Sacre bleu! St. Patrick was actually French?

By MARTIN JONES WESTLIN | THE BEACON

I have two pub friends who swear by Ireland and the grass-roots kindnesses of its great people. I feel the same way about mes chers français, so we have a lot of notes to compare, especially when those guys or I are getting ready for a trip. (I'm leaving for Europe in June for what could be as long as five months, two of which will be spent among the French; maybe we'll all catch up next fall, when they'll have gotten back from the place they swear they're moving to one of these years.)

The last time we talked, our conversation somehow fell to St. Patrick, who seems to have cornered the market on holiday personality cults – except maybe for Jesus, which is great – but as Irish

Point Loma pockets a new park

By DAVE SCHWAB | THE BEACON

Roseville in Point Loma, one of the city's oldest neighborhoods, will have a new pocket park thanks to a March 8 unanimous vote by the City Council.

The council action committed a total of $840,000 from Peninsula developer impact fees for design and construction of a new pocket park on a two-thirds-acre lot on Avenida de Portugal above Cañon Street.

"City parks are part of the reason why San Diego is a wonderful place to raise a family," said 2nd District Councilwoman Lorie Zapf, whose district includes the Peninsula. "I thank my council col-

Richard Aguirre says that rainfall velocity greatly heightens the erosion factor at Sunset Cliffs.

Run-off is causing bluff erosion, Save Sunset Cliffs spokesman says

By DAVE SCHWAB | THE BEACON

It's top-down water run-off, not bottom-up wave action, that's eroding Sunset Cliffs.

Richard Aguirre, founder of a group known as Save Sunset Cliffs and a retired Realtor with a geography degree from UC, Berkeley, contends that's the reason the picturesque bluffs are receding faster than a man's middle-age hairline.

"Crisis" and "emergency" are two words Aguirre uses to describe the present disintegration of the cliffs.

"It's critical to stop the erosion right now," said the Ocean Beach resident one recent afternoon, pointing to where the cliffs used to be years ago.

"Here, you can see all the gulleys that are causing the erosion down Sunset Cliffs, water over the edge," said Aguirre, pointing to small furrows that gradually carve through the cliffs.

Aguirre gave his take on the process involved in cliff degradation.

"Only during heavy rains do we have the erosion on Sunset Cliffs," he said. "We've got a velocity and volume of water that's extreme coming right down where the streets hit the (Sunset Cliffs) boulevard. Uncontrolled surface run-off is what's creating the entire problem."

Aguirre also has a ready answer for what he believes will solve the problem.

"We don't have any storm drains at all, just small pipes that go right into the cliffs," he noted, adding the street curbs "aren't adequate to control water coming down Froude Street. It's like a fire hydrant jumping the road and washing straight down over the cliffs, eroding it all the way down and making the lower level now unstable."

The Save Sunset Cliffs spokesman laid out his plan for preventing downhill water from eroding the coastal landscape.

"Everywhere the street meets the boulevard, you'll have, in the alley running parallel to Sunset Cliffs, cattle-guard-style crossings going into a 4- or 5-foot-diameter underground pipe that will control all the water from the hillside coming down," Aguirre said. "Then, it will take all the water collected from the entire hillside runoff into the storm drain, then out to the ocean via three outfall pipes."

Asked why his notion of a "comprehensive storm drain system" hasn't gained more traction, Aguirre said...

"The city is in denial. We need to state the case, say, 'Here's the evidence.' We want to get a little bit of leverage, approach the City Council and get this issue on the docket."

"It's hard to get anybody to have the guts and stand up and say no," Aguirre added.

Comprehensive Storm Drain First System:

Save Sunset Cliffs plan: Everywhere the street meets the boulevard, in the alley running parallel to Sunset Cliffs, there will be cattle-guard-style crossings going into a 4- or 5-foot-diameter underground pipe that will control all the water from the hillside coming down.

Miss Cabrillo crowned

Brielle Mussomeli was crowned 2016 Miss Cabrillo Festival at the 53rd annual pageant, held March 13 at the United Portuguese SES Hall in Point Loma. Brielle is a 2016 Point Loma High School graduate and is planning to attend Boston's Berklee School of Music in the fall. As Miss Cabrillo Festival, Brielle will reign over the 2016 Cabrillo Festival, commemorating Portuguese explorer Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo's discovery of the West Coast of what is now the U.S. on Sept. 28, 1542 for Spain. The judges awarded the Spirit of Cabrillo Award to Jaquelyn Neves, also a 2016 Point Loma High graduate. The pageant is sponsored by Cabrillo Civic Club No. 16 San Diego and Portuguese-American Social & Civic Club.

