SPREADING HOLIDAY CHEER — THE OB WAY

The holiday season officially kicked into high gear Saturday during the 31st annual Ocean Beach Holiday Parade and Fun Zone, offering plenty of sights and sounds for celebrants. The holiday spectacular drew thousands to check out the floats and entries and take part in a day of family-oriented activities along Newport Avenue. Above, celebrants board a Lifeguard Services rescue boat carrying Santa (Mike Silva) with two helpers — Ashley Arnold (front) and Shyanne Shanley (left), along with children of the local lifeguards. Clockwise, Warren-Walker School cheerleaders do their part to get the crowd fired up along the parade route; a string of Woodyies with drivers in Santa gear elicits cheers; Bryson Lamb wows the crowd during the Fun Zone skate demonstrations and competition; and some float riders just plain found an excuse to be a part of the wild and funny event. ## Judge OKs class-action vs. McMillin

By ANTHONY GENTILE | THE BEACON

A San Diego Superior Court judge's Dec. 3 ruling in Mann v. McMillin will allow 247 other Liberty Station residents to get involved.

The suit, brought by resident Bonnie Mann against developer Corky McMillin Cos., alleges McMillin failed to disclose to Liberty Station homebuyers the potential traffic snarls and headaches surrounding the estimated 15,000-member Rock Church that now calls Rosecrans Street home.

On Friday, Judge Richard E.L. Strauss granted the case class certification, which means it will go forward as a class-action lawsuit.

"The claims in this case are based on the common failure of the defendants to disclose the potential existence/construction of the Rock Church in the neighborhood and will turn on the adequacy of the written disclosures made by defendants to the purchasers and whether there was a duty to disclose this information," the written text of the judge's tentative ruling explained.

Mann originally filed the case in November 2009 in response to feeling negatively impacted by the presence of the megachurch's membership. She claims McMillin failed to disclose to prospective homeowners at Liberty Station that the church was moving there in 2003.

Stephen Morris, Mann's attorney, did not return calls for comment. He was quoted previously as saying, "Our view is that anything that a purchaser might consider important or material to their decision to buy should be disclosed, and quite obviously, a megachurch moving across the street would be one of those things."

John Simpson, lead trial attorney for McMillin, also did not return phone calls for comment. He was quoted previously as saying, "McMillin complied with all the requirements of the California Department of Real Estate and has been very public about the contract with The Rock."

The class-action certification is open to all Liberty Station residents who purchased property from McMillin between June 4, 2003 and July 1, 2007. This is the time period between when The Rock Church applied for a permit and when it moved into Liberty Station, and includes the possibility for claims from 248 prop-

DEBATE BRANCHES OUT OVER MAJESTIC TREE

OB neighborhood pines over tilting Torrey Pine

By ANTHONY GENTILE | THE BEACON

As the city makes plans for the removal of a large, leaning Torrey Pine tree to pave the way for sidewalk repairs in Ocean Beach, residents are going out on a limb to weigh the tree's potential safety hazard against the scarcity of the species and its majestic presence.

Locals debated the issue at the Ocean Beach Planning Board (OBPB) meeting Dec. 1.

"While it's a potential fatality waiting to happen, there was enough strong voice from the local residents that they want to pursue other options," said Scott Waschitz, who represents OBPB's District 3. "All sides were represented and the board provided them time to define their stance."

After hearing from city representatives, community members and arborists with a wide range of opinions on the pine, OBPB members

City opens veterans' winter shelter in the Midway area

More homeless fighters served in Iraq, Afghanistan

By ANTHONY GENTILE | THE BEACON

To help take a little chill off the streets for homeless warriors, the city's full-service Veterans Winter Shelter reopened in Point Loma on Wednesday. The 150-bed shelter for male veterans has been operated by the local nonprofit Veterans Village of San Diego (VVSD) since 1997.

"It's about providing a quiet and dignified place where people care about you with compassion and caring," said Phil Landis, Veterans Village president. "The shelter runs pretty much full the whole four months. Some nights we have a waiting list to get in."

This year's shelter — once again operating in the red — is structurally and schematically the same as in past years, but it is now under different supervision. Instead of the city supervising shelter activities,

City Council OKs higher cost for parking tickets

By NEAL PUTNAM | THE BEACON

Parking tickets will go up by $12.50 in 2011 following a 7-1 decision by the City Council on Nov. 29 to pass along state-mandated surcharges. The cost includes a $9.50 surcharge the city had unknowingly been absorbing instead of passing it on to motorists as in other cities.

