Sea lion scourge

Rescuers respond as crisis heats up

By KENDRA HARTMANN

As more and more sea lion pups turn up in unexpected places — on roadways, in gardens, even lounging poolside on residential and hotel patios — animal rescuers and marine biologists are fervently searching for a clue to the deluge of malnourished pups that are stranding themselves in alarming numbers along the Southern California coast.

The pups, said Dave Koontz, SeaWorld's director of communications, venture inland in search of food when they can't find adequate sustenance in the ocean. Weak and exhausted, they lack the strength to get back to their natural habitat and have been found resting in most unusual places, including on a patio lounge chair at La Jolla's Pantai Inn. Though it's typical to see young sea lions stranding themselves after weaning — the pups turning up in recent months were likely born last summer — the number of ill and dying pups this year is astronomical, Koontz said.

"As a point of reference, we rescued 131 marine mammals (including sea lions and other marine mammals) in 2012, which is an average year," he said. "This year alone, we've rescued more than 350, and of that, about 330 have been sea lions. It's been an extremely unusual year."

In March, NOAA's National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS) declared an unusual mortality event, or UME, spanning the coast from the Mexican border up to Santa Barbara. Since January, more than 1,100 sea lion pups have been stranded statewide, and the UME will allow the NMFS to determine the cause, or rather the cause behind the cause.

"We know what's going on — the pups' food source is not available — but what they'll try to determine is why," Koontz said.

Sea lions feed mostly on baitfish like anchovies and sardines. The NMFS' task force, made up of veterinarians, marine biologists and other experts, is attempting to determine what has happened to that food source to make the sea lions strand themselves in such great numbers. The causes could range from a depleted stock of baitfish to oceanographic issues (changing water temperatures or currents that could cause the food source to relocate) to disease components and a variety of other causes.

Adding to the problem is that sea lions get their hydration from the food they eat, not from drinking sea water. So, in addition to going hungry the stranded pups are often severely dehydrated. Fortunately, Koontz said, the animals, unlike those limited to the water like dolphins or

Local seeks funding to take rescue gear to FDNY

By ETHAN ORENSTEIN

In a small garage workshop in North Pacific Beach, Kenney Pierce, owner of Life 1 Rescue, develops rescue gear designed to quickly and efficiently save lives. His products are used by lifeguards in San Diego, Coronado, Imperial Beach, Encinitas, the Border Patrol Search and the San Diego County Sherriff's Department.

On April 18 at Turquoise Coffee, Pierce kicked off a crowd-funding campaign to help get his newest piece of equipment, the Quick Collar, to the New York Fire Department. Pierce is trying to raise $28,000 to cover production costs, travel expenses and Quick Collar donations.

The Quick Collar, designed for swift-water rescue, is already used by the sherriff's department's aerial-support units. Pierce hopes to get the Quick Collar on "every fire truck in the world." Getting a foot in the door at the FDNY is a good way to do that, as it's one of the few departments with a research and development unit and has a major influence on gear used around the country.

Packed in a compact, yellow throw-bag with a durable rope that can be tossed to a victim, the Quick Collar consists of a cinching, auto-inflating floatation tube that secures and protects the victim as he or she is pulled to safety. It can be thrown from riverbanks, helicopters and boats and can mean the difference between life

Tax preparer gets 23 years in murder for hire

By NEAL PUTNAM

Steven Martinez, a Sorrento Valley tax preparer, was sentenced April 12 to 23 years and 10 months in federal prison for fraud and witness tampering that involved an unsuccessful murder-for-hire plot of a La Jolla woman and three others.

U.S. District Court Judge William Hayes ordered Martinez, 51, to pay about $11 million to his former clients, whom he defrauded by preparing bogus tax returns and taking checks that were meant for the Internal Revenue Service. The prosecutor said Martinez used the funds to pay for things like a "well-designed" $700,000 pool and hot tubs at his house.

Hayes also ordered Martinez, a former IRS agent, to pay several million dollars to the IRS and the state Franchise Tax Board.

Martinez has been in jail since his February 2012 arrest, after the FBI investigated the murder-for-hire plot. No one was harmed as the FBI arrested Martinez and his limo driver before anything could be carried out.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Joseph Orabona asked for a 29-year sentence while Martinez's attorney, David Demergian, asked for a 10-year term.

"The victim in La Jolla — she's terrified every day," said Orabona, who added the victim was too afraid to attend the sentencing.

The financial charges Martinez pleaded guilty to in August 2012 were mail and Social Security fraud, aggravated identity theft, money laundering and making false tax returns. He also pleaded guilty to using a telephone in a murder-for-hire plot, four counts of witness tampering and soliciting a crime of violence.

Orabona said Martinez knew the routines of the four former clients and gave a hit man their photos and pictures of their residences.

The would-be hit man contacted authorities and the FBI videotaped their meeting.

Hayes agreed with the prosecutor the hiring of the hit man "was not an impulsive situation," calling it "pretty cold blooded."

"The fraud case went on for a number of years," said Hayes, adding the fraud was "aggravated" because "he had trust of his clients."

Demergian told the judge Martinez paid $100,000 in medical costs in 2004 after his young son was diagnosed with autism. Martinez needed more money to pay for ongoing care and the fraud began, he said.

Years later, Martinez "tried to make it right and sat down with the victims to tell them what he had done," he said.

Demergian said the murder-for-hire plot was never taken seriously and Martinez knew the guy would not go through with it. Martinez didn't have the $100,000 needed to pay the hit man, despite his statements, he said.

Martinez apologized to his victims and said he would repay them.

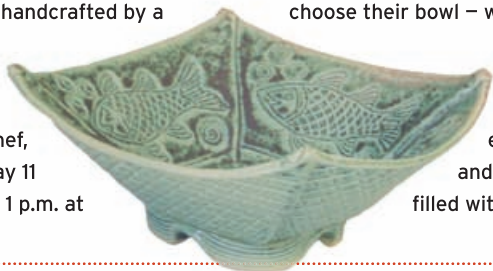

"I am very appalled for what I've done. I'm truly sorry. Please forgive me," he said.

He apologized to his limo driver, Russell Thellmann, 65, whom he gave money to give to the hit man. Federal agents found more than $42,000 in cash in a cereal box in Thellmann's kitchen. Thellmann pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit money laundering and was sentenced in 2012 to 34 days in jail, which was time he already served before he posted bond.

CHILDREN'S POOL DISPUTE SETTLED IN FAVOR OF CITY

The most recent case involving the seals at the Children's Pool has been resolved in favor of the city. Volker Hoehne, the plaintiff in Hoehne v. City of San Diego, dropped his case earlier this week.

Hoehne had claimed the city's refusal to remove the seals from the Children's Pool violated his constitutional right to fish.

Judge Joel M. Pressman rejected that argument, saying, "[T]he Children's Pool as a seal habitat is consistent with the public trust."

