

City not wavering in hunt for waiver

Wastewater plant exemption appeal set

By ANTHONY GENTILE | THE BEACON

The city of San Diego will officially appeal the California Coastal Commission's (CCC) denial of a waiver that would allow the Point Loma Wastewater Treatment Plant to operate below pollution standards.

The formal challenge will take place during next month's regular CCC meeting on Oct. 8 in Ocean-side.

"It will be thoroughly discussed at the hearing," said CCC legislative coordinator Sarah Christie.

An appearance before the 12 commissioners is one of two routes of appeal that the city has at its disposal. If the direct CCC appeal is unsuccessful, the city can appeal the commission's decision to the U.S. Department of Commerce.

"That's the most expedient way to take another look at the issue," Christie said of the meeting appeal.

Since the August meeting, when the waiver was rejected 8-1, two new commissioners have been named to the CCC, possibly influencing the appeal process. Santa Cruz County Supervisor Mark Stone and Oceanside City Councilwoman Esther Sanchez will replace two commissioners whose terms had expired. Christie said the waiver was not discussed during the CCC's September meeting in Eureka.

"There could definitely be some merit for the commission to have some additional discussion on the

A thriving industry in San Diego in the 20th century — one steeped in tradition for generations of Portuguese and Italian families in the Peninsula area — tuna fishing and canning was driven from the area in the mid-1980s because of toothier environmental laws, foreign competition and cost efficiency problems that forced much of the industry overseas.

On Saturday, Sept. 26, a public art project honoring the gritty, physically demanding industry will be dedicated downtown.

"It's going to be a beautiful day to be able to salute the cannery industry and the fishing industry, so I'm really looking forward to the date," said Port of San Diego commissioner Robert "Dukie" Valderrama.

The tribute to cannery workers, dubbed Parque del Sol, is located at the corner of Cesar Chavez Parkway and Crosby Street, adjacent to

Cabrillo's landing put San Diego on map — literally

A traditional re-enactment of Juan Cabrillo's landing on the shores of San Diego in 1542 takes place at 1 p.m. Sunday at Ballast Point in Point Loma.

Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo sailed into San Diego Bay in 1542 and named the area San Miguel. Not until the arrival of Sebastian Vizcaino in 1602 on the flagship "San Diego" did the city get its current name. Vizcaino surveyed San Diego Bay and what is now Mission Bay and named the land for the Spanish Roman Catholic saint San Diego de Alcalá, according to the San Diego Historical Society.

Yet during the initial discovery 467 years ago, Cabrillo originally claimed the area for the king of Spain prior to sailing up the coast of California before the region was renamed San Diego. The explorer died about four months later in the Channel Islands near Santa Barbara, according to a timeline pub-

Movers, shakers set for PLNU 'dealmaker' honor

The Fermanian School of Business and Business Center of Point Loma Nazarene University and title sponsor Nielsen Construction will reveal the winners of the 2009 "Dealmakers of the Year" on Friday, Sept. 25 at The Dana on Mission Bay.

The Dealmaker awards annually honor San Diego individuals and firms that create significant long-term value for the region.

Nominations were solicited from the general public and a formal nominating committee. About 35 total nominations were received and reviewed by the committee, with three finalists in each category:

Individual dealmakers

- Neal Schmale, president and COO for Sempra Energy, for leadership in numerous strategic initiatives for the San Diego-based Fortune 500 company, which led to a No. 1 ranking in customer satisfaction for all U.S. utilities. Sempra was recently named the "Smartest Utility in the U.S."

- Dr. Harry Gruber, CEO and president of Tocagen, a local biopharmaceutical company pursuing the discovery, development and commercialization of products for the treatment of cancer. An initial focus is on treatments for terminally ill cancer patients for whom no adequate treatment currently exists.

- Allan Camaisa, founder and CEO of Anakem Inc., for forging a vision of identity security through technological innovation that is user-friendly, secure and affordable, leading to industry breakthroughs for healthcare, national defense and other fields, as well as for leading numerous other entrepreneurial ventures in San Diego.

Firm dealmakers

- Poseidon Resources/Carlsbad

Desalination Project for tenacity and leadership in addressing regional water shortages. After 10 years of planning and five years in a state permitting process, the project has now received final approval and is expected to be operational in 2011.

- NAVFAC Southwest and its 3,000 employees for providing local construction employment to offset the slowdown in construction through solar-power projects at various military bases, communications buildings and other locations. NAVFAC Southwest has been a significant employer of new college graduates.

