsea Carlisle,

Daisy Feder and Lauren Freidenberg. With its aggressive playing style with a lot of fast breaks and trapping on defense, the team is "very unselfish in that it isn't centered on just one player," Elliott said. "We are constantly looking for players with high caliber character and the potential to be program changing."

Meanwhile, she described her coaching style as "extremely positive with high expectations."

She said some of the challenges her team faces come in the form of recruiting with such high academic standards at UCSD and the lack of available scholarships. Elliott, however, has managed to use that situation to her advantage.

"It gives us the opportunity to give more

Though out of my sight, by late June, the birds' black caps have receded, revealing their typical white forehead with black stubble near the crest. Juvenile royal terns look similar to nonbreeding adults but youngsters have black-spotted wings and an orangey bill that may lean more toward yellow instead of red.

Sources suggest a royal tern does not have a strong seasonal pattern, being found along San Diego County's coast year round. Maybe so, but whenever a royal is seen, count on it being near seawater — a commitment likely connected to its favored prey choice, small fish like anchovies and sardines. The mercurial movements — and booms and busts — of these fish species are one reason the status of royal terns has been poorly understood throughout the 20th century. We are only beginning to document changes in behavior of seabirds and correlate them with their prey (in terms of numbers and distribution fish). The point is to understand how the changes relate to fishing pressures on these important prey and global climate change. Since seabirds that nest with success can expect to be widely distributed across their range, decreases in their numbers or change in their expected range provide quick and visible proof. Though the royal tern is no

In my speck of range that intersects

Construction will run from March to June.

- Anu Delouri, representative from UCSD's Physical and Community Planning, announced that five projects will begin construction in 2012, including the renovation of the University House and construction of the Jacob's Medical Center, a 225-inpatient medical facility on the east campus.

- Trustee elections will take place prior to the annual member meeting next month on March 1. Elections will take place from 3 to 7 p.m. in the room just north of the arcade at the La Jolla Recreation Center. The annual member meeting will begin at 6 p.m.

- The LJCPA voted to ratify the appeal of the Hennessey's Sidewalk Cafe project, which will be heard by the planning commission on Feb. 16.

- The LJCPA approved the new signage for Rush Indoor Cycle Studio, street closures for the San Diego Sports Commission Triathlon on May 11 and 12, and Bird Rock Fine Wine's conformance to the La Jolla PDO.

- The LJCPA voted to approve the bylaws submitted by the Ad Hoc Committee on Bylaws, taking into consideration suggestions made by trustees and the public at the meeting and incorporating a motion to ratify appeals by a majority vote. The bylaws will be presented to the public for review by the association's membership at next month's meeting.

NEWSbriefs*Saving pets, one designer handbag at a time

The Foundation for Animal Care and Education (FACE), which strives to help pets by relieving pet owners of the economic hardships that may cause them to give up or euthanize a family pet, is currently seeking new and used designer handbag donations and sponsorships from individuals and businesses in the San Diego community for its upcoming Bags & Baubles event.

On Sunday, April 29, fashionistas will gather at a private Rancho Santa Fe estate to bid new and gently-used designer handbags to benefit the foundation. More than 200 handbags will be available for bid at the auction, which begins at 10-15 percent of retail value.

The organization is collecting bags for the event, and is calling on local ladies to clean out their closets. The tax-deductible gift may help save the life of a local pet.

Surf Diva nominated for retailer award

Coco and Izzy Tihanyi, founders of La Jolla-based Surf Diva Boutique, announced their nomination as the Surf Industry Manufacturer's Association (SIMA) Women's Retailer of the Year and Breakthrough Retailer of the year.

"We are so stoked to be recognized by the surf industry as one of the top five retailers," said Coco. "It's a huge honor for Surf Diva and everyone who has supported us along the way."

Surf Diva features a mix of beach fashion with women's surf apparel and has demonstrated a strong commitment to the community, supporting environmental and local programs. The company became the leading retailer for the San Diego Junior Lifeguard uniform program this year.