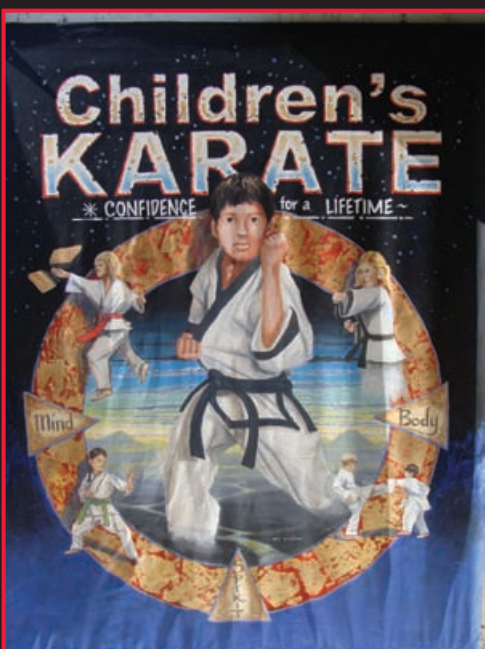

In 2009 Sen. Christine Kehoe and Assemblyman Nathan Fletcher co-authored SB 428 to amend the tidelands grant to provide the city with discretion to create a marine mammal park at Children's Pool. The legislation was adopted with bipartisan support. In the Hoehne case, Pressman put to rest arguments that the city could not rely upon SB 428 to create a marine mammal park.

"Senate Bill 428 amended the terms of the trust to give the [City] Council the discretion to create a marine mammal park at the Children's Pool for the enjoyment and benefit of children," he wrote.

Tempers flare over officer election at LJSA

By DAVE SCHWAB

A controversy erupted following La Jolla Shores Association's (LJSA) April officers' election with one candidate resigning and crying foul, claiming another board member actively lobbied against him.

Todd Lesser, a longtime LJSA board member on hiatus from the advisory group while chairing the La Jolla Traffic & Transportation Board, was unsuccessful in opposing Tim Lucas for the group chairmanship, losing to Lucas by a wide margin.

After the April 10 meeting of the advisory group, Lesser submitted his resignation.

He chastised board member Janie Emerson, alleging she campaigned against his candidacy and for a candidate "slate." Slates in advisory group elections are not allowed under City Council policy.

Emerson replied she only did what she was supposed to do as one of three nominating committee members. She characterized Lesser's charges as a "misinterpretation," noting the so-called slate was merely a list of recommended candidates. The chairmanship was the election's only contested post.

Lesser said he was encouraged by others to run for LJSA president, adding, "If I had known Tim was interested in being chair, I wouldn't even have run."

Lesser said he was upset because "Janie was calling people and telling them if I was elected chair, that four people (board members) would resign."

"For her to do something like this purposely corrupts the democratic process," he continued. "She blatantly violated our bylaws, Robert's Rules of Order, and embarrassed LJSA and destroyed the board's credibility. I'm going to ask for her to resign."

Emerson said encouraging

Lucas to run for president "was not my idea," adding it was suggested by one of the two other nominating committee members.

Emerson said the nominating committee, whose meetings are not open to the public, felt Lucas was a viable candidate because of his long experience on the group and because "he came to almost every (group) meeting after he was termed off the board."

Noting the officer election unfortunately turned "personal," Lucas said, "There was some miscommunication," adding "we'll go over the bylaws again."

Lucas said he wanted to ensure a similar situation doesn't arise with future group elections.

"There's a lot of things in the bylaws that need changing and improving," he said. "I think there were some gray areas in the process."

Though "frustrated" by the election controversy, Lucas said he hopes it won't mar the important community service work of the group.

"Something we really want to focus on is building our membership and getting the community more involved with the group," he said. "We are the recognized group for making recommendations for parks and beaches for La Jolla Shores. I'm really excited to run this committee. There are a lot of things we've been missing — land-use issues, bylaw changes — that we need to catch up on."

Mary Coakley Munk was elected LJSA vice chairwoman. Dolores "Dede" Donovan was re-elected as secretary. Pamela Boynton is the new treasurer.

The group's next meeting will be Wednesday, May 8 at 7 p.m. in Building T-29 at Scripps Institution of Oceanography.

There are a lot of things in the bylaws that need changing and improving. I think there were some gray areas in the process.

Village Merchants consider group marketing options By DAVE SCHWAB

La Jolla Village Merchants Association (LJVMA) heard pitches about partnering on Internet ticket sales and text-message marketing, as well as about Goodwill Industries coming to town with a new resale shop at the business improvement district's April meeting in its new visitor's center.

Alan Suchodolski of aRes Travel (Advanced Reservation Systems, Inc.), a San Diego-based travel planning service featuring Internet-based reservations and ticket technology, gave a presentation to the group. He addressed the marketing advantages offered by his company's hotel booking and business-networking website.

"La Jolla merchants have opened this visitor's center and we want to provide visitors to their destination offering them the ability and convenience of selling various attractions throughout Southern California via a web-based program," said Suchodolski, who has 18 years' experience promoting San Diego tourism and travel. The LJVMA, partnering with aRes, could, for example, sell a visitor a San Diego Zoo ticket and share in the revenue from that sale, he said.

LJVMA's board indicated it was favorably disposed toward the proposal with one board member saying they needed more time to study it.

La Jollan Dave Ish also spoke briefly to the BID board about Club Lemenno, a text message-marketing program.

"What I'm promoting is a way for small- and medium-size businesses, which can't afford a full-on marketing campaign, to reach out to their clientele using coded text messaging," said Ish. "This could be a special deal promotion, like 10 percent off, to drive traffic into your store. Once you've developed some databases, you can start sending out text messages on a regular basis enticing customers to come in."

Club Lemenno's discounted text-messaging service would be $20 a month for 250 messages for LJVMA members. The LJVMA will vote on his proposal at its May 8 meeting.

Addressing both promotional pitches, LJVMA president Phil Collier said marketing is essential to the group's financial health.

"We are spending more money every year than we are receiving as income every year from the BID," he said. "The only people who pay into the BID account are those people paying the La Jolla business tax."

Board member Egon Kafka pointed out LJVMA is being shortchanged by "businesses who do not register as La Jolla businesses," suggesting something ought to be done to hold them accountable.

"I'm invoicing everybody for everything I can think of," said executive director Sheila Fortune. "If you owe any business taxes — I'm coming after you."

Since its launch in 2000, Wildcoast has been dedicated to protecting ecologically significant coastal wildlands, islands and marine areas in California and Baja California.

"San Diego County has 10 marine protected areas, and half of those

In addition to restoring marine abundance, McCue said when the population thrives, it naturally spills over into open fishing areas, giving communities a bigger return on investment.

"The most effective marine protected areas are those supported by their local communities," he said, urging La Jollans to take part in Wildcoast's implementation collaborative to offer their input on how their MPAs are protected.