Councilman Tony Young said the move could save the city $3 million annually. There were no speakers for or against the proposal, and it passed quickly.

The state recently notified the city of a new $3 surcharge — on top of the other $9.50 it is imposing on all parking tickets — which will go to fund state trial court buildings.

Members of the council's Budget and Finance Committee were told Nov. 10 that staff had researched 16 years' worth of City Council resolutions, but they could not find an ordinance allowing the city to collect the previous $9.50 surcharge from violators, much less the additional $3 surcharge.

Councilwoman Marti Emerald made the motion for the surcharges to be passed along to motorists, while Councilman Carl DeMaio voted against the plan without giving a reason.

"I applaud the staff for catching this," said District 3 Councilman Todd Gloria.

There are more than 100 types of parking violations that police officers or meter maids can write tickets for.

Santa teams with some little helpers

Making a little warm-up run to Ocean Beach last week, Santa Claus checked his list twice to be sure local youngsters were nice and not naughty this Christmas season. Setting up shop near the seawall, Santa took a last-minute gift order from a young lady. Other children from Ocean Beach Elementary School helped Santa decorate the OB community Christmas tree, like 7-year-old Abbey, a first-grader who hangs a decoration made from a coffee filter.

Liberty Station to celebrate the season with holiday fest

By ANTHONY GENTILE | THE BEACON

The forecast calls for snow in Point Loma this weekend, as Liberty Station hosts Holiday Station — its North Pole-themed winter festival — on Saturday, Dec. 11 from noon to 5 p.m.

“It’s a free event and it’s supporting their local community. It’s a way to explore Liberty Station, which is a resource in their backyard,” said event organizer Bonnie Vieira.

Formerly known as Holiday Night on the Promenade, Liberty Station’s annual seasonal event has made a shift from evening to afternoon. The event culminates with a tree lighting around dusk, about 4:45 p.m.

“Previously, it was more of an evening event,” Vieira said. “We decided to move it to the daytime to take advantage of the light and bring in more activities.”

In addition to child-themed activities, Holiday Station will cater to a wider age group. Activities for the older crowd include a classic custom car show and a walkthrough art exhibition.

“It has always been a family-friendly event, and this year we’re actually expanding to include some activities that, hopefully, will be of interest to an audience that is larger than just families — including more of the adult sector and people who are visiting San Diego and want a really memorable afternoon,” Vieira said.

Children will be able to have their fun, too. Snow will blanket Ingram Plaza for kids to play in and sled in, providing a brief taste of a white Christmas.

“The snow is going to be a big hit,” Vieira

Wine Steals to pair with artist Stephanie Clair

By ANTHONY GENTILE | THE BEACON

For the last three and a half years, Wine Steals Point Loma has treated locals to many different food and wine pairings. This weekend, the Liberty Station wine bar will showcase its pairings of art and wine.

Wine Steals Point Loma will host an art show featuring Stephanie Clair, the San Diego artist whose art is featured on their private label bottles, on Saturday, Dec. 12 from 4 to 8 p.m. The show is free, with the option of buying tickets that include food and wine pairings.

“It’s funny, whenever I do art shows I’ll have the wine bottles at my event and people are always like, ‘Oh my gosh, you’re the Wine Steals artist,’” Clair said.

Clair’s art appears on Wine Steals’ bottles and advertising, and her paintings appear in each of their four San Diego locations. She became the featured artist at Wine Steals after she frequented its Hillcrest location, which inspired her to create a painting called “Wine Down.”

“Being that I loved the place and everything that it represented for couples that meet there, I decided to do a painting,” Clair said. “When I painted it, I contacted the owner and I said, ‘You need to have this painting in your place.’ He loved the painting. We ended up becoming really good friends and I ended up selling him one of the pieces.”

Clair’s art regularly features couples and wine, characteristics that made it a perfect match for Wine Steals. Her romantic style influenced by cubism blends nicely with the casual, laid-back ambience at Wine Steals.

Arena formally sports its new name and look

By KEVIN MCKAY | THE BEACON

The latest metamorphosis for the sports arena — one in a string of transitions and name changes over the 44-year history of the venerable Midway landmark — is complete.

Officials held a ceremonial sign unveiling Dec. 1 to showcase the former San Diego Sports Arena as the newly named Valley View Casino Center. The sponsorship arrangement is the second in recent years, following on the heels of the previous sponsorship by iPayOne.

The new business partners also unveiled the building signage to officially brand the historic 15,000-seat San Diego sports and entertainment facility. Doors, signs and banners at the venue all reflect the Valley View Casino Center change.