"Working with the community to make our beaches cleaner and safer is a priority for us," said Coco.

UCSD celebrates Black History Month

UC San Diego will present a series of exhibits and events in celebration of Black History month throughout the winter and spring at the school's Geisel Library. All events are free and open to the public.

• Stitching Memories: The Story of African American Quilting

An exhibit about the creation and significance of quilts to African American women will be held from Feb. 1 to March 31 on the main floor in the west wing of Geisel Library. In addition to the exhibit, a reception and panel discussion will be held on Feb. 15 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Seuss Room. The exhibit includes works of the quilters from the San Diego People of Color Quilt Guild, which challenge the commonly held misconception that African American quilts comprise only strip quilts, patchworks or rustic creations that reflect what many scholars claim to be an African aesthetic. The exhibit dispels that notion, with examples of "quilted photography," art quilts and more traditional quilts.

• Magic Lanterns from the 1800s Shed Light on African Diaspora

Magic lanterns dating back to the 19th century will be on display from Feb. 1-29 in the UC San Diego Arts Library (lower level, west wing) in Geisel Library. The hand-painted glass magic lantern slides on display depict images of Africa and celebrate and raise awareness of the African Diaspora.

According to Scott Paulson, outreach coordinator for the UC San Diego Arts Library and the owner of the magic lanterns on display, perhaps the earliest views Americans saw of Africa came in the form of magic lantern shows (hand-painted glass slides that were used in early gaslamp-powered projectors). Even as early as the 1600s and 1700s, lively lantern shows employed early animation techniques, narration and live music to show the culture of other continents.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Letter writers in glass houses shouldn't throw stones

Both of the letters [published last week ("Oceans need protection from overfishing," armchair biologists," "Southern Californians must stand up for our oceans," wildlife's health," Feb. 2, Page 6)] were written by WILDCOAST personnel, the first by Dr. Dedina, executive director, and the other by Ms. Casteneda, communications director.

The clear inference is that since both of these people represent a nonprofit environmental organization that they have formal training in marine science-related disciplines. Dr. Dedina has an undergraduate degree in political science and graduate degrees in geography. Ms. Casteneda has a degree in communications. Therefore, the argument that Mr. Carl Lind is an "armchair biologist" is spurious at best, and slanderous at worst, since the personnel making this accusation have, themselves, apparently received no formal training in the marine sciences.

The examples cited as proof that establishing marine protected areas (MPAs) will allow ecosystems to rebound is an old concept. It is obvious that if you do not harvest a given species, individuals will live longer, become larger and reproduce more. No one argues that. The concept of restoring an ecosystem by restricting the take of ALL species rather than establishing season, size and bag limits on harvested species effectively destroys any hope of rational ecosystem management.

Both WILDCOAST writers cited the restoration of Cabo Pulmo at the tip of Baja California. There were some conceptual flaws in the manner in which the data from this site were evaluated; if one read and understood the original paper, these actual or potential flaws would have been seen. But why use an example from a tropical reef system in Baja California to make a point when there has been a no-take reserve off La Jolla for a quarter century? Is there no good example in our backyard?

There are several excellent examples of small Mexican villages recognizing they have been overfishing their resources and have initiated bag, season and size limits on exploited species, thus guaranteeing the replenishment of the marine resources upon which they survive. This has occurred at Bahia Tortugas and La Bocana on the west coast of Baja California. The major cash crops of both villages are lobsters and abalone. Both villages have abalone hatcheries, allow controlled fishing and have effective marine game wardens to prevent poaching.

Let's get away from the "sky is falling" and look toward effective, yet balanced, management strategies. Much can be accomplished with rational, flexible controls.

