By TONY DE GARATE | THE BEACON

CVS Pharmacy's plan to occupy the long-dormant Apple Tree supermarket at 4949 Santa Monica Ave. took a step forward this month when the Ocean Beach Planning Board threw its weight behind a request for a license to sell beer, wine and spirits.

The board voted 8-2-1 in support of alcohol at a future CVS at its in without a liquor license. If police monthly meeting Dec. 4, citing a "community benefits package," in which the pharmacy chain had mit a Class 21 liquor license applicapledged to be a responsible tenant and active member to the community.

But opponents said CVS would be a poor fit because Ocean Beach lacks a supermarket and already has a pharmacy in Rite Aid, a few blocks away.

The OBPB plays only an advisory board to the city but, in this case, could play a big role in determining whether liquor may be sold at CVS. The state department of Alcohol Beverage Control, which rules on liquor license applications, has said the building is located in a census tract that has exceeded its allotment of licenses. Such a condition requires an additional approval from San Diego police - known legally as a finding of "public convenience or necessity" and police say community support is an important factor in making that determination.

The ability to sell alcohol is allimportant to the pharmacy - corporate officials said CVS won't move eventually make a finding in CVS' favor, the pharmacy will formally subtion to the state, which triggers notification and public comment requirements.

The OBPB's vote to support CVS came as a surprise to many. Just one month earlier, in front of an audience of more than three-dozen citizens largely opposed to CVS, the board tabled the matter to wait and see how police would decide. State law gives police 90 days, placing the deadline to sometime in January.

But OBPB chairman Tom Gawron-

HTH Point Loma gets spotlight in Macy's Parade for robotics prowess

The Holy Cows from High Tech High and their robot had the honor of opening the 87th annual Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade® on Nov. 28 in New York City along with four other award-winning teams from around the county.

For nearly a century, Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade has been the official kick-off to the holiday season.

Every year, this Emmy Award-winning tradition is seen by more than 3.5 million people in New York and 50 million people at home, tuned in to see giant balloons, floats and now — robots.

Robots are no longer a sci-fi fantasy in recent years. They have become commonplace in many aspects of life, from cleaning floors to teaching in the classroom. Macy's recognizes the importance and relevance of science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) to its customers.

Moreover, the company is sensitive to the need for STEM-workforce development, and understands that the key to expanding these fields is to inspire young people to take an interest in them.

"We are extremely excited and thankful for this unique opportunity that Macy's has given us," said FIRST founder, Dean Kamen.

"Tuning into the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade is an American tradition, and this year the first thing people will see in the parade is the robotics teams. Thanks to Macy's, we have the chance to pique the curiosity of millions of young people, as well as potential mentors, sponsors, and volunteers."

San Diego FIRST Robotics Team 1538, The Holy Cows, proudly represented FIRST and its progression of programs with this trailblazing appearance, and traveled across the country to New York City to lead the historic parade.

Their team's director of engineering, Danielle Patriarco, said, "I am excited that FIRST is getting recognized on a larger scale and I am honored to be able to be part of this once in a lifetime opportunity."

The Holy Cows were chosen to help kick off the parade because they won FIRST's most prestigious honor, the Chairman's Award, at the FIRST World Championship in St. Louis earlier this year. This award is given to the team that best demonstrates the greatest commitment to spreading passion about science and technology, best represents a model for other teams to emulate and best embodies the purpose and goals of FIRST. Their Chairman's Award video demonstrates how they've worked toward this goal and their 2013 season wrap-up video shows highlights from the competitions.\

The Holy Cow team and its mentors from High Tech High in Point Loma bask in the glory of leading off the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade on Nov. 28 for its prowess in robotics competition. The team was also invited to participate after winning the prestigious Chairman's Award at the FIRST World Championship in St. Louis earlier this year.

Ex-PLHS, UCHS teacher, 67, gets 7-year sentence

A retired teacher at Point Loma and University City high schools was sentenced Dec. 6 to seven years in federal prison after he pleaded guilty to obtaining child pornography on his home computer.

James Rick Mitchell, 67, was allowed to remain free on bond until he surrenders by Feb. 7 in the courtroom of U.S. District Court Judge Janis Sammartino.