The terms of the corporate sponsorship and naming rights — which were approved by the City Council — include $1.5 million from Valley View Casino and Hotel over the next five years, and binds North San Diego County’s Valley View Casino & Hotel and AEG Global Partnerships.

The arena, which is managed by AEG Facilities, has been the multi-million dollar renovation which included the addition of a new 6,500-square-foot VIP hospitality space, “Club 3500,” new lower level seats, LCD televisions throughout and an upgraded concourse and arena entrances.

Eclectic language school at home in OB with message of peace

Institute distances itself from previous ownership's unwitting link with 9/11 terrorists

By ANTHONY GENTILE | THE BEACON

With a focus on promoting peace through language education, WordWide International Language School fits with its Ocean Beach surroundings. The English language post secondary school and tutoring center has been located on Sunset Cliffs Boulevard since 2007.

"I am so in love with Ocean Beach. I'm a total Obcean and I felt that if I really wanted to give somebody the experience of a lifetime learning English, I'd want to do it in OB," said B. Rose Anderson, director of the schools and a 27-year resident.

WordWide has been open in San Diego since 2002. It was located first downtown and then in Mission Valley. When Anderson purchased WordWide in 2006, it was bankrupt and didn't exactly have the best reputation.

"The idea of teaching world peace through language education is very important for me because, before 9/11 — when this was under different ownership — it was the school that had taught two students that are [buried] in the World Trade Center rubble," Anderson said. "That's why the school was bankrupt when I bought it."

The school, located at 1811 Sunset Cliffs Blvd., is made up of two distinct language programs — Word-Wide ESL Institute and WordWide Language Tutoring Center. The ESL institute is a nationally-accredited post-secondary school that features an immersion program for those from abroad.

"We're changing how people think," Anderson said. "If you learn a language, you change how you think for world peace."

The English school currently has 11 students representing the United States, Saudi Arabia, Spain, South Korea, Germany, Mexico and Slovakia. It recently started a guest speaker series, in which locals — including Hodad's owner Mike Hardin and KPBS TV'S "Wonderland" creator Noah Tafolla — have come to speak, allowing the international students to ask them questions.

"Not only are we rich in personalities and people, but it was a great opportunity to have the community come into the school," Anderson said. "People that are learning English can spend their lives in institutions like mine but they never really get a chance to talk to people on the outside."

The mission of school's language tutoring center is to teach Americans and U.S. residents foreign languages. These languages range from the conventional, like Spanish, French and German, to the less conventional — namely Swahili.

"There are a couple schools like us out there, but we teach as many languages as we can. If somebody wants to learn a language, we want to be there for them," Anderson said. "We can even make classes for them."

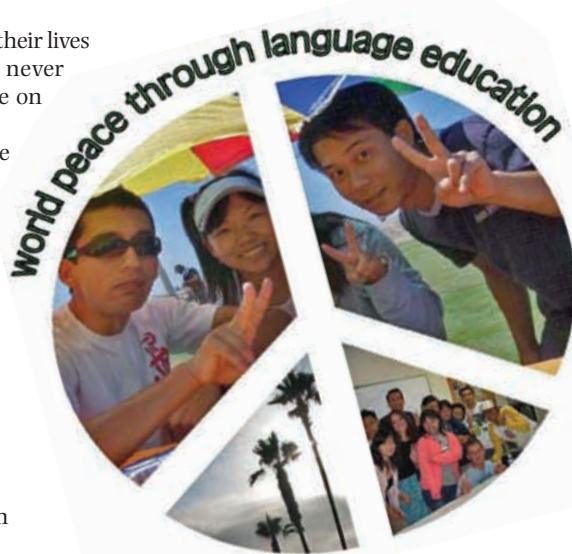

The tutoring center also offers services for students. A recent claim to fame was helping a University of California, San Diego student pass UCSD's advanced Spanish placement test with just 30 hours of instruction.

"We just follow the program we have in the English school," Anderson said.

Each Saturday, the school also hosts the free Pier Poets writers' workshop from 9:30 a.m. to noon for locals looking to sharpen their writing or drop in to check out the school. The school has four full-time staff members and its entire staff is made up of Ocean Beach residents.

WordWide also offers four- and 12-week TESOL classes for those looking to teach English overseas.

Point Loma woman
victim of sexual assault

A woman walking on the 3200 block of Kemper Street in the Midway District was the victim of a sexual assault on Nov. 27 at about 3 p.m., said San Diego police Lt. Rudy Tai.