Forum yields long wish list among 14 PCPB candidates

By DAVE SCHWAB | THE BEACON

Fourteen candidates vying for five open spots on the Peninsula Community Planning Board talked about themselves, their community and why they should represent it at a March 3 forum.

The advisory group election will take place from 4 to 8 p.m. Thursday, March 17 at Point Loma/Hervey Library, 3701 Voltaire St.

The terms for the five vacancies will run through March of 2019.

Forum moderator Jon Linney thanked attendees, introduced the candidates and asked the questions.

Candidate Michael Haeggquist said he's seen a lot of change in the community in the five years he's been there.

"I want to get my feet wet and get more involved in the community," Haeggquist said, adding, "I want to see it change for the better." He said his 30 years' experience in construction and his architectural degree will help him judge projects coming before the board.

Retired Navy pilot Jerry Lohla, who spearheaded opposition against the Plum Street "perpetual remodel," said that "My wife and I moved here because of the quality of life, and we want to help preserve that."

Brad Herrin, a real estate agent and third-generation Point Loman, said he's seen changes in the community "both good and bad." An empty-nester, he said he'd like an opportunity to "give back to the community I grew up in and help it go forward."

Laura Miller said she likes the "charm" of Point Loma. She said she got engaged civically when a house built near her was oversize. "The Point Loma Community Plan, which needs to be updated, is my Bible," she said.

A Point Loma Nazarene University grad student, Samantha Stockton said she'd "fallen in love with this community," adding she'd like the chance to promote it. Stockton said she and other students were very much in favor of a grocery store, not a pharmacy, replacing the old Fresh & Easy on Catalina Boulevard. "Students want to have some say on topics like that," she said.

Incumbent Nicole Burgess, a bicycling enthusiast who represents Council District 2, which includes Point Loma, grew up in Ocean Beach and has three teenage daughters. "I want to improve public health and safety and increase our transportation options for everyone on the Peninsula and around San Diego," she said.

A Navy veteran and Roseville resident, Don Costello said he was most concerned about growing density, noting, "I don't want to see us continue to see how many people we can squeeze into Roseville with zero setbacks and buildings 45 feet tall."

James Davisson, who lives in Liberty Station and whose wife is active duty military, said he'd like to promote modes of travel other than cars, adding, "I'd like to help get people out moving alternatively."

Joe Holasek said he came to San Diego out of architectural school in Arizona and got a job out here and couldn't leave. "I'd like to bring an architect's perspective to (building) design in the community with development that is sensibly placed and appropriate," he said.

Incumbent Jarvis Ross said the most important thing about being an advisory board member is "representing the people that live here. I'm supportive of projects that conform with the community plan," he said. "But we have to be respectful of the people that live here and protect against the projects that don't belong here."

Geoff Page, who grew up in a Navy family and has previously been on the board, took issue with projects using "liberal" measurements to calculate the 30-foot height limit building restriction. "Somebody has to watch the city giving variances," he said, adding he also doesn't like the "50 percent rule" that allows builders to do mostly new construction if they just leave the bare bones of existing development."

Sam Laub, a Roseville resident with an engineering degree, said, "I want to be active to help seniors in the community" while noting population projections indicated "there will be 40 percent population growth here by 2050. We have to watch very carefully the structures being built."

Incumbent Patricia Clark, a Liberty Station resident, has been on the board six years. "I want to serve the community and their concerns about building and parking," Clark said.

"We need a cohesive board that will address issues in a professional and thoughtful manner," she added.

City planner Geoffrey Plagemann said he wants to see building done that's "environmentally sustainable. I've done a lot of urban design," he said. "I want the community to have a voice and use my experience to give back to the community."

PCPB elections

The Peninsula Community Planning Board will be holding elections March 17 to fill five vacancies for terms that will expire this month. The term for the five vacancies will be effective through March of 2019.

The election will be held from 4 to 8 p.m. on Thursday, March 17 at the Point Loma/Hervey Library, at 3701 Voltaire St. The PCPB meets on the third Thursday of each month and has various subcommittees that also meet on a regular basis.