Setting the record straight on community controversy

In a letter written by Kim Whitney, published in a recent edition of the La Jolla Village News ("Custodians of La Jolla's codes must be up to code themselves," Feb. 2, Page 6), my name is mentioned and there are a few misstatements that I believe justify some clarification. Mrs. Whitney was responding to a letter I wrote that was published in another newspaper (La Jolla Light, Jan. 26).

Editing errors in the Kim Whitney letter assert that I am a trustee of the LJCPA. I am not a trustee of LJCPA, nor do I sit on any LJCPA or La Jolla Shores committee. Another editing error makes it seem as if I am a neighbor of the Whitneys and at sometime acted as their architect. This is not correct. I have never met the Whitneys and, although I was born and have lived in La Jolla for 60 years, I do not reside in La Jolla Shores.

With regard to the matter of code compliance issues at the Naegle residence, it is my understanding the Whitneys first complained about the acquisition of building permits issued many years ago. I believe it has been determined that the permits were properly issued and that matter was resolved. The Whitneys are now upset about the conversion of one tandem parking space into an elevator space. This conversion was necessary to allow second-floor access for Dale Naegle, who suffered from polio and had been finding negotiating stairs more and more difficult. I most certainly can forgive the Naegles for making this necessary alteration. The American's With Disabilities Act may have figured in the city's decision to allow the conversion.

I also believe the letter misrepresents Mike Stepner's part in the creation of the La Jolla Shores PDO. Mr. Stepner was not the sole author of the document. I think he had a little help from a few others. In my letter, when I asked, "Who is Mike Stepner?" I was being a bit facetious, posing a metaphorical question; pondering Mr. Stepner's appointment as expert on La Jolla Shores lifestyle and spokesman for the community.

In closing, I would like to urge the Whitneys put their bitterness aside, quit picking on invalids and widows, and begin working with the community to find a successful resolution for their project.

Grief akin to drug withdrawal

Doing
it Better

By Natasha Josefowitz, Ph.D.

Although I have written about this topic before, I have some further thoughts that I would like to now share.

After my husband died, I had a very hard time adjusting to singlehood. Although living in a retirement community helped me survive those awful first months, I was still lonely and bereft.

The way I helped myself was by trying to understand what was happening to me. I started talking to recent widows and widowers and found that they very often experienced the same thing, so I asked myself, what does loneliness mean? It is the lack of a companion, the lack of a witness to your life — someone who knows what you think, read, eat and where you go and who cares. My witness was a caring husband — in a good relationship, one gives and receives constant validation. A knowing look across a room, a hand squeeze, a good conversation, a compliment — whatever makes one feel recognized fulfills the need to feel cared for and care in return.

And from where does that good feeling come? The brain secretes chemicals like dopamine (which helps regulate movement and emotion and is essential to the normal functioning of the central nervous system), oxytocin (the bonding hormone) and endorphins (which reduce the sensation of pain and affect emotions) flooding the body with happy feelings. So being in a relationship where there is mutual support creates pulses of feel-good neurotransmitters and hormones. We get accustomed to these and need them to maintain our brain chemistry. They become a normal part of our being and we get addicted to them. Yes, we become habituated to feel-good substances. When a loved one is away from us for a short time, we use phone calls or emails to stay connected, because they give us small doses to keep us going until we can be with them again.

Now, what happens when that loved one dies? Not only do we mourn, we are also deprived of the endorphins, dopamine, oxytocin, serotonin and other feel-good substances. We are in drug withdrawal!

If this is correct, it could explain the physiological symptoms experienced by a surviving spouse that are akin to drug deprivation: loss of appetite and thus not eating enough (impacting the release of serotonin, a neurotransmitter); trouble sleeping; memory problems; feeling disoriented, listless and unable to engage in an activity; short attention span; depression; crying spells; feeling weak; physical pain; and what seem like psychosomatic symptoms but are actually physiological withdrawal symptoms.