Mitchell worked for the San Diego

Unified School District for 34 years from 1969 until his retirement in 2003. He worked as a math teacher and track coach at Point Loma High School and University City High School, according to the U.S. Attorney's Office.

His most recent work included 24 years at University City High. He also worked at Einstein Junior High School as a physical-education teacher.

There are no allegations of molestation. The case was investigated by the U.S. Postal Service and he was identified as purchasing videos and images of minors engaging in sexual activity. The U.S. Attorney's Office said Mitchell was in possession of 4,751 videos of child porn and many more images.

Sammartino told Mitchell he had cast

The U.S. Attorney's Office calculated that Mitchell paid about $4,300 to purchase the images and videos.

Last year's Garrison Street charity fundraiser recipient was Will Barton, a 21-year-old Point Loma High School alum who was shot in a case of mistaken identity near Balboa Park and critically wounded — only to rebound slowly but surely beyond the wildest expectations of doctors, who gave the victim almost no chance of survival. The neighborhood raised over $4,000 for his Festivities, the charity fundraiser among them, are all in the spirit of the holidays and giving back, said Kyle Ybarra who, along with wife, Carrie, run Cocoa for a Cure and are among neighbors on the street who pitch in to make things happen every year.

Kyle Ybarra said the charity fundraiser has really taken off from what it start-

"Our daughter and three of her friends 14 years ago wanted to raise a little money to buy Barbie dolls and other things for a young girl up from Mexico who had surgery while she was in the total, but it seems like a lot more because hospital," he said.

That inaugural fundraiser netted $60. "Every year for 14 years it's (revenue's) increased. Last year we raised $5,000 in one night. We're hoping to exceed that this year, he said.

Someone or something different benefits every year from the "chocolate charity," Kyle said.

"Over the years, we've always tried to select either a charity that can assist local families, or a specific individual, like a friend of our daughter's who was diagnosed with lung cancer a few years ago, chase hot chocolate for $1 a cup, as well as other family baked goods and a number of items donated by local merchants selling for 50 cents to a dollar.

"We also have a jar, as well fo,r folks who don't want cocoa and just want to make a straight donation," said Ybarra, "One hundred percent of all the proceeds go to charity. Absolutely nothing comes out to pay for the light displays."

But Cocoa for a Cure is just one aspect of the Garrison Street Christmas celebration on the block between Chatsworth Boulevard and Garrison Place. The annual tradition of lighting up the block was begun by the mother-daughter team of Nazare Caboz and Carolynn Freitas, neighbors on Garrison, in an attempt to "brighten up the street."

The holiday lighting tradition began without anything elaborate — just a small nativity scene. Then there was a Santa in the window. Then angels in the windows. Then Mickey Mouse characters in the windows.

Other homes nearby joined in adding lights and other things, like big blow-up displays of Santa Claus and his reindeer, snowmen and other Christmas icons.

"It's really only eight or nine homes of all of the lights," said Kyle.

Garrison Street neighbor Richard McLaughlin said his Christmas display, which one neighbor likened to "Disneyland," started out small with add-ons every year, and has turned into something quite large a decade later.

"My daughter, Casey, started doing it (lights). It was a nice hobby for her," he said. "We built some little houses out front and filled them up with Santa Clauses and other things with lots and lots of lights.'

McLaughlin said Christmas Eve is the biggest — and best — night for viewing

"It's just chaos that night," he said. "People from the bus line stop off. We have Santa Claus out front talking to all the kids. Christmas Eve is the big event. After that it starts slowing down."

Nazare Judd, a granddaughter in the family that started the Garrison Street Christmas tradition, said the "light show" started as a friendly competition 27 years ago between her mother and her grandmother that "got out of control."

"Year by year, it grew and all the neighbors started doing it and new families came and joined in and it's become a great tradition that's adored by people around the county," Judd said. "We have people who've been coming back every year who say, 'I used to come here as a little kid.' Now there are second- and thirdgenerations of people coming back to see it. It's really neat.'

Judd said most neighbors are modest about discussing their Christmas displays, which she said have evolved into something really remarkable.

"Every window has a little display," she said. "There's possibly hundreds of thousands of lights. You can get out of your car and go down a walkway that connects all the different individual displays. There's even a display honoring fallen heroes from the police, fire and mil-

Judd said it now takes as long as three or four weeks to set up some of the Christmas displays, which collectively consume so much power when all the lights are on that "SDG&E electric meters start going in the opposite direction there's so much power (used) in our block.'