- The San Diego Zoo for a wide variety of regional and global efforts, including activities as diverse as protection and expansion of endangered species, animal habitat and health and direct leadership in biodiversity and biomimicry (the emerging field of innovation inspired by nature).

Collaboration

- The San Diego Center for Algae-Based Biofuels for the collaboration of nine San Diego-area companies seeking to replace petroleum-based products in 5 to 10 years. Its technological efforts are expected to be a major source of new jobs in the coming years.

- The U.S. & Mexico Philanthropic Partnership for promoting greater investments in the region by harnessing and directing the attention and power of philanthropic organizations toward economic development to improve the quality of life for communities throughout the border region.

- The Campo Indian Tribe for its collaborative $300 million wind-power project in the mountains east of San Diego. The project, which involves the Campo Indian Reservation, SDG&E and Invenery Co., will be California's second-largest wind-power project and will provide 160 megawatts of renewable electricity.

University officials said surprises always await the event's participants.

"At the breakfast presentation, all people in attendance will learn of the final selection, including the nominating committee members," said Randy Ataide, director of the Fermanian Business Center and professor of entrepreneurship at PLNU.

"This really helps create suspense and surprise at the breakfast," he said.

lished by the San Diego Historical Society.

To celebrate the discovery, hundreds of people will gather in Point Loma for the 46th annual Cabrillo Festival at the Cabrillo National Monument on Saturday, Sept. 26 and Sunday, Sept. 27 — starting at 9 a.m. — to enjoy a weekend of living history that includes a re-enactment of Cabrillo's landing in the bay at what is now Ballast Point in Point Loma.

"It's really going to be a day full of fun for the entire family ... with dancing and music and fun activities for children," said Mary Correia, Cabrillo Festival Inc. president. "They have similar celebrations in Ensenada [Mexico]."

Miss Cabrillo Festival winner Janessa M. Garcia will represent the Cabrillo festivities at events in Mexico and San Diego, according to officials.

And because Sept. 26 is National Public Lands Day, no entrance fee will be charged at the Cabrillo Monument and park activities are free, according to festival organizers.

For 46 years, hundreds have gathered to celebrate this piece of San Diego history with music, dancing, food and fun for children and history buffs alike, with a weekend of history lessons and experiences aboard historical vessels like those sailed by 16th-century explorers.

The event features a "living history encampment" on Sept. 26 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The encampment at the Cabrillo National Monument features a glimpse into the explorers' lives in the 16th century.

To get a firsthand experience, visitors can sail aboard the privateer vessel Lynx. Guests will get a taste of life aboard this vessel representative of those sailed during the war of 1812, according to Lynx Educational Foundation officials.

Cabrillo was on board the San Salvador, an older vessel from a different era, said Jeffrey Woods, a Lynx Educational Foundation representative.

"[But] we try and replicate the event and any ship of that time. We'll fly the flags ... and people will dress up," Woods said.

The Lynx will sail alongside the Californian and into the San Diego at Ballast Point, where visitors can relive the moment Cabrillo arrived in the bay.

Festivalgoers also have a chance to board the ship on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Maritime Museum of San Diego for $75 a ticket.

A half-hour National Park Service film, "In Search of Cabrillo," will also be shown throughout the day at the Cabrillo National Monument auditorium at 10 a.m., 2 p.m. and 4 p.m.

At noon Saturday, a scheduled presentation titled "Filipinas and the California Coast 1512-1793," will be presented by historian Joseph Sanchez. Sanchez is also scheduled to deliver the keynote address.

The day's activities will move into evening celebrations at the United Portuguese S.E.S. Hall, 2818 Avenida de Portugal in Point Loma. The Cabrillo Discovery Celebration Dinner and Dance, sponsored by Cabrillo Civic Club 16, allows Cabrillo Festival participants to rediscover fun for $40 a ticket.

Tickets can be purchased by calling (619) 426-0769 or (619) 221-8084.

Sunday's festivities center around the Cabrillo Festival Open House from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The festival's open house at Ballast Point is believed to be the location where Cabrillo landed on Sept. 28, 1542, according to Cabrillo Monument officials.

Ballast Point is located on Naval Base Point Loma at the south end of Rosecrans Street.