Until we are deprived of them, we are seldom aware of how much we interact with our loved ones and how often our brain chemistry is activated to make us feel good. Parents and children give each other this validation, so do siblings, close friends, co-workers and even pets. People who don't have animals can't understand why the death of one can be so terribly upsetting. Every time your dog makes you smile, every time you pet him, you get a small dose of dopamine to which you become accustomed. When the dog dies, you are deprived of that fix and go into withdrawal.

Every time we have a lifestyle change — be it going off to college, moving to a new neighborhood or leaving a job — we lose some of the reliable ways of feeling good, and we can experience that loss as homesickness.

I am a great believer that, by giving a label to our feelings and making the unconscious conscious, we can exert some control by understanding our feelings and behaviors. Becoming conscious of one's needs can help identify what one must do to better meet them. In other words, knowing that you are in need of some dopamine, what can you do to stimulate its production? Is it by calling up a friend, going to a uplifting movie, listening to music, eating an ice-cream cone, joining a support group, going to a fun event, getting involved in an interesting project, doing volunteer work or whatever else activates the reward centers of the brain. For some people, fond memories can trigger feelings strong enough to release the chemicals.

What helped me were long phone conversations with my children. Also I threw myself into volunteer work and found that helping others provided me with dopamine and therefore helped me in the process.

Because what stimulates those reward centers is different for each one of us, the task for individuals is to figure out what particular thoughts or behaviors seem to trigger an emotional high. Some friends of mine have children who call everyday — and sometimes several times a day. Others have plunged themselves into non-stop activities, which may or may not affect brain chemistry, but do at least decrease cortisol, the stress hormone. Time spent with friends seems to be a universally helpful activity.

Isolating oneself seldom works and can lead to depression. In other words, it may be important to push oneself out of the house, accept invitations, initiate contact with people and not indulge in the at-times-overwhelming desire to give up all interactions and just stay in bed.

The task at hand is to find the activity that will provide some dopamine and other feel good hormones that may help you to cope better.

borderline players opportunities [to play and to prove themselves],” she said.

On Feb. 10, the team will face one of its toughest competitors. Chico State, which lost to UCSD on Jan. 7 in double overtime, will try to redeem itself.

“They played fantastic,” she said, calling the game a “great learning tool.” As for the rematch, her team, she said, is “looking forward to it.”

UCSD has also started a campaign to move up to Div. 1 in NCAA athletics. UCSD, which has competed in Div. 2 since 2000, would like to have all of its athletic teams competing at the Div. 1 level by 2013-14.

Elliott supports the move and said she feels the university is well suited for Div. 1 athletics. The move, however, wouldn't change the way she goes about leading her program. The transition, she said, would probably be a smooth one, as scholarships would be increasingly available at the Div. 1 level. Recruiting against upper level teams, she said, “poses new challenges and would be very exciting.”

“It's not about the division or level but more about changing kid's lives for the positive,” she said. “It's just about enjoying every single day.”

Discover Jewish film in February

By MARIKO LAMB | VILLAGE NEWS

The San Diego Jewish Film Festival (SDJFF) is back again this year from Feb. 9 to 19 with more to discover than ever before — a record-breaking number of exclusive film screenings, events designed for every age group’s whims and fancies, and an international roster of some of the most talented guest artists, actors, filmmakers, directors and scholars the Jewish film industry has to offer.

Screenings of nearly 50 of the best contemporary Jewish-themed films from around the world will be brought right to San Diego’s backyard at five screening locations throughout the county over the course of 11 days.

“Our films appeal to everybody,” said Helen Fleming, SDJFF chairwoman. “They’re interesting, they’re different and you don’t have to be Jewish to come to the film festival.”

Some interesting topics that will be unveiled through the films include a unique feature based on a true story about Muslims that saved Jews during World War II in “Free Men;” the story of drag queens in Israel in “Mary Lou;” a riveting documentary about Phil Spector and the famed songwriter’s murder trial in “The Agony and the Ecstasy of Phil Spector;” and a Spanish-language romantic comedy about a Mexican salsa dancer who sneaks into Israel in “Salsa Tel Aviv” — to name just a few.