Easter Sunrise Service at Cabrillo Monument

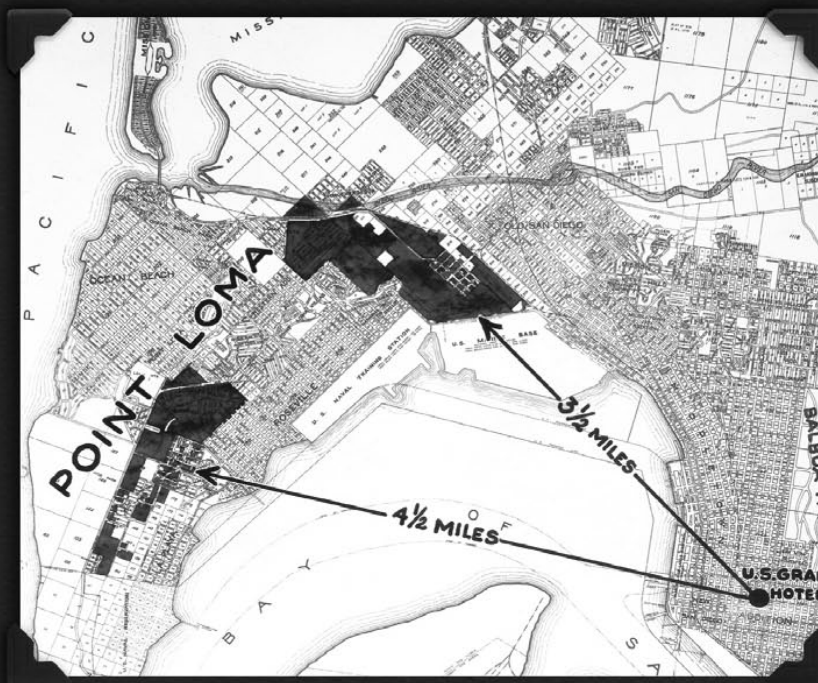

The Kiwanis Club of Point Loma will present an ecumenical Easter Sunrise Service at the Cabrillo National Monument on Easter Sunday, March 27. The services will be held in the lower parking lot, giving those who attend a great early morning panoramic view of San Diego Harbor and the city behind it.

Club president Matt Lemas points out that this year's services will mark the 67th consecutive year that the Kiwanis Club of Point Loma has staged the service.

The gates will open at 6 a.m., with the nondenominational service beginning at 6:30 a.m. There is seating for approximately 700.

TIME TO JETTISON YOUR "A-B" TRUST?

by: Dick McEntyre, Attorney at Law

Many married couples during the period from approximately 1985 through 2010 have created, and presently live with, whether they know it or not, what are frequently called "A-B" Trusts.

In an A-B Trust, upon the first spouse to die, all of the spouses' combined trust assets are to be divided into two subtrusts, Trust B (the Decedent's Trust) and Trust A (the Survivor's Trust). Trust B is to consist of the deceased spouse's 1/2 of the spouses' community property, and his or her separate property, but not to exceed the then amount of the federal estate tax individual exemption amount. Trust A is to consist of all the remaining property in the trust (being the surviving spouse's 1/2 of the community property, his or her separate property, and any of the deceased spouse's property in excess of the above estate tax exemption amount).

Trust B is irrevocable—meaning, practically, that the beneficiaries, and their respective percentage interests, as listed in the Declaration of Trust or Trust Agreement which the couple initially created, cannot be changed by the surviving spouse. Also, as set forth in the initial Declaration of Trust, there are restrictions imposed upon the surviving spouse's use of the Trust B funds. In contrast, the surviving spouse can change any of the terms of Trust A and can use all of its funds without restriction.

Being that most couples would like the surviving spouse to have complete right to and use of all funds and other assets in their trust following the first spouse's death, why were trusts set up as A-B Trusts in the first place? The answer: (i) to reduce the size of the surviving spouse's estate at his or her death, and thereby reduce potential federal estate taxes (because the assets in Trust B are not considered to be part of such surviving spouse's estate [only his or her Trust A assets]), or/and (ii) if the couple had a "blended family"—such as each spouse had children by a former marriage—in which case more of Trust B would potentially be available to the deceased spouse's children when the surviving spouse died.

The negatives of a B Trust are:

- (1) Its irrevocability as referred to above,
- (2) The restrictions upon use of its funds by the surviving spouse, also as stated above,
- (3) The complications and legal work required to make the division (allocation) of assets into Trusts B and A upon the first spouse's death,

- (4) The need to do annual income tax returns for Trust B, and

- (5) The fact that the assets placed into Trust B do not receive a "step-up" in basis for income tax purposes on the death of the surviving spouse (unlike the assets in Trust A, which do).