The article ("The drama continues...," Page 1) stated that the women were sitting on the seals. and death in emergencies, Pierce said.

Unlike similar water-rescue gear, the Quick Collar is light, compact and comfortable for the victim. Plus, it allows rescuers to stay out of the water, making it much safer for them.

As a testament to the design's durability, one of the first Quick Collars hangs on the wall of Pierce's workshop. It remains in pristine condition and working order after lifting a 3,000-pound block of concrete during a test run.

Pierce's inspiration for the device came after 10 children drowned during the Guadalupe River flood in Comfort, Texas in 1987. He watched news reports of the incident in horror as children were swept down the river. He believed they could have been saved if the rescuers had access to better equipment.

Convinced he could create a piece of equipment that could save more lives, Pierce started working on designs, but struggled at first.

"I sat there and physically looked at this thing for months trying to figure out what was wrong with it," Pierce said.

It finally clicked when he saw children's pool floats being manufactured. He realized by combining a floatation device and a securable strap, drowning victims could be kept above water while efforts are made to safely pull them out.

Pierce got a patent for the Quick Collar in 2005 and began marketing it to a number of fire departments. He started working with the FDNY research and development unit, but when the economic recession hit, there was no money in department budgets to test new gear, and trips to New York were too expensive. All progress stopped.

Broke and out of options, Pierce took a job managing an apartment complex in Crown Point and worked as a cook.

The idea for a crowd-funding campaign came to him after his sister paid for him to go to New York to start working with the FDNY again.

Through the crowd-funding campaign, Pierce not only hopes to provide his Quick Collar to the FDNY and eventually rescue teams around the world, but also to educate the public on the need for water-rescue gear. He wants to raise awareness that more lives can be saved with the right equipment.

After a stint as a pool lifeguard, Pierce started designing water-rescue gear. He developed a lifeguard rescue belt and a jet-ski towing device. The devices, which are used by lifeguards all around San Diego, including during rescues at La Jolla Cove, allow guards to work safely and quickly.

His lifeguard belts incorporate a quick-release, which was developed after lifeguards wanted something that would allow them to easily detach themselves from boats that sink as they try to swim them to safety.

"My job is to listen, go talk to them (lifeguards) and listen," Pierce said.

A video, contribution link, donation incentives, description of the Quick Collar and the campaign's budget can be found at the Quick Collar crowd-funding page at www.indiegogo.com/projects/quick-collar-2.

Scott Leshner (24 yrs. old), a business major, moved to San Diego from New Jersey last year, to take advantage of the beautiful weather and the gnarly waves. An avid surfer, he just can't imagine living elsewhere, but had to find something to do to support himself.

Steven Massey (26 yrs. old), a San Diego native, has been running a successful mobile detailing business for the past 15 years. His uncle owned and operated one of the very first mobile detailing businesses in San Diego and taught Steven everything he knew on how to run a lucrative detailing business.

Scott called Steven's mobile detailing company one day to have his car detailed and he was extremely happy with the job Steven did. Scott later talked to Steven about the possibility of exploring the car wash business together - thus - La Jolla Custom Detailing was born!

You can expect only the best when you take your car to La Jolla Custom Detailing. They will greet you with their warm smiles as soon as you pull up, wash and wax your car 100% by hand, and will go the extra mile to make sure you are happy and satisfied. Muirlands is ready to rock for students Muirlands Middle School is tuning up for “Muirlands Rocks!” a school fundraising event befitting of a rock star on May 5 from 4 to 7 p.m.

The fun-filled afternoon will be complete with carnival games, barbecued eats courtesy of the Dimich family, and live music from “Lightning Starts Fire.”

“Muirlands Rocks is a fun event where students and their families can be involved in helping to raise funds for the local middle school,” said Laurie Pearl, Muirlands Rocks co-chair. “There is something for everyone — games, food, music and tarp surfing. It should be an exciting afternoon for all.”

Hundreds of La Jollans joined in the festivities last year, and with residual budgetary constraints making fundraising more crucial than ever before, this year’s event is slated to be bigger and better than ever.

“The need for such a serious fundraiser is as urgent as ever,” said Pearl. “The foundation has pledged the funds to keep our staffing and class size at current levels.”

Business sponsors making this year’s event possible include Geppetto’s Toys, La Jolla Volleyball, La Jolla Pop Warner Football, Wells Academic Solutions, Stacey’Z Hair Salon, C & H Photo, La Jolla Karate and La Jolla LearningWorks.

Tickets to the event are $15, which includes a dinner and two carnival booth tickets. Sponsorship opportunities are also available at www.give2-schools.org. For more information about the event, visit www.muirlandms.org or call (858) 459-7925.

Girl Scouts offer range of camp experiences

From June through August, Girl Scouts San Diego will host 144 overnight sessions at the Camp Winacka and Camp Whispering Oaks properties near Julian and 32-day camps countywide.

La Jolla Girl Scout Mia Salatka of Junior Troop 3426 earned a free trip to camp by selling 525 boxes of Girl Scout cookies this year. She will attend a session called Night Owls, where she and other campers will stay up late to hike, swim and stargaze. This is the third year in a row that Salatka, 11, has earned her way to camp. Last summer, she cultivated outdoor skills, learned about nature and cooked over a fire at the Wilderness Adventure camp.

Each camp offers a mix of traditional camp activities with themed experiences, from marine biology, animal care and engineering to astronomy, nature studies and computer tech. At Camps Winacka and Whispering Oaks, four- to six-day sleepaway camps run from June 24 to Aug. 16. Day camps, offered in four-day sessions, take place June 17 through Aug. 9 at various locations, including Carlsbad, Coronado, Escondido, Lakeside and Poway.

Any girl can attend Girl Scout camp. Non-members add $12 dues to the camp fee and enjoy Girl Scout membership through the rest of the year. Camp fees begin at $169 and financial assistance is available. Girl Scout camp also provides opportunities for teens to serve as aides and adults to volunteer. The Gillispie School, located at 7380 Girard Ave. hosted a groundbreaking event April 9 for its new “Field of Dreams,” a 7,500-square-foot parcel at 7411 Fay Ave. to be used as the school’s new sports field. The school has already raised $1.6 million of its total fundraising goal of $1.75 million. The school’s current outdoor space consists of a sports court and play structure, but no outdoor field. The new field, which is expected to be complete later this spring, will nearly double the size of its current outdoor space, and will include a turf playing field for children and seating area for instruction.

DREAMING BIG La Jolla High varsity baseball players had the thrill of seeing their name on the scoreboard at Petco Park on April 19. SCOTT HOPKINS

La Jolla squares off at Petco Park

By SCOTT HOPKINS

It was an unfortunate time for their bats to go silent April 19, but the experience of playing in Petco Park will remain a lifetime memory for the La Jolla Vikings baseball team.