McLaughlin admits the annual Christmas light display is no small expense. But he said it's all worth it.

"We do it for the community," he said. "We get a lot of thanks from people for doing it."

In addition to the quiet and exhaustfree ride, another factor distinguishing BayDreamin' from other tour boats is the Duffy's easy maneuverability.

"When we come into the Embarcadero, we can stop, turn the boat any way guests want and open up the windows. The big boats can't come in close to get their pictures," Mike said.

Many groups of family and friends fill the scheduled cruises and the McNabbs gladly tailor tours to passengers' interests. Already, they've attracted visitors from far and near and locals celebrating anniversaries, birthdays and other special occasions.

Former Point Loma fixture, Barnard Elementary reopens in PB

By DAVE SCHWAB | THE BEACON

The location may have changed, but Barnard Elementary's mission remains unchanged: emphasizing global education with Mandarin Chinese language instruction.

Named for its original location in Point Loma, Barnard Asian Pacific Language Academy hasn't changed its name, despite having moved from 930 Barnard St. in Point Loma to 2445 Fogg St. in Pacific Beach.

Principal Edward Park toured the grounds of the newly relocated magnet school, formerly Bayview Terrace Elementary, enthusing about Barnard's new digs, its progressive program, being one of six schools in the Mission Bay "cluster" and its role in the larger community.

"We want local people, local businesses to come by and support the schools," said Park. "We've got a very special community. I know for a fact these parents want to make positive changes in this community. And we're doing everything we can to be as special as possible and create opportunities for everyone, like the Mandarin program."

Barnard Mandarin Chinese Language Elementary School was a fixture in the Point Loma community for many years until the magnet school was relocated this year to Pacific Beach. The San Diego Unified School District sold the Point Loma campus and its athletic fields last year to help plug district budget holes.

gramming is that, through integration with the Mandarin Chinese culture, including the arts, music and literature, students will develop the ability to successfully use their knowledge to think and act globally and become thoughtful, responsible and successful global citizens.

The blending of a world-language program with a challenging and well-rounded academic program also taught in English enables Barnard students to face and triumph over the challenges of the 21st century,

"It supports the mission of all our schools in Mission Bay, which is to be globalized," he said.

The Mandarin Chinese magnet program started out six years ago in Point Loma in a 65-year-old rundown facility with just 130 students.

"It was a school that wasn't going anywhere," said Park. "We instituted the Mandarin language program and got a whole slew of partnerships and students coming from different places all over San Diego County. Now we're looking at about 430 students with a waiting list — and we'll probably even extend it more next vear."

EDWARD PARK

Principal, Barnard Elementary School Mandarin Chinese Language School

Park showed off Barnard's office lobby, which is full of plaques and photos honoring the school and its achievements.

The principal has spent a lot of time and effort redecorating the school, hanging out lanterns and adding other touches of Chinese culture like dragons (symbolic of renewal) and lots of red coloring (symbolizing new life).

Park said a new educational approach is being championed at the school.

"Were trying to make sure our teachers interact with our students rather than a lecture style," he said.

"We want children surrounding teachers instead of the teacher here, and students over there. That creates space and we want collaboration. We want students to be engaged. We want a lot of conversation happening, not like the olden days where teachers continued to talk and kids just listened. Now we want to bring out their creativity and their innovative mind set."

Barnard also has the latest technological educational innovations, like Promethean, a high-powered display whiteboard that combines touch interactivity with integrated

"It brings the students closer to our innovative style of learning," said Park, demonstrating the use of the new high-tech board.

"I just love doing Google Earth," he said, focusing the large Promethean screen in on the Great Wall of China, demonstrating just how cutting-edge an educational tool the system can be.

Commenting on his new school and larger, more modern facilities, Park said, "It's awesome. I love it. It's bigger, better. We have a wealth of energy. We're very happy about it."

He also cited the newly released benefits package, which had been negotiated between CVS representatives, Ocean Beach Town Council president Gretchen Kinney Newsom and the Ocean Beach MainStreet AssociaNeetion.