The good news is that since 2013, the federal estate tax law has become less of a burden in two major respects: (a) the estate tax exemption amount has been increased to a present $5,450,000 per individual; and (b) this exemption can be doubled for use by the surviving spouse under the concept of "portability." (But to have portability a federal estate tax return must be filed—but no tax due—on the death of the first spouse to die.) Thus, it may now be much less advantageous for the married couple to create or maintain an A-B Trust.

The point of this article is to recommend that you review your existing Declaration of Trust or Trust Agreement, and if you discover that you have an A-B trust type, discuss with your attorney to see if it would be better for you to convert it into a non A-B Trust type. So long as both spouses are living, they can make such a change.

Pointers boys win CIF soccer title

By SCOTT HOPKINS | THE BEACON

The referee's final whistle sent a team of Point Loma High boys, their coaches and a sizable contingent of fans into a frenzy March 5 as the school won its first CIF soccer championship since 1983.

And the No. 4-seeded boys did it in style, dominating No. 2 seed San Marcos 3-1 in the Div. II title match, played at Olympian High School in the South Bay, to end the 33-year drought.

This is the second CIF crown placed on the Pointers' heads this year after boys water polo won its first banner during the fall sports season.

The win brought the Pointers' record to 11-5-6 on the season after a 4-1-3 second-place finish in the Western League.

The Knights finished the season with a record of 17-6-2 after a 6-3-1 finish to win the Avocado East League.

Pointer goals were scored by seniors Kyle Hoh, Jase Souza and Luke Raley, who also had two assists. Junior Lukas Hanc added an assist to the scoresheet.

Goalkeeping duties were split between sophomore Marley Mascarenas and senior Trevor Eide. Each was credited with a pair of saves during their half in goal.

And for Pointer head coach Elliott Savitz, a Pointer alumnus (class of 2002), it was a time for reflection.

"As a Pointer myself, it was a special moment," he said. "I lost in the CIF final as a player; I always wanted to get into coaching, and when I got a teaching job and started coaching here, it was really a long-term dream. I've always wanted to see if we could win a CIF title for the boys and the community."

Savitz sensed last season that he had the special team that could do just that.

"Last year, we had a young team," Savitz recalled, "with a lot of sophomores. I always felt that their technical abilities and soccer IQ were good, but they were just a little younger than some of the teams we were up against. I felt that next year they were going to be a little bigger, a little stronger and a bit more mature. When we lost to Orange Glen in the playoffs last year, we (coaches) said we couldn't wait until this season so they could get out there and showcase their skills and intelligence."

Savitz scheduled tough opponents for his team's early nonleague games this season. That strategy seemed to pay off as his team proved they could play with such opponents.

"It was a privilege coaching this group of young men this year," Savitz said. "Winning the CIF title was monumental for us and the community."

The soccer title had added sweetness because the No. 4-seeded Pointers knocked off No. 1 seed Ocean-side in a semifinal match played March 2 on the Pirates' pitch.

The Pointers fell behind 1-0 in the first half before Raley answered with a second-half goal off a Townsend Meyer assist to send the game to a shootout. There, the Dogs prevailed 4-3 to oust their favored opponents and move to the championship round.

Goalkeepers Mascarenas (four saves) and Eide (three) again split time in the net, with Eide getting credit for the win.

The Pirates entered the match with a season record of 17-1-5 and a Valley League title under their belts, outscoring opponents by an average of 4-1.

In the quarterfinals, after a first-round bye, the Pointers sent the Bishop's Knights into retreat in a 5-1 blowout. Raley scored twice, while Hoh, junior Adrian Marmol and sophomore Tim Mooring each had a goal. Hanc picked up a pair of assists, with juniors Townsend Meyer and Kian Meyer each adding one.

Mascarenas and Eide again split goaltending duties, each making three saves.

Pointer players, fans left in the dark after championship

By SCOTT HOPKINS | THE BEACON

After winning a CIF soccer championship, Point Loma Pointer players and fans found themselves in a dark stadium at Olympian High School in Chula Vista when stadium lights were turned off before their team's trophy presentation began following the team's victory over San Marcos.

All CIF playoff events are conducted by the CIF, including charging admission to sports like soccer that are normally free. Adults, for instance, paid $9 for admission.