“We really have gone all over the spectrum, and our films really try to reach everyone,” Fleming said.

The yearlong undertaking of film selection, event coordination and fundraising is an arduous task that takes a team of dedicated volunteers — including a film selection committee, curator and focus group — who commit their time and efforts before, during and after the festival.

“It’s a huge commitment, but it’s really fun,” said Fleming. “It’s a labor of love. There are about 60 volunteers doing a lot of various things. It’s a large endeavor, and there are so many people behind the scenes that do so much.”

Volunteers on the SDJFF’s film selection committee thoroughly vet more than 200 films throughout the year, each ranked numerically by individuals on the committee.

One of the most difficult tasks, according to Fleming, is ensuring the films are exclusive.

“In this world, it’s hard to find films that aren’t on Netflix,” she said. “We really strive to find films that you cannot find anywhere, and that’s what makes us unique. It’s really difficult, though, because everything is so instant.”

Despite that difficulty, the committee succeeded in uncovering those very films.

This year, SDJFF has doubled up on film screenings to give audience members a chance to catch each of their favorite films. Films will be shown at five locations in San Diego — Clairemont’s Reading Cinemas Town Square 14, UltraStar Mission Valley Cinemas at Hazard Center, Edwards San Marcos Stadium 18, the Carlsbad Village Theatre and the David & Dorothea Garfield Theatre at the Lawrence Family Jewish Community Center in La Jolla.

“Tickets are on sale now, and they’re selling out fast,” Fleming said. “We don’t want anybody to miss anything.”

Single ticket prices for most films are $10.75 to $12.75 for seniors, $11.75 for JCC members, and $13.75 for nonmembers. Tickets for the opening and closing night films are $12.75 to $14.75 for seniors and $13.75 to $15.75 for nonmembers. The Feb. 14 screening of “Dusk,” Family Day, Teen Screen and Joyce Forum Shorts are free. Festival passes, senior and student discounts, and group rate discounts are available.

For more information, visit www.lfjcc.org/sdjff or call (858) 362-1348.

The festival reaches a diverse age range, with forums and events designed for each age group. Here is a preview of the festival’s age-specific events this year:

• “Family Day on Sesame Street” will turn Clairemont’s Reading Cinemas Town Square 14 into a playful atmosphere for families with children 3 to 7 with a screening of “Mitzvah on the Street,” interactive sing-alongs, fun activities and even a guest appearance by a surprise furry friend from the Street. Family Day is free and will take place on Feb. 12 at 11 a.m.

• For parents with children younger than 1, the David & Dorothea Garfield Theatre will host a “Baby & Me” event with a film screening of “David.” Bagels and other snacks will be provided at the event — at 10:30 a.m. on Feb. 14 — and parents don’t have to worry about getting a babysitter, as babies are free.

• “Teen Screen Night” at 6 p.m. on Feb. 14 will feature a pizza dinner for teens only, and the chance to watch the story of an unlikely friendship form between Ali, a 14-year-old Palestinian refugee, and Alexander, an elderly Russian Jew who passionately wants to continue living independently, in “Kaddish for a Friend” at Clairemont’s Reading Cinemas Town Square 14. Teen Screen is open to teens 18 and under at no charge.

• For young professionals in their 20s, 30s and 40s, “Flix Mix” will feature the provocative story of a young, extroverted left-wing activist who sleeps with political opponents to convert them to her cause in “The Names of Love.” The screening at Clairemont’s Reading Cinema Town Square 14 will take place at 5 p.m. on Feb. 19 and will be preceded by a 3 p.m. mixer to mingle with fellow filmgoers over food and drinks. Tickets to “Flix Mix” are $20 in advance or $25 at the door.