November, when Newsom brought the matter up before the OBPB. She cited Rite Aid as a less-than-enthusiastic civic booster, charging the outlet had declined to host receptacles for the Town Council-sponsored Food and Toy Drive, and feared corporate policies could similarly undercut CVS' participation in the community.

"We wanted to know how CVS could be beneficial to the community. And that's why the Town Council stepped in. (CVS) accepted everything the OB Town Council requested," Kinney Newsom said.

Kinney Newsom highlighted several CVS pledges for particular emphasis:

- It agreed to host receptacles for com-The push for a benefits package began in munity donations of money, food and toys for seasonal events;
 - It will restore the existing mural on the building's north side, less the Apple Tree ration wanting to be a member of our comname, or replace it using a community artist or community fair;

- It publicly endorses a ban on plastic carryout retail bags:
- It will "participate with the community in efforts to make any surplus parking open for public use;"
- It will "evaluate the feasibility" of selling a limited amount of fresh fruits and vegetables; and
- It will develop a process to allow local vendors to sell their wares.

Denny Knox, executive director of the MainStreet Association, said CVS was a more-than-willing negotiating partner.

"It was really refreshing to see a corpo-munity," she said.

But opponents said it wasn't enough to address concerns citizens expressed a month earlier

"We have a Rite Aid I can throw a whiffle ball to from the parking lot of (the proposed) CVS. I don't think they need a liquor license," said board member Andrew Wil-

"They (CVS) are appeasing us by giving us a list of terms. What's to say another company wouldn't give us the same deal, if not better?" he asked.

Wilson said when people who know about the CVS plan approach him, "They want to know what I'm going to do to prevent it. If I can prevent it, I'm going to prevent it by voting no."

Board member Bill Bushe complained the OBPB did not know about the ongoing negotiations and did not attend a meeting hosted by the Ocean Beach MainStreet Association to discuss the matter.

"This process is corrupted. There's something not right here," Bushe said.

But Board member Ronson Shamoun said he was happy with the results.

"I support CVS and think that's the best tenant we're going to get. What they've offered is amazing," he said. "Although we want a supermarket, I think (CVS) is going to be an asset and clean up the neighbor-

Local living history: Point Loma's La Playa Yacht Club

By MIKE McCARTHY | THE BEACON

One of San Diego's unique residential attractions lies in Point Loma along San Diego Bay.

Just a short distance across from Shelter Island is an area of elegant serenity called La Playa.

This is a place of beautiful homes and gardens that surround a blue water lagoon with a white sandy beach.

A few boats are tied up to a small well-kept wooden pier with a colorful sign claiming that it belongs to the La Playa Yacht Club.

One would assume that this claim of ownership is nothing but a humorous gesture. The reality is that there truly is an organized La Playa Yacht Club, with a membership of more than 200 families.

The purpose of the club is to foster interest in yachting and to maintain and preserve the historical pier located in the La Playa neighborhood.

On Aug. 29, this one-of-a-kind club, with simply a pier as a home, came together for its annual bayside barbeque at the Southwestern Yacht Club.

Members enjoyed a beautiful summer evening, having dinner, taking care of business and welcoming new members.

The highlight of the evening was a few words from Edwina Goddard, the last surviving member of the original La Playa Yacht Club.

She shared fond memories of the early days in Point Loma.

At age 90, Goddard eloquently described her life living along the bay in San Diego during the Great Depression and World War II.

In the early days, La Playa Cove was over 100 feet of mud flats at low tide. Launching or accessing a boat during those days was virtually impossible.

During the late 1920s, eight families in the area each put in $50 to build a pier at the foot of San Antonio Street that would span the mud flats to a floating platform.

By 1931, the first La Playa Yacht Club was established to maintain and preserve the pier.

The membership grew over the years, and eventually the organization became a member of the Yachting Club of America (YCA).

Reciprocity for club members is available with other yacht clubs around the world.

The little wooden pier, with a funny mermaid and penguin as a logo, continues to be the landmark for the beautiful La Playa community of Point Loma.

Biking alternatives for extensive Coastal Rail Trail beginning to roll forward

By DAVE SCHWAB | THE BEACON

Transportation officials gave a comprehensive analysis of seven prospective alternative alignments connecting Gilman Drive on the south with Carmel Valley Road to the north during an update on the Coastal Rail Trail (CRT) Project at a recebt community stakeholder working group meeting.