A large turnout of these paying students, boosters and fans had watched the Pointers earn a 3-1 victory for their first CIF title in 33 years when, at the final whistle, many students ran onto the field to celebrate with the athletes. When security personnel asked them to leave the field, the students did so quickly and without incident, according to PLHS Principal Hans Becker.

Suddenly, the lights on the Point Loma (visitors) side of the field were turned off, and confused people began leaving the darkened stands.

Meanwhile, CIF officials in attendance and in charge of the game began the on-field introduction of San Marcos players by the public address announcer, presenting them with pins as runners-up.

Then, as Pointer players and coaches stood awaiting their introduction, the remaining stadium lights turned off, leaving numerous Pointer students, parents and fans in a completely dark stadium at an unfamiliar school site.

At least one injury to a Pointer fan who fell in the dark has been rumored, while many who attended the game are upset by the chain of events that left people disoriented and scared.

Becker contacted the San Diego

CIF office and his district director of athletics, seeking an explanation for the apparent snub of Pointer fans and athletes.

Last week, CIF Commissioner Jerry Schniepp visited PLHS to personally apologize for the debacle. He said the lights were turned off on the visitors side of the stadium "to move fans off the field"; however, many Pointer fans were seated, awaiting the trophy presentation.

Schniepp also said the rest of the lights were turned off "by accident" when a custodian flipped the switch. The lights were turned on again later, but only after they had gone through a mandatory "cool-down" period.

As for the CIF champion Pointer soccer team, Schniepp offered to have a ceremony for the team at any time the school selects and added the investigation of the incident continues and that "some changes" will be made.

a completed Environmental Impact Report on its April 26 agenda, the culmination of several years of community meetings and input characterized by strong opposition from some community members to proposed improvements and installation of night lighting at Pete Ross Stadium on the campus.

The meeting will be held at 5 p.m. at the Eugene Brucker Education Center Auditorium, 4100 Normal St.

Known as the "PLHS Whole-Site Modernization and Athletic Facilities Upgrade Project," the first phase of planned long-range improvements also includes:

- Demolition of the existing media center/classroom building, known as the 800 building, a round two-story structure with oddly shaped classrooms and no restrooms;

- Construction of a new three-story building, containing a new media center and 20 new classrooms that meet future standards;

- Renovation of the current 200 and 300 buildings;

- Construction of new security features that will allow only one path of access to the campus during school hours;

- A new arched facade along Chatsworth Boulevard, requested by community members, that will provide some connection to the school's beloved original Spanish design;

- Construction of "turnouts" for school buses to leave more space for vehicles passing in front of the campus;

- Construction of a 150-square-foot main distribution building for better distribution of technology; and

- Installation of overall security improvements.

While opponents of the Athletic Facilities Upgrade component of the project have resumed a letter-writing campaign, members of Point Loma Cluster Schools group (pointlomaccluster.com), which represents all Peninsula public schools, is hoping that community input to board members reflects the actual opinions of all community members.

In a recent email newsletter, the group asked those supporting the upgrades to write to Michael McQuary, school district board president and trustee for the Peninsula area, at mmcquary@sandi.net.

In addition to night lighting, the athletic field upgrades include Americans With Disabilities Act upgrades to existing concrete bleachers and other areas of the facility.

Concierge personal trainer makes house calls

By HANNA LAUKKANEN | THE BEACON

"I can see that you have more strength left," says Rachel Stoltz, personal trainer. "Six more!"

Stoltz is training with me in my gym, which is the place I wanted to work out. The training is very efficient, and I truly can feel the fat burning. Meanwhile, Stoltz's business idea is founded in availability – to come where her customer wants to work out.

"When I come to wherever they want to, they don't have any excuse left not to train. In many cases, people don't have time to work out or they can't drive to the gym because they have small children to take care of. I help them to train," Stoltz says.

She also helps older and insured people to train in their houses. Seniors want to maintain their ability to move and do regular stuff like go to the grocery store or walk their dogs. Some of them want to exercise in a safe environment and not go to a gym.

Stoltz always brings her equipments with her – yoga mats, click weights, balls and ropes – so that the customer can try different workouts.

San Diego resident Stoltz is originally from Poway and has a kinesiology degree in physical therapy and more than 12 years of training experience.

I want to get more muscle. Stoltz shows me simple moves to develop my abs, biceps, triceps and shoulders and to help my sore neck.