The open house festival will also feature a full display of dancing, music and storytelling traditions of Mexico, Native American traditions and those of Spanish and Portuguese cultures. The open house also features the 2009 Miss Cabrillo Festival, Miss Janessa Garcia and 2009 Queen of the Casa de Espana, Miss LeAna Alvarez.

A re-enactment of the landing at Ballast Point takes place Sept. 27 at 1 p.m. The privateer Lynx will sail along-side the Californian delivering actors dressed as Cabrillo and his soldiers.

Record numbers turn out for Coastal Cleanup Day

By ANTHONY GENTILE | THE BEACON

Waterways around San Diego are a little bit cleaner this week following a record-breaking turnout for the 25th annual California Coastal Cleanup Day. An estimated 65,000 pounds of trash was removed from 80 cleanup sites at the California Coastal Cleanup Day on Sept. 19.

A total of 9,587 volunteers participated at the event's 80 cleanup sites — a record number. Trash bagged ranged from the expected — cigarette butts, bottle caps and plastic bags — to the unexpected, including an ATM machine, a fake nose and pickles.

The 80 sites in San Diego were part of a statewide effort in which 56,877 volunteers collected 801,937 pounds of trash.

For more information, including additional statistics, visit www.cleanupday.org.

NewsBriefs

Rosecrans Corridor study now halfway complete

The nine-month Rosecrans Corridor Mobility Study that started in June is halfway home. The study aimed at improving transportation along the corridor is scheduled to select a preferred alternative to help resolve traffic issues at a meeting next month.

So far, the study's 12-member project working group has held four monthly meetings. The public has also been involved with this process by participating in "walking audits" of the four different areas in June and July and voicing their concerns at two community workshops, the most recent of which was held Sept. 16.

Project working group meetings are open to the public. The next one will be held Monday, Oct. 19 from 6:45 to 8:45 p.m. at the NTC Command Center on 2640 Historic Decatur Road. For more information or to submit comments, visit www.sandiego.gov/engineering-cip/rosecransstudy/.

Walk/run fundraiser to help cops afford homes

The San Diego Association of Realtors will bring back its popular 5k walk/run fundraiser on Saturday, Sept. 26 to benefit the SDAR Ambassadors Foundation Everyday Heroes Program.

The event, which begins at 8 a.m. at Liberty Station, aids San Diego Police Department (SDPD) officers in buying homes near the neighborhoods they protect through mortgage interest rate buy-down assistance and/or mortgage insurance buyouts and also providing first-time home buyer education.

Last year's inaugural event drew more than 250 participants and helped raise money for six officers who have already moved into homes in San Diego.

Teams and individuals can sign up in advance for $25 per person and make monetary donations by calling (858) 715-8005 or visiting www.walkforcops.com. Sponsorship and promotional booth opportunities are also available.

Military to offer H1N1 flu shots to servicemembers

Defense Department officials are preparing to launch a vaccination program against the H1N1 flu virus and the traditional flu and will be making the shots available to all military members in early October.

The vaccination program will allow military personnel to avoid having to pay for H1N1 flu vaccinations from civilian doctors and at the same time preserve available vaccine supplies in the public stock, according to Army Lt. Col. Wayne Hachley, director of preventive medicine for the Defense Department's health affairs.

Military officials said vaccinations against the traditional flu are already being made available to servicemembers at no cost.

Weight-loss challenge event planned in OB

A local resident is challenging people to a competition to lose weight and get healthy. The non-profit, eight-week Ocean Beach Challenge starts Wednesday, Sept. 30 and includes tips on nutrition and exercise, paired with a little friendly competition.

The course, hosted by Nina Fussing, has an entry fee of $29, $25 of which goes into a prize-pot for the biggest losers (by percentage of weight). The winner takes home 50 percent of the pot, with 30 percent and 20 percent awarded to the 2nd and 3rd place winners, respectively.

The event takes place at 1958 Sunset Cliffs Blvd.

To register, call (858) 703-7195, e-mail nina@fussing.com or visit www.meetup.com/Ocean-Beach-Weightloss-Challenge.

item," she said.

On Aug. 13, the commissioners unexpectedly voted to deny the waiver. The waiver would have allowed the plant to operate below the minimum federal environmental standards for pollution. A waiver was previously granted in 1995 and 2002. An upgrade to secondary treatment would cost an estimated $1.5 billion.

The Point Loma Wastewater Treatment Plant opened in 1963 and is located at 1902 Gatchell Road.