The woman was returning home with one bag of groceries from Vons grocery store, located at 3645 Midway Drive, when her attacker jumped out at her from dense shrubbery lining the sidewalk.

He forced her down into the brush, where a quick and violent fight ensued before the assailant fled the scene, Tai said.

The attacker was described only as a black male.

The San Diego Police Department's Sex Crimes Division is investigating the crime and urges anyone with information to call (619) 531-2000.

County gets $7.7 million for homeland security

The county Office of Emergency Services has been awarded $7.7 million from the state to coordinate local Homeland Security programs and prepare for catastrophic events, such as wildfires and earthquakes.

The funds will not be used to support security efforts at Lindbergh Field because airport security is the responsibility of the Transportation Security Administration (TSA), according to Tammy Glenn, public safety group communications officer for the county. However, the Port of San Diego Harbor Police, which provides security outside the airport, received more than $40,000 for safety and emergency response equipment.

Change of command set for SPAWAR Dec. 10

The Space and Naval Warfare Systems Center Pacific (SPAWAR SSC Pacific) will host a change of command ceremony to mark a change in leadership on Friday, Dec. 10.

Outgoing Capt. Mark T. Kohlheim, USN, will officially be relieved by Capt. Joseph J. Beel, USN, as commanding officer of the SSC Pacific at 2 p.m. in a ceremony in front of the center's headquarters building in Point Loma.

Kohlheim has been SSC Pacific's commanding officer since October 2007. During this assignment, he oversaw implementation of numerous changes to all major business, program and personnel systems, resulting in significant increases in the number, quality and impact of the command's partnerships, recruiting and outreach programs, and technology transfer efforts.

In 2009, Kohlheim was selected as San Diego's Information Technology Executive of the Year by the San Diego Business Journal and as San Diego's Top Influentials by the San Diego Daily Transcript.

Beel reports from his previous assignment with the Program Executive Office (PEO) for command, control, communication, computers and intelligence, where he served as PEO chief of staff, as deputy for operations and as deputy program manager of the Navy Tactical Networks Program Office.

Beel's prior assignments included serving as officer-in-charge of Navy Warfare Development Command, Detachment San Diego, and as commanding officer of the Naval Air Technical Data and Engineering Service Command.

The changes in the bylaws that the board initially approved in August include making general elections a plurality vote, having the board fill vacancies by itself and various changes to language within the document.

The bylaws can be viewed online at www.pcpb.net.

unanimously passed a motion to table the matter for 30 days to give all parties time to perform studies and pursue alternatives. The debate will be taken up again at the board's meeting in January.

"By consensus on the board, it seemed most appropriate to give everybody some time," Waschitz said. "This allows for the public to raise funds and handle this before the city takes care of it."

City officials recently decided the Torrey Pine at 4633 Long Branch Ave. needed to be removed, explaining that its size, shape and lean presented a hazard that would complicate upcoming sidewalk repairs. Though not scheduled for immediate removal, city officials' findings indicated it would need to come out.

"We're not planning to demolish that sidewalk until the contract starts in March or April," said Mary Wolford of the city streets division. "At that time, the tree is going to come out."

If the Torrey Pine is removed, it could be replaced — but not with a similar tree because of its size issues. Wolford said the city has a catalog containing trees that are more appropriate for two-foot, four-foot and seven-foot or larger parkways, and the size of the scarce local tree does not fit the size profile of the area.

"If this were a park, we could maybe fence off the area and leave the tree. And if it were in a large, open-space canyon area, you could modify and realign the tree," said Drew Potocki of the city's Engineering and Capital Projects Department. "In the case of a public street, we don't have those options."

Those who spoke in support of the tree's removal pointed to its presence in the public right-of-way and the hazards it presents in the event it should fall. Those objecting to the removal pointed to its the scarcity of the tree species and questioned the need to remove it without determining its health.

The extra month buys time for neighbors interested in keeping the tree to see that it is pruned and less cumbersome, and to find a way to pay for the sidewalk removal so a root analysis can be performed. Waschitz said both of tasks require at least $2,500 in funding.

"To keep the tree, you are going to have to dig [the sidewalk] up and you are going to have to check the roots. That's going to cost money," Waschitz said.

Residents interested in donating money or efforts to save the tree can contact OBPB Chairman Giovanni Ingolia by calling (619) 994-8539, or by e-mailing gingolia@hotmail.com.