Women are usually more eager to work out with a personal trainer than men, but men follow the lead when they see the women's results in appearance and well-being. Stoltz helps them work out how they want; training depends on what they want to achieve. Some want weight loss, some want good abs and some want to learn how to use a new exercise machine.

"It's great if something truly motivates a customer to train," she says. "The real reason to work out has to be something that they value in life, for example be able to play with your grandkids or maintain the relationship with your significant other or live longer."

Stoltz's life goal is to help people live healthful lifestyles by creating balance and joy in her customers' lives.

"Outside shows what is inside," she says. "I want to deal with forgiveness and guilt and get the problems inside solved."

Princess Project finds the beauty inside the prom dress

By HANNA LAUKKANEN | THE BEACON

You name a dress style, they have it. Last year, more than 1,500 high school girls from San Diego visited Princess Project's fitting room, and just about all of them found their prom dress.

Every year, more girls need help finding and paying for a prom dress. Princess Project offers dress styles that vary from traditional to modern, from goth to princess; girls often say, "I have never had a dress that looked so nice!"

"Families struggle with financial problems, and sometimes they can't afford to buy a prom dress," said Karen Martin-Spellerberg, spokesperson for Princess Project. "Princess Project releases the financial burden from families. We provide free dresses and jewelry that are new or gently used."

High school prom is a tradition, and that usually puts a lot of pressure on young women. They want to look nice, and because some families can't afford to buy a beautiful dress, some girls have to think twice and maybe will not be able

■ Princess Project is a nonprofit organization giving high school girls an opportunity to have a beautiful prom dress free of charge.

■ Annually, 1,500 girls find their prom dress via Princess Project.

■ New prom dresses cost $600 to $2,000, which some families can't afford.

to go to prom.

"When girls find their prom dress with us, they are grateful, happy and smiling. Some say they wouldn't be able to find a dress like that by themselves," Martin-Spellerberg said.

She strongly recommends that girls book an appointment beforehand at princessproject.org so that the organization is prepared for them. Girls can bring one female companion with them for the dressing and have a personal dress shopper with them, as they have one hour to find a perfect dress.

Point Loma native – and former Miss Cabrillo – stars in new reality show spoof

By KAI OLIVER-KURTIN | THE BEACON

Starring in the new real estate reality show "Bajillion Dollar Propertie$," Mandell Maughan, from Point Loma, can be seen on NBCUniversal's new streaming comedy channel Seeso beginning Thursday, March 17.

The 30-minute, eight-part, semi-scripted reality show spoof follows seven real estate agents as they navigate the cutthroat nature of high-end real estate in Los Angeles.

Maughan graduated from University of San Diego High School before going on to train with The Upright Citizens Brigade Theatre and The Second City in L.A. Here's what she had to say about her newest role.

Peninsula Beacon: Tell me about the role you play as Victoria King on "Bajillion Dollar Propertie$."

Mandell Maughan: Victoria King could be described as the villain of the show. That being said, I think what makes her entertaining is her continual attempt and failure at being a successful villain. Our creator describes her quite accurately as a "bully with daddy issues." She is overly confident and highly insecure. But what I love about Victoria is her blind confidence.

She could be wrong a million times and still believe with absolute confidence that she's always right. There's something so funny to me about that kind of blind faith in herself. Later in the season, you'll start to see how her relationship with her father has really shaped who she is and why she acts the way she does.

PB: Since the show is semi-scripted, how much of it is improvisation?

MM: Our writers are incredible. They have written the plot lines, scenarios and ideas. Before shooting a scene, we're given an outline with ideas of dialogue and direction for the scene. After that, it's up to the actors. They've given us a lot of freedom. Most of the dialogue is improvised. The producers are also particularly patient in letting us have 25 minutes of improvising before eventually getting to the point of the scene. To say our job is fun is an understatement!

PB: Did you take theater or acting classes while living in San Diego?

MM: I did community theater in high school. I was also part of the San Diego Children's Choir and the American Ballet when I was younger. Somehow, I was always doing something onstage, even if that stage was my family room with my dad's 40-pound VHS recorder.

PB: How did growing up in Point Loma influence your acting career?

MM: I grew up in a very strong Portuguese community in Point Loma, a community that still exists today. My great-grandfathers came to San Diego and were founders of the American tuna industry. I was fortunate to be raised and immersed in my culture. In 2001, I won the title of Miss Cabrillo. It was a wonderful opportunity to use my voice and love for the stage while honoring the Portuguese community.