According to the city, the facility treats about 175 million gallons of wastewater per day. The outfall pipe extends 4.5 miles into the ocean.

The families of San Diego's once-gigantic tuna fishing and canning industries now have a special tribute in Parque del Sol near Crosby Street Park. COURTESY PHOTO

TRIBUTE

Crosby Street Park. The site is where cannery workers used to go during their breaks.

"Parque del Sol was originally created by the workers themselves," said Allan Tait, Port of San Diego public art organizer, "even though it was [initially] not much more than a coral tree and some picnic tables in this little parcel next to the building."

Valderrama will emcee the dedication, which begins at 10:30 a.m. The tribute has special meaning for Valderrama. Ten of his family members worked in the Van Camp and Bumble Bee canneries around the waterfront.

"It means a lot because I come from a very big family that was really not a very rich family," Valderrama said. "We were a working family and this was the means of how our family was able to survive. And it was not only our family, it was the whole community."

The tribute consists of three life-size bronze figures — a woman and two men. An arch of stainless-steel tuna connects the male figures, one crouched with a basket of fish and the other who appears to be catching fish. The female figure is cleaning the fish. Each of the figures is depicted in cannery-appropriate uniforms from three different eras — the 1920s, 1940s and 1960s.

"It's a pretty good depiction of the amount of work and how tough the work was back then," Valderrama said.

Near the three statues are historical plaques attached to equipment and parts retrieved from former canneries. The landscaping at the tribute site is focused around a coral tree that is an original fixture of the park. The tree is encircled by a mosaic sun and has a seat wall and sidewalk around it. The tribute site also has an expanse of grass and textured sea- and sand-colored paving.

The project was created by Valerie Salatino and Nancy Moran of Nature Works, Inc., an Escondido-based company.

"It's a completely different design that anything we've done," Tait said.

The idea for the tribute arose when the Port District was considering public art projects in 2004. By then, the tuna canning industry had been dark for about two decades.

"Thousands of people were involved in the industry," Tait said. "There were canneries all along the shore of San Diego Bay at one time."

According to Point Loma resident August Felando, a local historian and 40-year veteran of the industry, the first cannery dedicated to packing canned tuna opened in San Diego in 1911. By the early 1950s, there were six tuna canneries operating in San Diego. According to Port District officials, at its height, the tuna canning industry employed 17,000 people and had an annual economic impact of $65 million.

"The tuna industry was one of the largest industries in San Diego up until World War II," Tait said. "It was a huge industry, both from the fishing point of view and the fish processing point of view."

The industry also has ties to the roots of a number of different cultures' origins in San Diego. Among the ethnic groups that worked in tuna fishing and cannery were Italians, Portuguese, Japanese and Mexicans.

"It's important to a lot of people in the community because even though they may not have worked in it, their ancestors did," Tait said. "It was a real entry point for immigrants who came to America in those days, enabling them to get a foot in the door of the so-called 'American Dream.'"

While the bulk of the tuna industry vanished from San Diego in the mid-1980s, Felando said that today, two major tuna canners — Bumble Bee Foods and Chicken of the Sea International — still have headquarters in San Diego. With the creation of Parque del Sol, former cannery workers and their families have a place to reflect on what was.

"It will have a big impact for the residents that have been here for a long period of time that have actually worked in the industry," Valderrama said. "I think it's going to have a lot of significance to these individuals because this was part of the history."

Ensuring your pet's safety during San Diego's wildfire season

With the current drought in San Diego, it's shaping up to be another severe wildfire season. San Diego is no stranger to wildfires, with the 2007 wildfires destroying 1,500 homes and over 500,000 acres and the 2003 wildfires killing 16 people and burning down 2427 homes and businesses.

Local dog training company, The Collared Scholar, has noted the danger the potential of wildfires poses to pets and in response, offers some helpful tips to ensure you have a disaster preparedness plan in place to keep family and pets safe during the wildfire season.

Disaster supplies

Most of us have put in place a disaster preparedness kit for our family in the event of fire. If you haven't put one together, now is the time. You may have very little time to escape if fire threatens your home and having a readily available kit could be the difference between life and death. But keep pets in mind when putting your emergency kit together. For the family, include items such as: a first aid kit, plenty of drinking water, canned and other non perishable food, utility tools, a towel or blanket, a change of clothes, jackets or sweatshirts, a flashlight and extra batteries, antibacterial wipes, any prescription medications and a cell phone with charger. For pets, include enough non perishable food to last each pet at least three days, one gallon of water per pet per day for three days, a transport kennel, an extra leash and a collar with ID tags, photos of your pet in case they become lost, and any prescription medications.