"It's ultimately up to the direct neighborhood to raise funding and handle this immediately," Waschitz said.

the San Diego Housing Commission is now in charge — a change Landis said has worked very well.

"The city has been very helpful given the constraints that they have to work with," Landis said. "We're very, very pleased with the relationship we have with the city and the Housing Commission in helping us put this worthwhile project together."

Landis said the shelter, located at 2801 Sports Arena Blvd., is still about $30,000 to $40,000 short on operational funding. Thanks to additional city money, however, that figure is less than last year's operational deficit.

"We do have a little bit more funding this year from the city, which will help us, but we continue to run it at a deficit, which means we help participate in the cost of it," Landis said.

Though the shelter has a nightly capacity of 150 homeless people, Landis said the shelter processed 450 non-duplicate Social Security numbers as part of the mandatory registration. This means last year's shelter helped a record 450 homeless veterans.

"There are a lot of people that we served as residents of the shelter," Landis said. "Some come in and stay for a couple of months, some might come in for a week or 10 days, but we get Social Security numbers and we verify that you are a veteran."

In addition to a warm bed and meals during chilly winter months, the shelter offers a number of services to the veterans it houses. Landis said the winter shelter fits into the city's homeless picture by providing these services to veterans in need.

"We provide counseling services, access to medical care, further assistance at shelters, we try and help people find permanent shelters," Landis said. "Many of them come to our program, decide that they've had enough of this and they want to do something to change their lives."

The shelter serves veterans from all major conflicts. Landis said the average age of veterans taken in is getting younger and younger with each passing year. He expects to see a greater number of veterans this winter from the recent and current conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan.

The face of the homeless veteran population is beginning to change and is taking on "a much younger hue," Landis said. "It's scary, quite frankly."

Landis expected the shelter to be nearly full on the first day and for the 120 days it remains open until April. He said there have been preliminary talks about keeping the temporary shelter open the entire year, with funding problems representing the most daunting hurdle.

"If we had a year-round shelter for veterans, my guess is that we can keep it filled pretty much all year. We would expand our services if this was something that was developed," Landis said. "But it is strictly concept at this point."

A woman's worth

BY LINDSAY FELICE

Every day of my life, I have been affected by a powerful and crippling institution that has made my life hell. That institution is gender and the social normalities that come with it.

Millions of women and girls are very well-versed in the effects of this institution because they, too, live under its presence. I spend hours doing my hair, doing my makeup and trying to look and act a certain way because that's the way girls are expected to be.

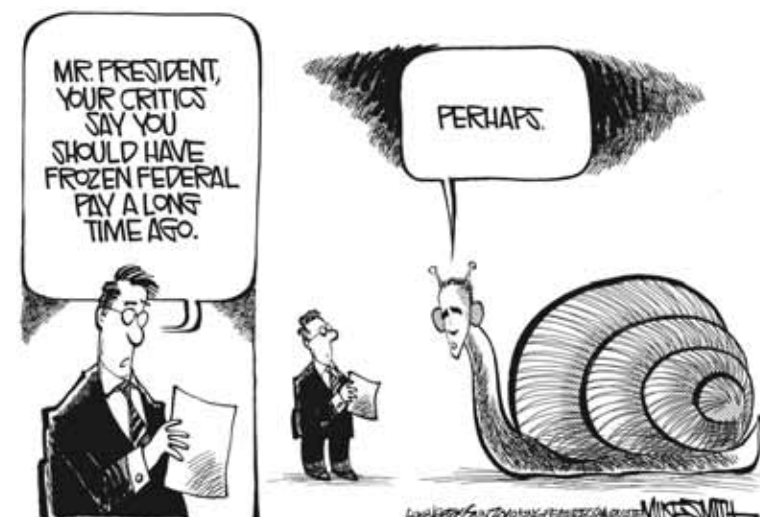

It's all about aesthetics these days, and the expectations for girls and women are through the roof. Today, the ideal woman is placed high on a pedestal and is expected to be teeming with beauty at all times. On the covers of famous teen magazines are women who are put in place as role models to the millions of girls who read them. These women, who are essentially forged to embody perfection, are the ones average girls — like myself — are being compared too. This seems hardly fair.

Today, this new average is what is expected of all girls, and it appears that it can never be accomplished. I know I will never look or even closely resemble, these types of women — yet I keep trying. Why? Because if I want to be viewed as a somewhat acceptable member of our society, if I want to be seen as “beautiful,” if I want to have a prosperous life, I have to look like the women on the cover of Teen Vogue, instead of myself.