"It's not just fitness; it's an emotionally uplifting experience."

If you've ever walked along Liberty Station's eastern outskirts on any given morning, chances are you've heard the energetic shouts and upbeat music emanating from the gymnasium-like building that stands at the corner of Roosevelt and Cushing Road.

With its front doors overlooking the community's scenic backyard, Point Loma Sports Club welcomes hundreds of local residents each day for their customary workouts. The 23,000 sq. foot premises houses a state-of-the-art weight room, cycling studio, yoga studio, and functional training arena. It also hosts over fifty various group exercise classes weekly. Since its establishment in 2012, the club has been rated among San Diego's top fitness facilities.

Experience the artistry of tea

If you want to know about Point Loma Tea, you need to get to know its owner, Cheryl Graf. Cheryl is a life-long tea enthusiast, really – since childhood. Some of her earliest memories are of spending time with her Grandmothers in the Midwest having tea parties. Her Mother, as a Minister's wife, was well known for her hospitality, welcoming visitors to her home with fresh-baked goodies and tea. Cheryl's first job as a teenager was assisting the British owner of a Boarding House in Bellflower, CA provide afternoon teas for her guests, serving tea, polishing the silver, and more. As a wife and mother, she often worked in Church Hospitality and Women's Ministries, and helped organize many tea events, from a dozen participants in a home, to kid's tea and etiquette events, to hundreds of women in hotel ballrooms. In 2000, after a successful career in office administration, Cheryl had the opportunity to "retire" from that career, and follow her passion for tea and hospitality as a full-time career. And that journey over the last dozen years culminated in the opening of Point Loma Tea in October 2012. For Cheryl, it is all about the experience you will have when you explore the awesome specialty teas and related accessories in our store, and in your home, with your family and friends.

luck would have it, one noted researcher says Patrick was actually born in France.

Seriously, France.

Rediscovering St. Patrick: A New Theory of Origins, published in 2013 by Ireland's Columba Press and written by an Irish guy, says that Pat (real name Maewyn Succat) was taken into slavery as a shepherd at age 16 in A.D. 403 in Northwest France's Brittany region, not in Britain, as history originally thought.

Church of Ireland clergyman the Rev. Marcus Losker, the author, recalled that Patrick's writings say he was kidnapped by Saxon forces "when Irish pirates attacked his father's house at 'Bannavem Tiburniae,' in Latin. The names bear an uncanny resemblance (to Bonavena de Tiberio, name of the house), and three other place names mentioned in St. Patrick's writings also tie in with areas around (Brittany's) Chateau de Bonaban."

There are records of Patrick having escaped Ireland and landing at France, visiting Tours, Lerins and Auxerre before returning to Ireland and his remaining life as a bishop; there's no reason to believe he wasn't familiar with the locales in which he found his freedom. Moreover, Patrick's admitted lack of education and communication style (he apologizes many times for his lousy writing in his two known works) fueled Losker's theory that Patrick simply misspelled the name of dad's house.

"I was dumbfounded," Losker told the Belfast Telegraph, adding that he has called for an excavation of Patrick's remains at Downpatrick's Down Cathedral so Roman Catholic Church officials can get to the bottom of things.

I told my friends that this is yet another story reflecting France's and the British Isles' star-crossed paths. Both countries sometimes remind me of a rumpled couple resentfully struggling to get through the same doorway – and like that couple, both countries have always come out talking. If Patrick was truly born in France, the French will likely seize on it as another feather in its feather-laden cap. If the story of his birth holds true, my tub-thumping Ireland partisans will say they told us so. Both nations will thumbs-up the other, however begrudgingly – and both we partisans will recount the supreme irony of having discussed St. Patrick in an Irish bar – now, which one was it, The Harp or Gal-lagher's?

Inspiring children through action with 2nd Recess

By HANNA LAUKKANEN | THE BEACON

Children in the United States need to get moving, and a nonprofit program in San Diego wants to help.

San Diego residents Marco Anzures and Natasha LaBeaud Anzures co-founded 2nd Recess with one goal in mind – to inspire through action. As professional runners, Natasha and Marco saw the need to give back to the community and inspire the next generation to make decisions that can directly impact future health.

It is recommended that children exercise at least two hours a day, and some children don't exercise at all. As rates of childhood obesity continue to rise, 2nd Recess has committed itself to teaching the importance of regular exercise and healthy dietary habits to local children and families.