Once you have built your emergency kit, store it in an easily accessible area and make sure everyone in the family

ID for pets

A wildfire can be an extremely frightening event for humans and their canine counterparts alike. Amid all the chaos of evacuations and impending disaster, it's easy for pets to become frightened and run away. Taking the proper precautions can help you increase your chances for a happy reunion with lost pets.

Make sure all pets wear appropriate identification tags at all times. Another alternative is to ask your vet to implant a microchip in your pet.

Microchips are a form of automatic identification technology implanted under your dog's skin. They are very safe and every shelter as well as most vet offices carries a microchip scanner. When lost dogs are brought in, they are first and foremost scanned for microchip numbers.

Alerting fire officials

What happens if you aren't home and a fire breaks out? If fire officials aren't aware you have pets inside, they may not save them in time. Window decals are available at most major pet store chains, which alert fire officials to the presences of pets inside. The ASPCA offers a free pet safety pack that includes a window decal designed to alert emergency personnel to the presence of pets inside your home. This is a must have to keep pets safe during any potential disaster.

Plan for the worst

It's best to always plan for the worst. Sit down with your family and create an evacuation plan and make sure not to leave your pets out! Designate a caregiver in the event that you have nowhere to stay during a disaster or in the event that something should happen to you, making it difficult for you to properly care for furry family members. Make sure every member of the family knows the plan inside and out and when possible, practice evacuation drills so that, should disaster strike and panic set in, you are all prepared.

You can help!

Muffin & Mr. Beasley are two darling dwarf Silver Marten bunnies looking for a new home. Best friends who must be adopted together, they would love a family where they can get a lot of attention. See them at www.sandiegorabbits.org

Santa Ana Season is Here!

Typically, Santa Ana season runs September through March. These winds are usually warm/hot and very dry. Something to think about – most likely your pet will also be hot and dry. Shorter haircuts and deep moisturizing treatments at the pet salon are a common request this time of year. At home you can supplement your pet's diet with nutritional oils. There are high quality oils on the market for your pet, such as Lipiderm. However, small tasty treats that include salmon, tuna, avocado and coconut oil are also beneficial for the skin.

For more information about oils and moisturizing treatments, call Preferred By Pets at 619-223-9023.

Zeiger to showcase, debut 2-disc album in CD release party

By BART MENDOZA | THE BEACON

San Diego's city schools have been fortunate to have had many wonderful teachers throughout the years, but few have had the impact of Larry Zeiger.

Zeiger taught English and the arts of film and theater at Point Loma High School for 33 years, but his greatest contribution was as volunteer musical theater producer/director.

Zeiger's productions originally started out as a final class project for his senior English students, uniquely using original material and script. By the time he retired in 2007, Zeiger had staged more than 30 musicals, with over 100 students involved in getting the show to an audience.

While he no longer produces plays, the prolific Zeiger has written dozens of songs that were never used. On Saturday, Sept. 26 at 2 p.m. at Baron's Marketplace, Zeiger will host a five-hour CD release event for his debut album, "Meetchu In Machu Picchu."

Zeiger will perform throughout the event with special guests, including Glen Fisher, Joe Allen, Joel Cobb and Tamara Cooper. The two-disc set, which includes 21 songs, will be available at the show. It will also soon be available on CDBaby, iTunes and local coffeehouses Reds and The Honey Bear Cottage.

"I write music all the time," Zeiger said. "I've been writing since I was 15 years old, growing up in Cleveland, Ohio and had first started piano lessons."

Two of the songs on the new album, "Drifting" and "Shades of Blue," date to the '60s.

"I updated them to sound a bit more contemporary, but I played those two during the senior assembly at Cleveland Heights High School," Zeiger recalled.

Work on the album began in November 2007 and wrapped up in July 2009. The lengthy recording time was due to having so many songs and arrangements as well as musician availability.

The two-disc album "Meetchu in Machu Picchu" features 21 songs written by Point Loma resident Larry Zeiger. A five-hour CD release party chock-full of entertainment is set for Saturday, Sept. 26 at Baron's Marketplace. COURTESY PHOTO

Among the talents involved are trumpeter Gilbert Castellanos, guitarist Peter Sprague, keyboard player Anthony Smith and drummer Tim McMann.