The Oct. 23 meeting at Nobel Recreation Center was a follow-up to a workshop held previously, during which stakeholder groups gave input which helped the city determine which criteria would be used in evaluating the seven proposed alternative CRT alignments.

station and a future trolley line in the proiect area.

The Mid-Coast Corridor Transit Project will extend light-rail transit service from ette with the San Diego Association of the Old Town Transit Center to UCSD campus and surrounding University City. Construction is expected to begin in mid-2015 with full operation to begin in

"We're not trying to get to a singular (CRT route) alternative (tonight). We're trying to say what would be the appropriate two or three alternatives to carry forth into environmental review so that they can be studied and analyzed in more detail," said Mark Carpenter, consultant with KTU+A, an environmental planning and landscape consulting firm. "Tonight's objective isn't to cancel six out of seven and say, 'That's the one.' It's to say, 'When you look at all of them, are there two or three that rise to the top and make the most sense to carry forward?'

Transportation planner Chris Carter-Governments (SANDAG), the region's transportation planning agency, said the CRT is part of SANDAG's regional bike plan intended to "provide a bicycling environment that is convenient and safe and encourages people to choose to ride a bike in lieu of a private automobile trip."

After that final workshop, Abi Palaseved said three or four of the seven prospective CRT alignments will be forwarded sometime early next year for environmental analysis. In the end, he said, a best preferred alternative among the three or four finalist alignments will be chosen.

"We (city staff) will make the recommendation," said Palaseyed. "But ultimately, the City Council has the choice."

Certified Organic Stands for Commitment at OB Peoples Organic Food Market

"Organic" refers to the way agriculture products-- including foods and fibers—are grown and processed. Organic farmers, in general, use no synthetic chemical fertilizers, herbicides, pesticides or defoliants, and use only natural pesticides on their crops when absolutely necessary.

The "certified organic" label stands for a commitment to a system of agriculture that strives for balance with nature. When you buy certified organic food, your choice protects the health of future generations, yourself, and farm workers by keeping cancer-causing pesticides and herbicides off of plates and out of farm environments. This choice also protects water quality by supporting farms that do not contribute to petrochemical runoff; preserves topsoil because organic farmers build soil using natural amenities rather than synthetic fertilizers; helps support small family farms; preserves biodiversity through the cultivation of heirloom varieties; and provides you and your family with better tasting fruits and vegetables.

For the best selection of organic produce and grocery items in San Diego stop by Ocean Beach People's Organic Food Market, at 4765 Voltaire Street. Open Daily from 8 a.m. - 9 p.m. call us at (619) 224-1387 or visit us on the web at www.obpeoplesfood.coop

Ready for a new skate experience? Local inventor redefines roller-skate industry

By V.L. HESTERMAN

Skaters of all ages joined in a free demonstration of a brand-new kind of roller-skating experience called Cardiff Skates at the basketball court at the corner of Cushing and Farragut streets in Liberty Station on Dec. 7 at 10 a.m.

"You may have seen people cruising around on Cardiff Skates at Mission Beach or Liberty Station. Here is your chance to try out for free a new way to skate that is fast to learn and fun," said inventor Brian Green, who lives in Point Loma with his wife, Shanen, and dogs Ari and Charlie.

Green's skates are a convenient cross between in-line skates and the classic strap-on roller skates.

"Cardiff Skates strap onto your favorite shoes," he said. "They automatically size adjust and feature a stable wheel configuration and braking system, which makes them perfect for all

This is an exciting time for Green, who people of all ability levels to enjoy. With saie he grew up pond skating in Connecticut and skiing in Vermont.

"When rollerblades first came to market in the mid-'80s. I skated a lot. but I wanted a more comfortable and convenient skate. My hobby was inventing products. I have several other patents on pet products, a gardening product and suspension skates."

Green, 52, said he has been at work on one invention or another since he was 24

"I was on HSN (Home Shopping Network) with one of my products, and one of my products went to TV through an infomercial. The skate project has been my life's work and I am so psyched to see it come to market.'

Green said his goal eight years ago was to create a more comfortable, stable and convenient skating experience for the investment of friends and family, he prototyped and tested many different wheel configurations to come up with the most stable wheel configuration.