On a warm afternoon, the Vikings managed only two hits during their Western League match with Point Loma. A sizable contingent of fans traveled downtown, witnessing their team drop a 1-0 decision to the Pointers. The loss drops La Jolla to 12-8 overall and 2-2 (third place) in the league.

Going into the contest, head coach Gary Frank’s Vikings were averaging 4.9 runs per outing. Point Loma managed only four hits.

The Pointer run came in the second inning when the Vikings walked a Pointer hitter who came around to score later on a single.

The game was a battle of pitchers for both teams, with batters grounding out or flying out to outfielders who gloved every ball, despite the glaring sun. Several Viking blasts momentarily appeared headed for outfield gaps.

Senior Patrick Dayton started on the mound for La Jolla, going three innings before turning the game over to senior Tyson Youngs for the final three. Dayton walked three and struck out two in facing 13 hitters. Youngs issued one walk while facing 12 batters. Each yielded two hits.

Offensively, Youngs and junior Brett Volger each had singles, with Youngs’ steal of second base the closest the Vikings came to scoring.

The Vikings and Pointers played a rematch April 25 in La Jolla. Remaining LJHS Western League games include:

- May 2: At Madison
- May 6: Madison at LJHS
- May 7: University City at LJHS
- May 9: At University City

The first pitch is at 3:30 p.m. On May 14, the “Battle of La Jolla” takes place when LJ Country Day visits Muirlands Field for a 4 p.m. close to the regular season.

CLOSE PLAY La Jolla shortstop Brett Volger tags out Joe Da Luz of Point Loma. Second baseman Tyson Youngs backs up the play. SCOTT HOPKINS whales, can haul themselves onto land, making rescue by organizations like SeaWorld much more feasible. And once they're in the hands of rescuers, the sea lions have a pretty fair chance at survival. Pups taken to SeaWorld, Koontz said, generally have about a 65-70 percent chance of being returned to the wild, while others that are determined too ill to forage on their own find a new home at the park or in another facility that can provide long-term care.

Problems arise, however, when a pup has managed to strand itself in a particularly precarious location. When approaching a rescue, Koontz said, the first consideration is the safety of the rescuers and the animal. Because rescues by boat are impossible due to the difficulty of maneuvering a wild animal onto a small vessel, rescues must be done by land, and many of San Diego's coastal cliffs and rocky geography don't allow for safe access.

IF YOU COME ACROSS A SEA LION IN DISTRESS, the most important thing, Koontz said, is to not touch the animal.

"Again, these animals don't know someone is trying to help them," he said. "As we often say, anything with a mouth can bite, and the last thing we want is a member of the public getting injured because they're trying to approach or touch one of these animals."

Instead, Koontz said, call SeaWorld's rescue hotline at (800) 541-7325 or the NMFS' Southwest Fisheries Science Center, located in La Jolla, at (858) 546-7162. Another option, Koontz said, is to alert a law enforcement official or lifeguard to the animal in distress.

"Animals are not able to conceptualize the fact that a human is there to help them," Koontz said. "They experience fear and a fight-or-flight response. When we approach them, their first response is going to be to try to get away, which is good. But it means we can only approach them by land."

The crisis has become so widespread that other organizations are stepping in, as well. In addition to SeaWorld's efforts, the National Marine Mammal Foundation has offered care to stranded pups, while the La Jolla-based Waitt Foundation, together with the San Diego Foundation, has launched a donation-matching campaign with the goal of raising $50,000 toward the emergency response to the UME. Every dollar contributed by the public will be matched by the Waitt Foundation up to $25,000, with the funds going to the treatment and medical care of rescued pups. Donations to the San Diego Foundation can be made at donate.sdfoundation.org/sdf or to NMMF at nmmf.org/give.

While not every pup can be rescued, Koontz said, success stories are common. On April 19, five pups were returned to the wild. When rescuers release the animals back into the ocean they choose a location with an abundant food source so rehabilitated pups will continue to thrive.

"Every animal is treated like an individual patient. There's no cookie-cutter approach," Koontz said. "It feels so great to be able to give these animals a second chance at life."

The April 10 meeting was held in the conference room of the La Jolla Visitor Information Center at 1162 Prospect St. next to We Olive. The brand new facility remains a work in progress said Fortune, who noted, "We still don't have some doors and windows." Fortune said foot traffic into the facility is improving along with promotion aided by the La Jolla Historical Society. She said the center also benefited from raffle-ticket proceeds at the recent Concours d'Elegance.

IN OTHER ACTION:

- Board member Claudette Berwin, who headed up this year's Concours d'Elegance classic car show proclaimed the event to be extraordinarily successful.

- La Jolla Town Council trustee Mary Soriano said Goodwill Industries is going through La Jolla PDO Committee to acquire the necessary permitting to convert a retail space at 7631 Girard Ave., formerly La Maisonette, into a resale shop. A couple of LJVM board members questioned the appropriateness of a resale shop relocating into a boutique area, citing the possibility of property values being adversely affected.

LJVM will next meet Wednesday, May 8. For more information, visit www.lajollabythesea.com.

Salk gets gift of history

On the eve of the 60th anniversary of the first polio vaccine, the Salk Institute was honored with a generous gift from Michael Crick, the son of the late Nobel laureate and Salk faculty member, Francis Crick. Michael Crick will donate to the institute half of the proceeds from the sale of a 1953 letter in which Francis Crick described to his young son his recent discovery of the double-helical structure of DNA. McCarthy Building Companies, Inc. has topped out concrete construction for the new 45,000-square-foot J. Craig Venter Institute on the UCSD campus. Designed to be the most environmentally friendly and only net-zero energy biological laboratory in the world, the $39 million facility will support approximately 125 scientists and other staff in their mission to advance genomic research and policy. The concrete work utilizes a record-high 30 percent fly ash, contributing points toward the project team's goal of obtaining LEED platinum certification, while lending to the beauty of the exposed architectural walls and columns that use Type III cement, much like the Salk Institute.

Charlie Brown voice pleads guilty to stalking doctor

A former child star who gave a voice to Charlie Brown in animated "Peanuts" television specials has pleaded guilty to stalking a La Jolla plastic surgeon and making a criminal threat to his former girlfriend.

Peter Robbins, 56, will be sentenced May 8 by San Diego Superior Court Judge Dwayne Moring and he could face a sentence of three years and four months in prison, though court records show he is more likely to be placed on probation. He remains in jail on $550,000 bail. He has agreed to abide by a 10-year restraining order forbidding contact with Dr. Lori Saltz.

According to his arrest warrant declaration, Robbins paid for breast-enhancement surgery for his girlfriend from Saltz and later demanded his money back. He made threats against her and demanded she deliver money to a hotel in Oceanside where he was staying.

Robbins later broke up with his girlfriend and harassed her, leaving as many as 45 messages on her cell phone, in some of which he talked about getting a gun.