Examples of how the “ideal” woman is stacked up against the realistic woman are size and body issues in the U.S. The average U.S. woman's size is a size 14, however the average super-model size is a 0 or 00. While most of us are closer to a 14, we still want to be smaller and try to meet the expectations of a deluded society.

The way we are expected to look just enforces generation after generation of insecurities and low self-esteem, and it administers tons of unnecessary worry and effort into trying to perfect one's self. I have spent hours on end primping and obsessing over how I look, trying to maintain a certain image just because I am afraid that people won't like me if I don't wear eyeliner, or don't flat-iron my hair, or if I'm not skinny enough. It's about time we put an end to all this nonsense and start being comfortable in our own skin. We need to begin being happy with the people we are so we can focus on the more important events going on in our lives. As said millions of times before, life is too short to worry about the little things, and this applies fully to the matter at hand.

Stick to the 30-foot height limit

BY DAVID LITTLE

Have you ever stood in front of a building in the coastal zone where the 30-foot height restriction is supposed to apply and thought the building you were looking at had to be higher than 30 feet? Chances are, it was. Developers began interpreting the word “grade” in the original Proposition D language as the finished grade, not the existing grade. That meant the developer could pile up dirt and raise the height of the building to pretty much any level they desired — that is, 32, 34, 37 feet. The city, to its credit, realized that this was not the intention of the voters when they overwhelmingly passed Prop D, the 30-foot high building limit for the coast. Subsequently, the city supplemented the language of the original Prop D so as to force developers to meet the voters' intent. The current supplemented code forces the developer to measure 30 feet from the finished grade or the existing grade — whichever is lower.

Now the Bishop's School wants an exemption from Prop D and its supplementary code to build a 32-foot building. They want to revert to measuring to the finished grade. If this exemption to the current code is allowed by way of the “variance” process, it will set a precedent for the coastal zone and developers will happily revert back to measuring from the finished grade and again build 32-, 35-, 39-foot buildings. If this variance is granted, it cannot be denied to other developers. As time progresses, your peek-a-boo view will disappear, the winter shadow of the adjacent building will come further over your property and the wall of condos along the beach will grow a few feet higher as more variances are granted.

“As time progresses, your peek-a-boo view will disappear, the winter shadow of the adjacent building will come further over your property and the wall of condos along the beach will grow a few feet higher as more variances are granted.”

The San Diego Planning Commission will hear the issue on Dec. 16. Please contact them at planningcommission@sandiego.gov or (619) 321-3208 and tell them you want the original intent of the voters to be maintained.

Sacred Heart thanks community for help

Sacred Heart Academy and the parishioners of Sacred Heart Church of Ocean Beach would like to thank the Ocean Beach/Point Loma community for supporting its holiday canned food drive, which took place at the Appletree Market in Ocean Beach.

Proceeds benefited Sacred Heart Church's Loaves and Fishes program, which helps offset the cost of feeding the local homeless every other Tuesday.

Thank you for reaching out and helping the students of Sacred Heart Academy touch the lives of those who are less fortunate.

The lawsuit does not seek a specific monetary amount.

The next court date is at 9 a.m., on Jan. 14 at the New Courthouse, 330 West Broadway downtown. On that date, a filed plea from the McMillin attorney is expected to be heard involving a motion to remove a portion of Mann's original plea.

Mann said she views the Dec. 3 ruling as a positive step.

"I'm absolutely pleased and very happy with the court's decision. I think it was the right decision and a fair decision," Mann said.

"The people in our community and all of Point Loma have been so negatively impacted by the presence of the meagchurch and there's commonality," she said.

CROSS COUNTRY TEAMS FIND PACE FOR SUCCESS

PLHS' Breadmore scorches up track with a standout season

By SCOTT HOPKINS | THE BEACON

The Point Loma High School (PLHS) cross country teams ran thousands of miles in practice this season, but it paid off in what coach Keith DeLong called “a great season.”

It was senior Meghan Breadmore, however, who clearly stole the show. Breadmore came within 15 seconds of qualifying for the national finals Dec. 4 at Mt. San Antonio College in the Foot Locker West Regionals, a race that featured the best runners from several states. Breadmore turned in a time of 18:47 for a 12th-place finish. The top-10 runners qualified for nationals, with the 10th-place finisher coming in at 18:32.

While the event ended Breadmore's prep cross country career, she also collected a pair of honors this fall.