He took his patented tri-skate wheel configuration to a group of experienced skate engineers in Munich, Germany, who helped him fine-tune the function of the automatic size adjustment, wheel configuration and braking system to be stable enough for all ability levels.

He then hired a local Oceanside design firm, C4 Design Group, to help create a binding system and restyle the functional German design into a more stylish working prototype.

Green partnered with an experienced skate and rollerblade manufacturer in Asia (which once made over 9 million pairs of rollerblades a year.) Green and others then field-tested the production prototypes for several years.

A lifelong friend of Green introduced him to San Diego resident and fellow entrepreneur Bob Pollack, who had over 30 years of executive retail experience with Target and other stores. Pollack saw the potential in Green's new skate evolution and invested in the technology.

This year, Green and Pollack formed the Cardiff Skate Co, located in Cardiff by the Sea, with Pollack as CEO and Green as VP of products. They hired a team of experienced professionals to market-ready product.

Inline skating, once the fastest-growing sport in the world, hit its peak in the 1990s with over 30 million participants. The skate industry hasn't seen a revolution like Cardiff Skates since.

"Bob and I believe these skates will reinvigorate the industry by offering a new way for everyone to skate, making them perfect for transportation, recreation or just to cruise around," Green

The Greens met the public at the free skating event in Liberty Station on Dec. 7.

Ocean Beach graphic designer meets, exceeds business goals in record fashion

Jenn David Connolly, owner and founder of the award-winning graphic design studio Jenn David Design (www.jenndavid.com), recently tasked herself to significantly expand her business. Her motivation? A better life balance with her family, which includes two small children.

Her five-year plan, which she set at the end of 2012, included moving her studio out of her home, building a team and ensuring that the business could run more independently and efficiently. Of course, all of this would need to happen without sacrificing or compromising work quality, customer service or new business.

Six months later, Connolly accomplished her goals. She's brought on a talented team, and moved into a bright, sunlit studio just blocks from her home in Ocean Beach. Not only did she fill the positions she was looking for. but she also added an intern position at her studio — something she's always wanted to do as a means of giving back to the design community. She and her new team are maintaining the creativity and excellence for which the design firm is known.

"I truly felt my goal was at least five years off due to my kids still being so young (2 and 4 at the time), and also not having the savings built up," Connolly said.

Connolly said she knew that growing the business was the only way to increase its revenue, although the task seemed daunting and far-off. But a death in the family served as an unexpected source of personal motivation.

"My mother-in-law had recently passed away, suddenly and far too young," Connolly said. "This loss made me realize how short and precious life is and that I want to live it to the fullest. I don't want to look back and say, 'What if?' So, instead, I made the conscious decision to say, 'Now is the time,' and here I am making my business dream goals happen."

The agency, which flourished in its first decade, has set the tone for its second decade with growth and success.

"I started the growth by getting clear on what the big picture of Jenn David Design looks like, what the roles are, workflow processes, what the office space would look like, from the signage to the color of the walls," she said. "Once I got clear on that, the pieces started to fall into place. I capitalized on opportunities that presented themselves to me, and am excited about how the business is poised for the coming years. To accomplish such major goals in such a short amount of time only furthers our determination and inspiration."

Jenn David Design has earned a national reputation in packaging design, but also offers a complete package of design services to ensure consistent branding across all channels including: packaging design, corporate identity and branding, marketing collateral, websites and more. Connolly also serves as communications director for the San Diego chapter of AIGA, the professional association for design.

Raglan Public House's 2nd annual Christmas Sweater Party to benefit Toys-for-Tots Drive

By TERRIE LEIGH RELF | THE BEACON

With a growing chill in the air, don't hesitate to rummage through your closets for that favorite holiday sweater to help others!

Mark your calendars for Thursday, Dec. 12 from 7 to 11 p.m. for Raglan Public House's second annual Amazingly Ugly Yet Strikingly Beautiful Christmas Sweater Party. Raglan is also participating in the Marine Corps' Toys for Tots Foundation drive, so be sure to buy a cool toy (or two) to brighten a child's holiday season.

"We like to do something for the community every single year, and this is something we're really looking forward to," said managing partner Mike Zouroudis. "We want you to have fun and celebrate by doing something that makes a difference. For every new toy you donate, you'll receive a free drink ticket."