He was first arrested Jan. 13 after refusing to pay for a meal at a La Jolla restaurant. He posted bond and was arrested days later after a warrant was filed in court regarding the stalking and death threats.

As a child, his voice was used in the classic television specials, "A Charlie Brown Christmas" and "It's the Great Pumpkin Charlie Brown," among others.

Torrey Pines woman gets misdemeanor manslaughter

A Torrey Pines woman has been charged with misdemeanor vehicular manslaughter in the Feb. 1 death of a nanny who was struck by a car in a crosswalk in Torrey Highlands.

Through her attorney, Christine Michelle Padilla, 35, pleaded not guilty to the charges relating to the incident in which she ran a red light, striking and killing Montserrat Mendez, 41.

Mendez was pushing a stroller through the marked crosswalk north on Camino del Sur at Via Verrazano around 11:45 a.m. when she was hit and dragged a distance. The baby boy in the stroller was seriously injured, but was strapped inside the stroller and did not fall out.

Padilla is also charged with failure to stop at a red light and failure to yield to a pedestrian in a crosswalk, both of which are misdemeanors. If she is convicted, she could face up to a year in jail.

A trial date will be set on April 26 in San Diego Superior Court.

Stories We Love To Tell

at Le Chauvinist - Consignment store for men

On the wall there is a selection of genuine Panama hats, handmade in Ecuador; hanging on racks there are shirts, sport jackets and vests in patterns you haven't seen and fabrics you know your body will thank you for wearing them; and against the back wall stand Salvador J. Viesca and his son, Salvador.

Since 2001, with an eye for taste, Salvador has provided people from all over the world with his collection of consigner designer goods — brands like Brioni, Canali, Kiton Zegna and items like cufflinks, pocket squares, silk ties, cowboy boots and that shirt you had long ago that you always wished you could find again. His loyal customers, who travel from near and far, punctuate what he does best about business: provide unique clothing with a history, measured not so much by its wear, but by the future that you and your unique piece of clothing will create. It is a story passed on to future generations, and Salvador's son grows his father's legacy by providing a fun setting to embrace a mix of different people and different styles. Any clothes they are unable to sell are donated to a downtown thrift store, "City Digz" (St. Vincent DePaul)

"If they come in here and aren't looking for anything in particular, I guarantee they'll find something," said Salvador. Their lovely associate, Inna, chimed in, "It's treasure hunting."

One day, one of Salvador's consigners stopped in to talk and flipped through the newest collection of clothing featured in the store. He grabbed a pair of pants and said, "Wow, these are really something special." He tried them on and asked Salvador about them. Salvador took a look at the tag and realized the pants were the same ones the customer/consigner had consigned earlier to him. "You're trying to buy the same pants you consigned to me!" This same thing happened with this same person three previous times with clothing he didn't realize was his own.

"80 percent of men wear 20 percent of their clothes 80 percent of the time," said Salvador. Come meet these guys who love clothes, love people and love finding something special for you. Keep updated with the newest items in the store to add to your wardrobe by going to their website: www.LeChauvinist.com or visit them at 7709 Fay Ave.

Are your elderly parents resistant to suggestions?

Has this happened to you before? You are pretty sure that your Mom and Dad aren't eating right, aren't getting out for shopping or doctor's appointments and just seem to be having more problems than usual. You want to help but they always say, "I'll think about it" or "maybe later."

Sometimes approaching them in a different manner makes all the difference. Success may happen when you suggest change by taking into account their value system or needs.

1) They worry about the cost. Pay for the caregiver as a gift to them. Ask all the siblings to chip in a little each month.

2) Negotiate with them and avoid putting them down or being sarcastic.

3) Ask them why they don't want help and answer their fears with factual answers.

4) Tell them how worried you are. Say you'll be helping my peace of mind not "You should."

5) If they need a caregiver in the home, start small, address their concerns about losing control and let them choose the days and hours to come.

Hiring a geriatric care manager to assess your parents' will help recognize whether their resistance is coming from a cognitive deficit, she can talk things over with their doctor. You love and respect your parents and trying to help them keep a good quality of life can be frustrating with guidance and support. Call the RN Geriatric Care Managers at (877) 731-1442 or view us online at www.innovativehc.com

Hair Extensions FAQ

How Do You Match Extensions?

If you are blending colors choose extensions that are the same level of color as the clients own hair. If you are changing the level of the client's hair choose a shade that works well with the skin tone. A coloring process can be done to the natural hair 48 hours prior to application and extensions can be matched to that.

How Do You Customize Extensions for a Client With Thinning Hair?

Use an extension with a smaller attachment bond and a single strand application process so the hair is not damaged and can hold the weight of the extension. This will give natural looking volume and length to thinning hair.

How Do You Match Hair Extensions for Clients With Curly Hair?

If a client with curly hair wants to wear their hair straight then nothing needs to be done to the extension.

sions. If the hair is worn curly most of the time the extensions can be permed prior to attachment to the natural hair.

What type of hair extensions do you use?

Judy uses Great Lengths all-natural hair extensions and prefers these extensions because they are created from 100% human hair and use a unique, application process that attaches a bond of protein the same molecular structure as your hair. This application process does not harm your own hair. While others use techniques such as welding, waxing, gluing or knotting, which strain your hair to a high degree Judy uses a much more gentle principle called modulating. An extremely high-tech method of bonding the hair strand to your own hair. Extensions can be used for volumizing, lengthening, coloring or simply adding texture. Judy will offer a free consultation guiding you through your new style. Whether creating a new look, following fashion or with a special occasion on the horizon. Judy's hair extensions have over 55 colors to choose from and blend with your own hair for perfect color matches. Most importantly your own hair will not be damaged and the extensions can be easily removed by an expert.

Can hair extensions damage my hair?

No, they will not. Actually, even very fine and damaged hair can become healthier if you're wearing hair extensions because they will protect your hair from things that could damage it like curling irons, blow dryers, styling heat and environmental damage. Because of the unique application bonding system, the extensions can be easily removed. This is different than many hair extension methods that bond too tightly to your hair. Those old methods can lead to hair breakage when being removed. Judy's La Jolla hair extensions are joined to your natural hair by using a safe, all-natural, keratin protein bond application system. We can match your existing color too!

Are hair extensions uncomfortable?

Judy's La Jolla Hair Extensions are applied to your hair with a very small bond of natural keratin protein. Most people don't even notice a difference between the hair extensions and their own natural hair.

How do I maintain my extensions at home and between visits to the salon?

Judy is fully trained on how to educate her clients to professionally take care of their hair extensions at home. Judy will recommend hair care products, brushes, combs and appliances for use at home. Hairstyling is very similar to how you style your hair without extensions. Contact Judy in La Jolla today for answers to any more of your hair extensions questions. <http://hairextensionsoflajolla.com/>

Doing it Better

By Natasha Josefowitz, Ph.D.

Dr. Elizabeth Kubler Ross wrote of the five stages of grief — denial, anger, bargaining, depression, and acceptance.