Breadmore covered the 2.75-mile Morley Field course in Balboa Park in a time of 16:29 to capture the title in CIF Division II. The race, held Nov. 20 in a driving rainstorm, showcased Breadmore's skills as she crossed the finish line 37 seconds before the second-place runner. Despite the achievement, Breadmore said she wasn't pleased with her performance.

“I was really unhappy with my time because a lot of my competitors ran quite a lot faster than me and my pace was a lot slower. It was nice to win, but I wasn't real thrilled about my time,” she said last week while preparing for the western regional meet.

Breadmore won the Eastern League finals meet Nov. 10 with a time of 17:35 for a 3-mile course at Mira Mesa High, finishing a stunning 1:27 ahead of her nearest competitor.

“I've played soccer since second grade and did ballet,” said Breadmore.

She said she didn't begin competitive running until high school “because I've always liked running and decided to give it a chance.”

While she hasn't accepted any college offers yet, Breadmore listed Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, the University of Arizona and the University of California campuses at Santa Barbara and Davis as possible choices.

Breadmore's accomplishments were the highlight of a strong performance by PLHS runners this season by both the girls' and boys' teams.

DeLong saw his teams finish second in both boys' and girls' results at the Eastern League finals. Then, the boys finished fourth and the girls ninth at the CIF finals — strong showings among all county Division II schools.

Many of the Pointer cross country team members will run distance events during the spring track season. Training for the sport typically lasts year-round.

DeLong and his athletes plan to continue their run to glory as one of PLHS's top teams.

Pointer cross country standout Meghan Breadmore won the Eastern League and CIF Division II championships before moving on to the state and western regional meets.

said. "We're really excited to have that out there."

Holiday Station also features bounce houses, pony rides, train rides and crafts for children. In addition, kids can get their picture taken with old St. Nick for free.

"Those are free photos that are instant. Parents always want to get their kids' photos, but it's open to anyone," Vieira said.

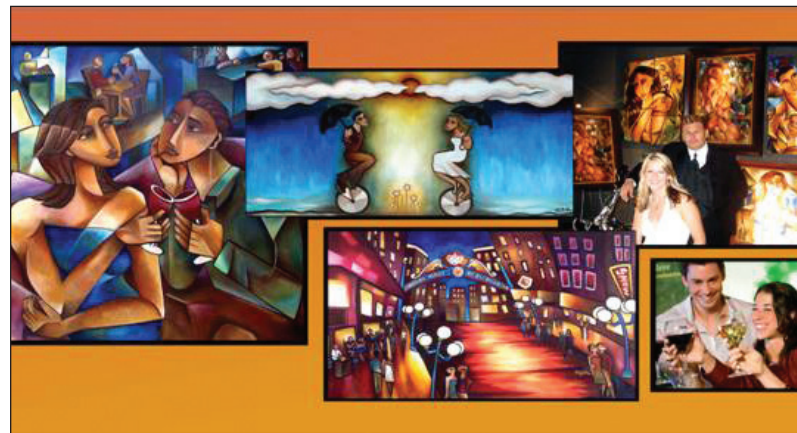

Traditional holiday music will come courtesy of the Point Loma Nazarene University's brass ensemble and the Corra Middle School band. On-stage performances will include Mystic Dance's youth dance troop, Dancing Kids tap and jazz-style dance moves and the San Diego Ballet's rendition of "The Nutcracker."

The afternoon will also highlight the array of merchants at Liberty Station. Locals can get some last-minute holiday shopping done or explore the area in the family-friendly scavenger hunt.

"We have assembled a collection of different retailers and tenants at Liberty Station and we are providing a scavenger-hunt map and a trolley you can hop on and off. People have to follow their map and hunt down the different locations and at these points on the map they will get a prize," Vieira said.

Liberty Station is located at 2640 Historic Decatur Road. For more information, visit www.libertystation.com.

relaxing," Clair said.

Located at 2970 Truxtun Road, Wine Steals Point Loma has been open on the Peninsula since May 2007. In addition to Hillcrest, Wine Steals has locations in Cardiff and East Village.

"The building is the most unique part about it. The building was one of the first on the [former Naval Training Center] property and it was built in the 1920s. It's historical and just gorgeous inside," said Tasha Elkovitch, Wine Steals' corporate wine buyer. "The ambiance of the look and feel of it inside is different than all the other locations."

Every week, Wine Steals features a new list of 40 wines from all over the world. Those wines are available by the glass and can also be purchased by the bottle.

"Most places you go to enjoy a wine by the glass don't change their wines by the glass except maybe every three to six months, so it's pretty unique that you get to have a whole different list every single week," Elkovitch said. "It's constantly evolving and rotating."