This is the first event of its kind to be held at Baron's Marketplace. According to Debi Tauber, the store's marketing manager, this CD-release show is an outgrowth of the friendship the store has for one of its best customers.

"He's our neighbor and a good friend," Tauber said. "When we heard he had an album coming out, we wanted to help give it a really good kick-off."

Zeiger said he is thrilled.

"I do all my shopping there and stop in every morning to say hello when I get my coffee," Zeiger said. "They are wonderful people. I really think this event will be beneficial to the community, bring music to people of all ages, and it's all due to their help."

Zeigler finds the idea of puloc art like this a particularly worthwhile activity.

"Of course, I want people to hear and enjoy my music, but also, I think arts and music are the most important part of a person's education," Zeiger said.

"I think it stimulates learning on all levels, whether it be math or science, history or English," he said.

He said he has relayed ideas for music-related projects to Baron's staff in the past.

"I've mentioned that they should have a piano in the store and then they could be the Nordstrom of supermarkets," Zeiger said.

In addition to promoting his new album, Zeiger is currently co-authoring a book, "Swapping Stories: A Pairing of Wine & Words," and is considering the possibility of staging new productions, using Point Loma High School alumni. Many of his students have gone on to success in Hollywood, working on such productions as "Gulding Light," "Boondock Saints" and "The Butterfly Effect."

In the meantime, Zeiger said he is pleased with the release of "Meetchu In Machu Picchu." He considers further albums a distinct possibility, this project having barely made an impact on his music catalog.

"Even with a two-disc set, I still have a piano bench full of songs left," he said.

Zeiger performs on Saturday, Sept. 26 beginning at 2 p.m. at Baron's Marketplace, 4001 W. Point Loma Blvd. The event is for all ages and there is no cover charge.

CHARGERS: WEEK 3

Chargers prepping to counter Miami's vaunted wildcat scheme

By BOB HURST | THE BEACON

At least one good thing for teams facing the Miami Dolphins this year is that they are better prepared to face the wildcat offense than they were last year.

It came as a total surprise to the New England Patriots in Week 3 of last season when Miami upset them 38-13. The Dolphins used their wildcat offense six times in that game, running for 119 yards and scoring four touchdowns off the formation on six attempts.

Two weeks later, Miami shocked the San Diego Chargers when running back Ronnie Brown took the snap and sprinted five yards to the end zone for the decisive score and another upset.

The Chargers will face the Dolphins, and perhaps a few wildcat plays, on Sunday at Qualcomm Stadium.

The wildcat, a play in which the running back or someone other than the quarterback takes a direct snap, provides plenty of headaches for opposing defenses.

What makes the wildcat so dangerous is its unpredictability. It's difficult to know if the "quarterback" will run, hand off or pass. A running back or wide receiver might take the direct snap. The quarterback becomes a runner or a blocker. And it's hard for a defensive player to know who has the ball.

It can result in missed assignments and missed tackles. Offensive tackles and tight ends trade positions, and unbalanced lines are formed, creating more confusion.

Miami, which enjoyed the most success in the NFL with the wildcat in 2008, ran 90 wildcat plays for 580 yards and eight TDs during the season, mostly with Brown taking the snaps and running back Ricky Williams and quarterback Chad Pennington lining up wide.

The Dolphins didn't get much of a chance to use the wildcat in this year's season opener, when they were whipped by Atlanta. But expect them, and many other teams, to put the wildcat to good use throughout the season.

SUNDAY'S BREAKDOWN

Week 3

Sunday, Sept. 27
Miami at San Diego, Qualcomm Stadium, 1:15 p.m.

TV: CBS

All-time series: Dolphins lead 12-10 in the regular season.

Chargers quarterback Philip Rivers will see what he can do to kickstart the San Diego offense against Miami on Sunday while the Bolts look for some help defensively to offset the Dolphins' wildcat offensive scheme.

FILE PHOTO

Last meeting: Miami won 17-10 at home in 2008.

Key stats: The Dolphins out-reached San Diego 167-60 last season, gaining 49 yards on 11 carries and scoring a touchdown using their wildcat offense. Ronnie Brown ran for 125 yards for Miami while LaDainian Tomlinson gained just 35 yards on 12 carries for the Chargers.