She attributed these to people dealing with their own imminent deaths. The popular media seized on these stages and attributed them to people grieving the death of a loved one. This is not what she had intended.

Eventually, the stages were debunked as not necessarily uniformly, nor sequentially, felt by most people. After my husband's son died, we went to one of her workshops when she lived in Escondido.

Dealing with the states of grief

It was helpful in as much as we were surrounded by others who were equally grieving the loss of a loved one. These were children having lost a parent, parents having lost a child, spouses mourning the loss of a mate and even someone bereft after the loss of a dog who had been a constant companion. Neither my husband nor I went through these so-called stages, although some people felt helped by being able to put a name to their feelings.

Three years ago, I lost my husband and again went from unbearable pain to eventual peace without the interim stages, and now another death propels me to rethink whether there are, indeed, stages to go through. I just lost my son after a long illness and in trying to understand the processes I am going through, I came up with the following. This may or may not help others, I did no research to find out whether these are also familiar to other mourners.

Since these are not necessarily sequential, I call them "emotional states," rather than "stages."

The first I call the "zombie" state. It was days of numbness, of feeling nothing, of living in some kind of fog, going through the motions like an automaton. Nothing seemed real. From there, I went on to "free-floating anxiety," a kind of pervasive feeling that something awful was about to happen (when in fact it had already happened), an anxiousness not related to anything in particular, just this unpleasant feeling in the pit of my stomach.

Next was "the meltdown," when tears were hovering just below the eyelids, ready to spill at any trigger or at nothing in particular. Crying made me feel drained. It did not help. Where I am now is "get out of your own head by doing something for someone else." I had to give a speech I had committed to some months ago, and even though I considered canceling, I went. It was not

La Jolla Wellness Studio A different kind of fitness Center

What makes the La Jolla Wellness Studio stand apart from other fitness centers, is the technological approach it employs, utilizing vibration technology and focusing on the equal importance of preparation and recovery time. First time visitors have their body scanned to produce a 15-point comprehensive analysis that personalizes the exact areas and measurements to focus on. Then comes the workout, if you can even call it that. Unlike a sweaty and exhausting trip to the gym, here you can come in as you are at any point of the day. The process consists of three intervals; you begin by standing on a vibrating platform that prepares your muscles for action, then four minutes on the range of motion device, and followed by six minutes laying on a horizontal vibrating platform that facilitates muscle recovery and prevents aches and pains. ArtWalk to hit the streets

By MARIKO LAMB

More than 350 artists, six entertainment venues and hundreds of art-loving guests will gather on the streets of Little Italy April 27-28 for the Mission Federal ArtWalk, San Diego's largest outdoor fine-art festival featuring artwork, dance and musical performances and an interactive KidsWalk area with art activities for all ages.

Several local artists will display their talents at the event:

ART AND DESIGN ONE-STOP-SHOP – La Jolla resident and interior designer Stephanie Malcolm will team up with ArtWalk to create an interactive experience helping art buyers with their purchase decisions. Malcolm, of Room by Room Inc., is creating a virtual home at the event complete with furnishings, lighting fixtures, textiles and more where guests can bring artwork to see if the piece might suit their home.

PAINTINGS FOR A LAUGH – For more than 25 years, La Jolla resident David Wiemers has written and produced some of Hollywood's top comedies, including "Coach," "Major Dad," and "Jim Henson's Muppet Babies." Now retired from the industry, Wiemers brings his comedic vision to viewers through his vibrant and eccentric pop culture oil paintings.

NATURE-INSPIRED ART – Life-long artist Irene Wetsman will display her talents ranging from pen-and-ink drawings to sterling-silver jewelry studded with high-quality, semi-precious and precious stones. All of Wetsman's handmade creations emphasize natural elements or designs related to wildlife, nature and traditional culture.

JEWELS WITH A LA JOLLA TOUCH – Jeweler Laurel Nation's tent will feature semi-precious stones of all kinds, pieced together with embellished accessories. Nation incorporates freshwater pearls, glass, Swarovski crystals and the like to create classic, elegant jewelry.

For more information about ArtWalk, visit www.artwalksan-diego.org.

Art a la Carte brings ArtWalk to La Jolla

In conjunction with San Diego's biggest art event of the year, The Aventure, 3777 La Jolla Village Drive, will help bring the festival closer to La Jollans and UC residents throughout the summer with "Art a la Carte," a monthly pop-up food and art series produced in partnership with ArtWalk San Diego. On the first Sunday of each month through September, artists and food lovers will come together to dine on delicious fare along "restaurant row" and stroll amid the work of many of the area's most noteworthy artists, performers and musicians at the street festival-inspired event.

"We're excited to add this element of entertainment to The Aventure," said Travis Gorzeman, manager of The Aventure. "And we are proud to partner with ArtWalk to present this creative Sunday evening experience."

The next Art a la Carte will take place on May 5 from 5 to 8 p.m. For more information, visit www.aventure.com.

A new body of original works by ORLANDO AGUDELO-BOTERO - Saturday May 11th 6:00-9:00pm

CONTEMPORARY FINE ARTS GALLERY

For the first time in his 30 year successful artistic career Orlando Agudelo-Botero pays tribute to his Latino American heritage with this series of 14 new original paintings and one 5 foot bronze sculpture. He focuses on the flower growers of Medellin in the Andes Mountains of his native Colombia, and through his paintings he honors their integrity, dignity, culture and traditions. As always, ultimately his work highlights and illuminates the beauty of the human spirit. Please join us for this very special evening, 7946 Ivanhoe Ave. La Jolla • 858-551-2010

First Friday is coming up! Residents are invited to stroll the streets and browse the galleries for the upcoming First Friday Art Walk on May 3 from 6 to 9 p.m. Every first Friday of the month offers art, bites and wine at the Village's many art galleries, which stay open later for the monthly event.

Felix Mas comes to La Jolla – Martin Lawrence Gallery will feature an exclusive first look at new work by Spanish artist Felix Mas on Saturday, May 4 from 6 to 9 p.m. Mas, who considers himself a traditionalist, focuses his work on form, color and the beauty of the female form. Born in Barcelona, he trained at both the Artes y Oficios and the Escuela Superior de San Jorge, then furthered his education with extensive travels throughout Europe and the United States, eventually returning to his native Barcelona to work. Martin Lawrence Gallery is located at 1111 Prospect St. To RSVP to the event with Mas or for more information, call (858) 551-1122.