• For the 10th year in a row, SDJFF will host its annual “Joyce Forum” — named for SDJFF founder Joyce Axelrod — to celebrate rising stars and seasoned filmmakers from around the world. The free forum on Feb. 13 will showcase a collection of short films at Clairemont’s Reading Cinemas Town Square 14 at 2:30 p.m., as well as a series of animated shorts at 7:30 p.m. One such rising star who will be showcased at the forum is local 11-year-old animator Perry Chen of La Jolla, who collaborated with filmmaking veterans Bill Plympton and Kevin Sean Micheals to create the animated short “Ingrid Pitt: Beyond the Forest,” which can be viewed at the forum at 2:30 p.m.

• Finally, on Feb. 16, “Jews in Toons” will highlight a unique evening of comedy and fun featuring classic Jewish episodes from three animated television series — “Family Guy,” “The Simpsons” and “South Park.” Mike Reiss, writer and producer for “The Simpsons” and creator of “The Critic” and “Queer Duck,” will make a special guest appearance to share some of his side-splitting behind-the-scenes insights, anecdotes and clips from his Emmy Award-winning career.

A clash of cultures and an intersection of disciplines

Starry, starry nights
with Vincent Andrunas

The La Jolla Playhouse (LJP) held a couple of parties in their Play Development Center this past Saturday night — one just before and another immediately after the last opening-night performance of their 2011-12 season.

The evening began with potent specialty drinks dubbed La Jolla Sunrise (1800 Tequila, orange juice and grenadine) and Fever Dream (St. Petersburg Vodka and grapefruit juice), and several food stations offering Mexican dishes (The Hyatt Regency La Jolla donated all the catering). The food and drinks were a match for the performance; Culture Clash's "American Night: The Ballad of Juan José." The play presents a sort of nightlong fever dream of Juan José, a former Mexican policeman immersed in cramming for the U.S. citizenship test he's about to take. Richard Montoya originally wrote the play for the three members of Culture Clash (including himself). They and director Jo Bonney developed it, and the expanded version running at LJP employs a cast of nine ethnically diverse members — but since most play multiple parts, the cast seems much larger.

Shortly before everyone headed to the Potiker Theatre for the play, the director — herself a naturalized U.S. citizen born in Australia — gave some insightful and entertaining commentary about the play's background and development. She noted that citizenship exams require applicants to study American history. They must learn the official version, but some also seek alternate versions written by voices outside of the mainstream, expressing history as seen by such groups as Native Americans, African Americans, Hispanics, Asian Americans, women, etc. This was no preachy political lecture, but the play uses humor (and lots of it!) to open people's eyes and minds.

Once the play began, the humor disarmed even those most sensitized to immigration issues. Culture Clash members are noted for being improvisational and incorporating daily news and local lore into their performances. Their mention of basketball great Bill Walton became more meaningful when playgoers realized that Big Bill and his wife, Lori, were right there in the audience. Energetic cast members kept the barbs and the laughs coming nonstop, appearing and re-appearing as new characters. They did it all without an intermission, earning an enthusiastic standing ovation at the play's end.

Guests reconvened for the after-party, where they enjoyed desserts, libations and dancing to the music of DJ Shammy Dee. Gradually, cast members joined the party, chatting amicably with the admiring through. Their performances will continue through Feb. 26. Following this production, LJP will “stage” something unique called “The Car Plays,” a series of intimate 10-minute plays, each taking place in a car. Two-person audiences will be ushered to their seats in a vehicle, the car doors will close and the drama will unfold just inches away. Ten minutes later, they’ll move to another car for the next play, and in the course of an hour, five stories will be revealed.

“‘The Car Plays’ combines the pleasures of site-specific theatre and voyeurism,” noted Critics Choice (with a wink and a grin, no doubt).

Bringing together seemingly disparate ideas — and disciplines — often yields significant benefits, including greater understanding of issues and more creative solutions to problems. La Jolla’s Birch Aquarium at Scripps and downtown’s New Children’s Museum joined forces and used their contact lists, websites and electronic social media to invite people to their joint event, held at the aquarium on Monday evening. More than 300 people RSVP’d for the gathering, titled “Trash: Art + Science Intersect,” which was free and open to the public.