The Wine Steals menu is geared to go with its wines, and features salads, meat and cheese boards and specialty pizzas that are named for their corresponding wines. The cuisine will be featured during Saturday's art show.

Tickets for wine and food pairings are $25 in advance and $30 at the door and can be purchased at www.wine-stealssd.com. # Michael Head assumes reins of OB Farmers Market bookings

By BART MENDOZA | THE BEACON

The Ocean Beach Farmers Market is one of a kind. The sights, sounds — and especially the smells of various edible delicacies co-mingling with the sea breeze — make the event a smorgasbord for the senses.

While food is the focus of the event, savvy music fans know the weekly event is also a great place to catch some of the area's best musicians in action. Booking of the event was recently taken over by producer Michael Head, who is replacing local music fixture Chuck Schiele. Schiele relocated to the East Coast earlier this year.

"I started in early September," Head said. "I sort of grew up in OB. So it's a very cool, full-circle thing for me. [It's] good to give back a bit to my 'hood."

A well-respected local musician who is currently strumming in the The Rockin' Country Rebels, Head works with other artists at his own Headtrap Music Studio location. Now, he's also the music manager with the Ocean Beach MainStreet Association's (OBMA) annual events like the OB Restaurant Walk, the Ocean Beach Street Fair & Chili Cook-Off and the recent OB Holiday Parade Fun Zone.

Head was one of several people suggested by Schiele before his departure, according to Denny Knox, OBMA executive director.

"When I talked to Michael, I knew right away he'd be perfect," Knox said, citing Head's enthusiasm and willingness to help.

At the farmers market, Head is a jack-of-all-trades, taking on tasks from booking to running the sound system.

"It is a lot to juggle," Head said. "You try to compartmentalize as much as possible, but it ends up bleeding all over anyway."

While the farmers market's musicians perform for free, Head said their appearances are a good way to build a following or promote other shows and releases. Groove Session frontman Ron Sanchez found that to be true.

"The people were very friendly and receptive to our style of music," Sanchez said.

The Ontario-based band returns Feb. 3. "We were able to gather a relatively good-size crowd, which is always nice, and we sold a fair amount of merchandise — which was good because it wasn't a paying gig."

Al Howard agrees about the good vibes in Ocean Beach. The percussionist with The Heavy Guilt has performed there four times.

"I love playing the market," Howard said. "You get to catch the ears of passersby who most likely wouldn't hear you otherwise. Plus, playing outside a block from the ocean ain't bad."

One new aspect of the farmers market since Head took charge is theme nights. "It really started with the booking of a local bagpiper and the need to fill an appropriate performer with him," Head said. "Turns out, there is a great Celtic punk band right in OB called The Fooks. Boom! Celtic night!"

Head found he was dealing with similarly-styled artists and "it just made sense to put them together."

He said he is open to billing of all types.

"[With themes,] I was also looking for something the OBMA could put on the website, or that I could put on flyers and catch some attention," Head said. "It's not something I'm tying myself to, but something to do if I want."

Among the artists on the upcoming schedule are local singer-songwriter Jeff Bloom (Wednesday, Dec. 15) and Brenda Patterson (Wednesday, Jan. 19), but perhaps the most-anticipated concert each year is always the Holiday Music Show, scheduled this year for Wednesday, Dec. 22 as part of the OB Holiday Food and Toy Drive.

"The entire month of December, the farmers market is dedicated to gathering donated toys and food for local needy folks," Head said.

Canisters for donations are placed throughout the farmers market area. While the typical weekly concerts involve two artists, this year's Holiday Music Show concert will include four: Joey Harris, Peter Hall, Jefferson Jay and Mama Christy. Harris has performed at the event for the last five years.

"The OB Farmers Market Holiday Show has become a Christmas tradition for the Harris Clan," he said. "My wife, Vicki, and my boy, Will, always join me for a song or two. There's always someone interesting playing when we arrive, and it's great to see musician folks I haven't seen all year and catch up a little."

Head said he has no limits as to what types of music he'll book.

"I am always looking to expand the minds of market music listeners and the idea of what the music on the market really is and can be," Head said. "That being said, it needs to be family friendly. It's an all-ages atmosphere and that means kids and people old and young. But make no mistake. It can rock, and most people want it to rock."

Musician Michael Head has taken over bookings for the Ocean Beach Farmers Market and other OB MainStreet Association events. He replaces Chuck Schiele, another high-profile musician who has relocated to the East Coast.