The whole idea of a bistro, says Seto Marselian, owner of Bistro Pazzo, is to offer a neighborhood place where everyone knows you - where great friends and great food meet. Bistro Pazzo is going on its 5th year, located just slightly off the beaten path, just off Prospect Street at 7930 Ivanhoe Ave - and the "hidden gem" nature of the eatery makes it just that much more of a neighborhood treasure. Within walking distance to shopping, hotels, the financial district, and the famous beaches of La Jolla. Open for Lunch and Dinner, Bistro Pazzo is definitely the "hidden gem" of La Jolla. Come enjoy this small neighborhood Italian bistro seven days a week. Moderate prices, great food, good portions, and a vast wine list with crazy service. Library advocates celebrate 40th anniversary of University City site

When Mayor Jerry Sanders was looking for a way to save money during the recent recession, he suggested closing several small libraries across San Diego. University City's library was on both his closure list and the City Council's future expansion list. Just don't mess with the readers in U.C. because a huge backlash of rage washed over Sanders' office high in the city administration building away from the little people in the neighborhood.

U.C.'s community came together. Both Regents Road Bridge advocates and opponents joined others marching up and down in front of the Governor Drive library. Drivers gave a thumbs-up and honked their horns in support. District 1 City Councilwoman Sherri Lightner joined the march. People trudged downtown to attend City Council meetings to speak out against the proposed closure. Locals carried signs in protest, and City Hall got the message "loud and clear." No closure would occur, but hours were slashed.

Turn the calendar a few years later.

On April 20, a new mayor with a new agenda joined Lightner to deliver a proclamation from the city honoring the 40th anniversary of the University Community Library. Mayor Bob Filner cut the first piece of cake and schmoozed with the members of the crowd, who applauded the event. He pointed out the new computers that were installed, with more to come.

HEART OF THE COMMUNITY Head librarian Sharon Thomerson. SANDY LIPPE

Everyone knows that a head librarian makes a big difference. Sharon Thomerson runs this library and has turned it into a successful community center with people waiting in line to get inside almost every day. She has developed a series of lectures and musicals in the community room that draw a large crowd. This vibrant lady has activities for all ages. Hopefully, City Hall will continue to add more hours and revisit expansion for the families who love to take their children to the library.

What is a community without a library? How could anyone close a library? A closed library would attract new homeowners, that's for sure. Helen Liebowitz, president of Friends of the Library in U.C., was mistress of ceremonies for the event. The Friends of the Library have raised funds for new furniture and new computers. Helen introduced Lightner, who spoke about the history of this library that was born in a storefront in the Marketplace Shopping Center at the other end of Governor Drive. This tiny library served the community from 1973 to 1978 until the new library was built. This writer remembers reading to toddlers in the tiny storefront next to the then-popular University City pharmacy. The opening of a real library was a joyful event in 1978.

UC residents have a library expansion on their wish list, if the city can nudge Carl's Jr. off the corner next to the library. Food for the mind has no junk food calories, and a larger library would provide more of the good stuff for future families. In the meantime, it was all smiles as library advocates of all ages enjoyed this special 40th anniversary celebration.

Adventures in REAL ESTATE

Bidding wars? That's right – they're back

Most people will laugh at this, but believe it: bidding wars are returning, plain and simple. Those who choose to ignore this warning may lose the opportunity to purchase a house.

In the first quarter of 2012, bidding wars were occurring regularly on houses at the price range of from $150,000 to $350,000. Now that many of those houses have been purchased and overall inventory of available housing is declining to the lowest levels in years, bidding wars are moving up in the pricing scale to $400,000 to $650,000 and sometimes higher.

This is an emerging trend and one that needs to go out as an alert to everyone who is considering a near-term home purchase.

Real-estate agents in Southern California are reporting a rise in the cases of frustrated buyers who have lost out in their bidding attempts, even when making all-cash, full-price offers.

Inventory levels have fallen dramatically — by as much as 60 percent or more from three years ago. With lower inventory, there are fewer selections available. Buyer demand is on the rise, as evidenced by increased monthly sales volume. So, we are playing a game of musical chairs — with expensive housing.

First, understand there is a lot of pent-up demand. Many people are waiting anxiously for signs of economic recovery — the problem is whether they will know how to recognize those signs.

Many key metrics already indicate a recovering real-estate market.

If you have ever experienced or witnessed thousands of people standing in line at a Wal-Mart just prior to Christmas, positioning themselves to be among the lucky few to buy a limited supply of a new product, you are somewhat acquainted with the psychology and effects of the herd mentality. Many potential homebuyers who not long ago were convinced the economy would see a double-dip recession are stunned to learn that prices are on the rise.

What about all the short sales and foreclosures that haven't hit the market yet? Won't that drive supply up and prices down? UNLIKELY! The inventory of distressed home sales is shrinking and banks will likely drip the remaining distressed properties onto the market so they, too, will benefit from a bidding war game.

Okay, so say you are a buyer and you have experienced the disappointment of losing out to the bidding wars. What do you want to do? You could continue to search on your own, but the problem with that is you are doing all of the work in a misguided fashion, and likely relying on do-it-yourself techniques that cause you to lose time, money and opportunities. You could rely on chance or fate to guide your decisions. The problem there is that, unless you are already highly successful, that strategy probably hasn't served you well.

Real estate is a service industry, so seek a qualified professional. Whatever you do, try to stay clear of those Internet real-estate database sites, which may be misleading. The information is often outdated by weeks, and pricing estimates are usually less reliable for areas like La Jolla. Hire a competent real-estate agent who will work for you and help map out a plan. An aggressive agent will find the right homes, get you to quickly view the property and make an attractive offer ahead of your competition. It's your choice — buy now and possibly purchase at a lower point in the market, or defy the experts and find yourself praying for the next recession.

Do you have a question about real estate in San Diego? Send your inquiries to Cshevker@san.rr.com. We will respond directly to you, and those questions that have a broader public appeal will be published along with our next column in La Jolla TODAY.

Navy Federal Credit Union unveils tips to secure an affordable car loan

If you have been thinking of buying a vehicle, now is the time to do it, said Dave Ledwell, vice president of consumer lending at Navy Federal Credit Union. With interest rates at record lows, those who are in a good financial position to buy can get an affordable loan and be driving away in a new or used car in no time.

Ledwell revealed a few tips to get the best car for your money with a payment you can afford.

First, know what you can afford by reviewing monthly income and expenses. Adding a car payment to your monthly expenses shouldn't leave you without money for the basic necessities or unexpected expenses.

Second, take stock of your credit inventory. If you are not in good standing on prior loan commitments and credit cards, it may be difficult to obtain financing at a low interest rate.

Third, check your credit report and score. Having your credit score in advance when applying for a loan gives you a chance to clear up any discrepancies when applying.

Fourth, shop around for the best rate. Before walking into a dealership, check interest rates at different lenders and read the fine print and uncover any hidden fees.

Finally, get pre-approved. By getting a pre-approved loan, you increase your buying power. A salesperson will be more willing to bargain if your loan has already been determined.

Quick tips to increase your credit score

With a few tweaks, you can avoid excessive fees imposed if you have a low credit score by making minor adjustments to give your credit score a boost.