Need a toy shopping tip?

"Buy something you would want to play with if you were a kid," Zouroudis said.

If you're thinking about buying jacks or a set of Legos®, however, it goes without saying that this means one ticket per set. You could bring your own children along their expert advice. The more the merrier, so you could also bring your nieces,

The Ocean Beach Food and Toy Drive is sponsored by the Ocean Beach Town Council, and will continue through mid-December. If you're unable to attend Raglan's event, Claudia Jack of the Ocean Beach MainStreet Association said toys can be dropped off at the following locations: Details Salon Spa; Dr. Michele Yamada's Ocean Dental Care; Margarita's; Pruett Realty; the Farmer's Market; The OB Quickstop; The Temptress; Union Bank; U.S. Bank; and Wonderland. nephews and friends' children. It could be an excellent way to teach generosity and create meaningful traditions.

Raglan will award "Greatest Sweaters" prizes and offer all-night drink specials with their usual menu. It also plans to create a signature eggnog drink to celebrate this occasion and the season. So bring friends and family — and as far donning that sweater — "The uglier, the better," said Zouroudis.

Rock and Roll San Diego continues to incubate, churn out future talent

BY BART MENDOZA | THE BEACON

There are many things that make the holiday season a wonderful time of year, but near the top of the list is music and the magical effect the last month of the year has on children. It's no secret that music can teach children many skills needed later in life, whether performing becomes a career choice or not.

From logic and teamwork to discipline and thinking outside the box, music adds a lot of skills to a person's resume.

There are many places to learn music in San Diego, but nothing is quite on the level of Rock and Roll San Diego. The music school in Point Loma also includes rehearsal rooms, recording studios, repair shops, equipment sales, a booking agency, record labels and more, with a world-class roster of instructors, including the likes of jazz/R&B vocalist, Stellita Lindgren and blues guitarist, Johnny "V" Vernazza, who has worked with the likes of Elvin Bishop and Van Morrison.

On Dec. 14, Rock and Roll San Diego is hosting a "Rockcital," showcasing its students in 183-seat capacity Jimi Hendrix Hall. Soloists and duos will open up the program, with a short break followed by group performances. Guests can expect a bit of everything in the program, from jazz to classical to rock 'n' roll.

For the students it's a chance to perform in front of an appreciative audience, with state of the art gear. For parents and music fans, it's a heartwarming chance to see an all ages group of future artists taking their first musical steps. You never know, one of those performing in Hendrix Hall this night, could actually go on to be the next Hendrix.

According to Rock and Roll San

MARK LANGFORD Owner, Rock and Roll San Diego

Diego owner Mark Langford, music lessons like these students are taking can be an important part of a child's development.

"Giving the gift of music helps, because what you're giving is confidence, creativity, teamwork and leadership skills to the individual that they can use, as well as mental well being," he said. "You're teaching them attention to detail. In order to play music you have to have attention to detail.

"From one note to another has to be thought and analyzed through," he said. "So these thought processes that we use are useful to any job throughout our entire lives. Learning to communicate through music helps you communicate as a person as well."

He said students have ranged in age from 2 to 80 years old.

His reasons for opening up the music school are based in his own

"I have skills that I have learned over many years of my life in music that I can pass on," Langford said. "And I know that I have experiences and techniques that I have learned from masters, not only in guitar, but also working with major and international talent."

He's clearly motivated by the opportunity to help musicians take their skills to the next level, while having a lot of fun.

"These are experiences that I can pass on to others that many people won't have and they won't get at a local music store," he said.

Rock and Roll San Diego prides itself in particular on its teaching

"It's more than just being a good talent, teaching is another art in itself," Langford said. "Not all great musicians have that. It's important to find teachers who not only are great quality musicians and performers, but who also have the character to do this and people skills."

With the school now heading into its third year in business, Langford is looking forward to the school's recital, and is thrilled with progress at Rock and Roll San Diego thus far. 2 p.m. No cover. All ages.

"I'm happy to have created an environment that people can come to and feel safe and be creative in, while learning and connecting with other musicians." he said. "I take joy in the fact that I've seen people come in, could barely do anything, and now they're doing amazing things with their music. I've found a joy in nurturing talent. That's the biggest joy for me."