They had several attractive reasons to attend, including a chance to view the aquarium’s exhibits and network with others while enjoying hosted wine and hors d’oeuvres during the first half of the two-hour event. The next hour featured a fascinating panel discussion about the accumulation of plastic trash in the gigantic North Pacific Gyre, and how both artists and scientists are looking into the issue. The evening was a grand success, and more such events are planned for the future.

Ask the Audiologist!

Question:
When should I have my hearing tested?

More often than not, it’s your family and friends that notice your hearing loss before you do. Hearing loss is usually gradual and your own brain adapts to the changes in hearing, leading you to believe you do not have a hearing loss. So if you hear your family and/or friends tell you it’s time to have your hearing checked ... it’s time!

A large majority of hearing losses begin in the high frequencies. What that means is you lose out on clarity long before volume. “I hear everything; I just don’t understand what people are saying!” There is something we can do about that! There are hearing aids specifically designed for individuals with high frequency hearing losses.

Anytime after the age of 40, your eyes and ears can start losing sharpness, just due to wear & tear. This is a great reason to have your hearing baseline documented.

Other reasons to have your hearing tested:

- Background noise is a problem
- It’s difficult to understand conversations in a group setting
- Your neighbors can hear your television
- You don’t understand speech on your telephone
- Your ears ring (tinnitus)
- You think your spouse is mumbling.

Keep Your Home Safe with the Elderly in Mind

It is important to be aware of certain points in order to make your home safe for the elderly. The RN Care Managers at Innovative Healthcare Consultants are experienced in doing a safety evaluation at any home to give suggestions but the following will give you some ideas:

- Be aware of rugs around the home as the number one injury for the elder is falling.
- Are there rails on the bed to help a person get in and out of bed safely?
- Is your shag or thick pile carpet too difficult for an elderly person to maneuver a walker?
- Is the shower easy to get into with a low lip so the elder doesn’t have to climb over the edge?
- Are there non-slip grippers in the bathroom to prevent falls?
- Is your water heater set at a temperature so the older person can not burn themselves?
- As a person ages they do not feel heat as well and can be burned more easily.
- Is there room for a shower chair in the shower if needed and is the showerhead handheld for ease in using?
- Is the shower seat at the right height?
- Is there a safety rail and raised toilet seat at the right height to help a person get up and down?
- Is the oven “safety-proofed” for a person with Alzheimer’s so they can’t hurt themselves or cause fires?

Want "Top Dollar" For Your La Jolla Home?

Experts Say: Start planning for it 60 to 90 days before you sell. La Jolla (CA) – A recent interview with Jeffrey Middaugh of Coldwell Banker, revealed several helpful tips for anyone who is thinking of selling their La Jolla home.

"Most owners think their homes will sell quickly. Everyone thinks that their home is special and will bring top dollar fast. In fact a lot of all new listings that go on the market eventually expire with the home still unsold."

If you're going to sell your house in the next six months, there are some things you can do now that will help you get top dollar for your home when you do sell it.

There's a free report available that shows you the things that buyers most look for in a home, and how to make your house irresistible to buyers. You'll learn

- Why buyers love model homes and how to make your house show like one.
- A little-known designer's secret that could net you $1,000 to $5,000 more when you sell your home.
- How to sell your house in as little as 24 hours – without ever putting it "on the market."
- Three things you can do to get your house on a buyer's "must see" list.

Jeffrey has compiled a free report that he calls How to Sell Your House for Top Dollar – Fast! This report details several specific ways to prepare your house for sale and how to make your house irresistible to buyers. Jeffrey says the information in this report is the secret to his success in selling homes so quickly, and the reason he can guarantee to sell any house in less than 90 days.