Game day: The Bolts should be more in tune to stopping the wildcat this time. They also need to make big stops on defense to get the ball into the hands of quarterback Philip Rivers more, so he can do his thing.

Noteworthy: Miami has won seven straight over the Chargers, including three games in San Diego.

Prediction: Chargers 24, Dolphins 20

Stingy Pointers defense snuffs El Cap's late drive

Blocked FG keeps PLHS record blemish-free

By SCOTT HOPKINS | THE BEACON

It was a tense moment for the undefeated Point Loma High School (PLHS) Pointers football team and their fans Sept. 18 on Bennie Edens Field.

Leading the visiting El Capitan squad by a slim 9-7 margin with seven minutes left in the final quarter of the showdown, the Vaqueros were facing a fourth down at the Pointers' 17-yard line.

Onto the field trotted Brooks Noble, El Cap's placekicker, fully intent on booting a 24-yard field goal to give his team a 10-7 lead and perhaps pin the Pointers with their first defeat. It was not a good moment to be a fingernail.

Enter Point Loma senior defensive back/running back Zach Gemmill, determined that Noble was not going to hang a loss on his team.

"All I could think of," Gemmill said, "was blocking that kick. I couldn't walk away with a loss."

Gemmill lined up in his normal position on the left side of the special teams formation. At the snap, he sprinted towards the center of the field, hoping to arrive before the ball soared between the uprights. But something was strange.

"Nobody blocked me," said a surprised Gemmill after the ball bounced off his body, allowing the Pointers to escape with the victory and remain undefeated at 3-0.

"I almost ran past the kicker, who was slow when the holder mishandled the ball."

Gemmill's block was huge, but there were plenty of other Pointers who played key roles in turning back the pesky Vaqueros.

A 46-yard first-quarter pass completion from quarterback Sean McKaveny to Davis Callejon helped set up a 32-yard field goal by Ruben Diaz and a 3-0 Pointer lead.

The game's most critical sequence was a brilliant second-quarter goal-line stand by Point Loma defenders, during which El Capitan actually fumbled twice on its final play. Anthony Joyner recovered for the Pointers on the one-yard line.

The Point Loma offense then responded with a 99-yard drive for the hosts' only touchdown of the game.

"That goal-line stand was one of the better ones in my 16 years at Point Loma," head coach Mike Hastings said later. "Then that drive was a huge swing, a real momentum boost."

Gemmill ended the drive with a one-yard run. A wide extra point kick left the Pointers with a 9-0 cushion as the teams broke for halftime.

The Pointer defense's streak without being scored upon ended in the third quarter when the

Zach Gemmill (2) of Point Loma rushes untouched to block a field goal attempt by El Capitan's Brooks Noble (24), preserving the Pointers' 9-7 victory and pushing the Pointers to 3-0 in the young season. PHOTOS BY SCOTT HOPKINS | THE BEACON

Vaqueros, on the first play after a pass interception, scored on a 30-yard screen pass. With the point after, the Pointers clung to their 9-7 lead, which would be the final score.

In the fourth quarter, a Pointer punt gave the Vaqueros one last possession 88 yards from the end zone with 1:11 left. El Capitan was moving the ball but Point Loma's Emilio Diaz intercepted an errant pass to seal the narrow victory.

Defensively, the Pointers gave the Vaqueros all they could handle. Joyner had another big game as he was credited with three quarterback sacks and the goal-line fumble recovery. Christian Hayward recorded two sacks and Sean Stepina added another.

"I was proud of our effort," Hastings said. "This was a great building game for us as we get ready for league."

The varsity victory followed losses to the Vaqueros by the Pointer freshmen (29-18) and junior varsity (49-20), leaving each team with a 1-2 record.

The undefeated varsity Pointers (3-0) face their toughest test of the season when they travel to Scripps Ranch (also undefeated at 2-0) on Friday, Sept. 26 for a non-league doubleheader.

Junior varsity teams meet at 4 p.m. with varsity action kicking off at 6:30 p.m.

The Falcons (CIF Division II, Eastern League) are coming off a bye week and feature running back Brennan Clay, who totaled 282 yards from scrimmage in a 37-14 victory over Poway.

Pointer defenders Christian Hayward (80) and Jordan Sparkman (14) make passing difficult for El Capitan quarterback Mark Scharfenberg (13) in Friday's 9-7 Point Loma victory. The win kept the Pointers undefeated in 2009.