For starters, get a free copy of your credit report from one of the three main credit bureaus — Equifax, Experian and TransUnion, which are required by law to provide you with a free credit report once a year.

To help improve your score, try keeping your credit card balances below 30 percent of your credit limit on each card, and don't close accounts that you pay off completely without checking with your mortgage professional first.

Also, know your limits. Make sure your credit-card issuers are reporting the correct limits on your accounts to the major credit bureaus. If you are in good standing, ask your creditor for a lower rate or a higher credit limit to increase the gap in debt you owe versus the credit available.

Finally, make sure the information on your credit report is accurate and complete. To dispute any inaccuracies that may be weighing your credit score down, visit the credit bureau's website to file a complaint online.

Opus Bank, which opened last year in La Jolla, is one of the fastest-growing community banks in the Western region. Opus Bank's mission is to rebuild strong, vibrant communities from the ground up. The bank's mission to help restore economic vibrancy in each of its communities starts with its commitment to provide $2.3 billion in capital funding to get working capital flowing again and into the hands of those with visions of driving job growth, promoting business expansion and restoring the economic health of the region. In addition, $4.3 million has been committed to the Opus Community Foundation to provide grants to improve quality of life for individuals and communities. The mission at Opus Bank is not to be big; rather, to have communities thrive.

Starry, starry nights

with Vincent Andrunas

Just a few minutes' drive up Route 5 in nearby Solana Beach lies The Little Theatre That Could — not only could, but can and does. Hidden away in an upscale shopping center off Lomas Santa Fe Drive, the North Coast Repertory Theatre (NCRT) may have a small seating capacity (only 194 in its current configuration), but that's not the reason that so many of its performances sell out. The fact is, this playhouse has built a stellar reputation over its 32 years of operation and audiences clearly appreciate NCRT's dedication to quality, excellence and professionalism. Its mission is to create a platform where artist and audience thrive through the intimacy of live theater, recognizing its power to challenge complacency, revitalize the imagination, nurture the unexpected and embrace the variety and diversity in our lives.

More than 200 supporters gathered Sunday evening at the Del Mar Country Club (which, as everyone knows, is actually in Rancho Santa Fe) for NCRT's 2013 "Spotlight" gala. Sharon Stein chaired the affair, with Lee and Frank Goldberg as honorary chairs. It all started with a champagne reception and silent auction in the stunning and storied venue. Later, when all were seated for dinner, Bill Kerlin (NCRT managing director) and David Ellenstein (NCRT artistic director) welcomed them appreciatively. A fresh salad preceded an entrée of beef tenderloin and large prawns, served with crisp vegetables; this in turn was followed by a deliciously decadent dessert.

Ellenstein then returned and spoke a bit about NCRT's continued success. Both of the world premieres NCRT commissioned this season are already scheduled to go on to production at other theaters. "From our little tiny home in Solana Beach, we are influencing the world of theater throughout the nation," he rightly observed. It's happening, he said, because NCRT's track record and reputation for quality attracts top artists from across the country. Two more world premieres and a number of other San Diego premieres will be presented next season. The future is bright, and the long-term goal of a new (and larger) venue is swirling into their conversation. (This revelation brought hearty applause.)

Theatre School director Siobhan Sullivan spoke of NCRT's educational programs. There's even a brand-new "Broadway Babies" program for 4- to 8-year-olds that gets kids excited at a young age and involves their parents, too.

Board president Dr. Allen Moffson announced that board vice president Hannah Step and her husband, Gene, had recently gifted the theater with $150,000. Mrs. Step encouraged others present to give generously to ensure the theater's continued excellence. The ensuing paddle-raise and five-item live auction brought in another $165,000 for NCRT's Artists' Advocacy program (including $36,000 from an anonymous donor).

The evening concluded with entertainment by Lainie Kazan, star of film, television and stage. The award-winning chanteuse belted out a number of popular show tunes before pausing to invite questions from the audience, of which there were many. Born in Brooklyn, her mother liked the nickname, "Lanie," of a neighbor girl whose real first name was Melanie. Years later, the star altered her first name, adding an "i" to avoid having the name mispronounced as "Lanny," and also took her mother's maiden name, Kazan. Continuing her performance, she closed with an upbeat comedy song, "I'm Living Alone, and I Like It."

one of my best addresses, but I got through it, and it turned out to be therapeutic.

One should expect the recurrences of the fluctuating emotional states in bits and pieces. So, today, I am a bit of a zombie while still functioning more-or-less normally. Tomorrow, I may feel anxious when I wake up or shed a tear during breakfast, but whatever happens, naming the states somehow makes me feel like I have, if not some control, at least some understanding and I will not get caught off-guard by the reaction.

"Oh," I will say to myself as a sob starts somewhere in my throat, "I am in my meltdown state, and it too will pass."

I really don't know whether this is helpful to anyone else. Everyone grieves differently. There are no rules, no better or worse ways of dealing with death. We all experience losses, some more damaging than others. Loss of a job can be devastating. The loss of a pet, loss of a home, even the loss of a beloved object can trigger sadness. But, of course, loss of a person who was part of one's life is the hardest to come to terms with. The literature speaks of "complicated grieving." This term refers to obsessive grieving beyond one year, at which point it is suggested that one should seek help.

One grieves differently if a loved one dies suddenly or after a long illness. One grieves differently depending on the relationship. One grieves differently for a parent, spouse, child or best friend. Everyone grieves differently with some of these emotional states lasting weeks, others lasting hours, some never felt and others I can't imagine. We need to have compassion and tolerance toward ourselves as we go through unpredictable emotional states. Healing begins when the loved person is less constantly in your head and starts resting more peacefully in your heart.

I like the Buddhist saying:

When someone you love dies, the main difference is that he is no longer outside of you, he is inside

WWW.CUTTINGEDGEK9.COM CUTTING EDGE K9 REHAB Has Been Featured On Local & National News, Radio, A Number Of Local Papers & Magazine Articles. Swimming is one of our strongest recommendations for most K9's. It is an ideal form of exercise for a many reasons. Our rehab services offer assisted swimming in a warm water environment. The benefits are: • Non-weight-bearing (reducing stress on joints) • Facilitates full use of the front and hind legs vs. partial use as seen with underwater treadmills • Dogs are often able to actively swim although unable to move their legs on land (due to stroke/ spinal injury) • Allows manual techniques by therapist/ manual resistance to an affected limb • Swimming in a controlled environment is the safest way for clients to exercise. • Speeds recovery following injury/ surgery • Improves function & quality of life • Works reciprocal muscle groups (helps correct muscle imbalances) • Reduces pain & inflammation • Reduces canine obesity thus decreasing the risk of other health-related problems • Increases strength, range of motion & cardiovascular conditioning • Prevents overheating through proper water temperature • Increases tolerance for extended cardiovascular training • Decreases recovery time • Reduces post-exercise soreness • Provides good cross training for the competitive, athletic dog (619) 227-7802