"We wanted to give back to community. With children, we play, do different workouts, explore sports and train different games," said Marco Anzures, a National Federation of State High School Associations coach and a USA Track & Field level 1 and 3 coach.

When the Anzureses started five years ago, they had five children in a training group. Now they have 500 children exercising in groups and different events from Mission Bay Park to University City to Chula Vista. They also participate in running races, where kids have the opportunity to see how races work. Children run with adults at their own speed.

"They have the same finishing as adults, and their time is tracked, so it's a really genuine experience of racing," Anzures said.

2nd Recess is looking for more volunteers, some of whom get a stipend for coaching. If you are interested, visit 2ndrecess.org.

Nonprofit organization 2nd Recess organizes children's exercise groups weekly in Mission Bay Park, Balboa Park, Chula Vista, Monte Valley, University City and Doyle Park.

ENJOY THE BEAUTY OF OLD TOWN

Mention Old Town San Diego and most folks will start talking about Mexican food whether it's the restaurant their family has been going to for generations or a new discovery they've made recently. And rightly so. If there is a capital of Mexican cuisine in San Diego, it's definitely Old Town.

Increasingly, though, people are discovering what locals have known for years. Old Town is also the place to go for shopping and Fiesta de Reyes is the place to hit up if you're in the market for a unique gift or specialty item you just can't find anywhere else.

Fiesta de Reyes is home to 19 unique specialty shops featuring authentic, historically themed, one-of-a-kind items that are perfect for gifts or for yourself. From hot sauces to silver jewelry, from olive oil to toys, from unique garden items to original artwork, books to wine to jerky all of the specialty shops of Fiesta de Reyes are locally owned and independently operated.

Of course, if you really want authentic Mexican food with your shopping, Fiesta de Reyes also features three fantastic restaurants that celebrate San Diego's rise from a Mexican village to a thriving culinary and commercial mecca. Add to that, the nightly entertainment and Fiesta de Reyes is not just a shopping center, it's a vibrant shopping and dining experience.

For more on the shopping, dining and entertainment at Fiesta de Reyes, go to fiestadereyes.com or just visit in the northeast corner of Old Town San Diego State Historic Park. 2754 Calhoun Street, San Diego, CA 92110.

Zombie comics artist Jeremy Cox to try standup comedy

By BART MENDOZA | THE BEACON

It's hard enough to be a success in one field, but acclaimed comics artist and colorist Jeremy Cox is making a major shift in his career strategy, going from paint brush and easel to trying his hand at standup comedy. Appearing at Winston's on April 1 as part of the 11th annual Ocean Beach Comedy's Funniest Person Contest, Cox, a San Diego native, has worked on many notable comic book titles, starting with his own, "Zombie Love," in 1992, kicking off a career that has seen him work on such top titles as Spider-Man and the Batman-themed, Detective Comics as well as his latest title, "Vampyrates."

While he has dealt with the public at comic book conventions and the like, he quickly realized this was considerably harder. "Live performance on a stage is easily the most difficult thing I've ever under taken," he said. "I've always had a knack for art and storytelling, but stage work, acting, controlling a crowd... not so much," he joked.

The original intent for Cox moving into comedy was work related. "Besides enjoying live standup and improv comedy, I've read so much about writing, and a number of my favorite writers have ties to standup comedy," he said. "So as a writer, I wanted to give it a try to see how it would effect my writing. It had the expected affect of making my writing more concise. I now try even harder to get a point across with fewer words, and I've learned how much physical action or facial expressions can do the work of hours of writing."

He plans to channel some of his comedy into a new project. "I've been drawing cartoons of all my jokes and I've done well over 200," he said. "I post some of the safer jokes on Twitter and I printed up an ash can that collected some of these to sell at this year's Comic Fest to see if people would be interested. I sold out of all my copies, so the plan is to Kickstart a collection of my first year in stand up."

He notes there is a more direct connection as well. "Part of comic books is reading scripts all day and developing pacing and timing, even with what I do, the actual coloring of the comics. Telling a story in comics, animation, video games or now standup comedy, all share things," he continued.

While he has done a few one-off attempts at stand up, he has only been at it full time for a year, with nearly 100 performances under his belt to date. "I went up at the Comedy Palace in Kearny Mesa," he recalled. "I read on Facebook, that a friend from Atlanta was in town and had gone on. I was mad and jealous and then realized, you're thinking about this too much. I told my friend and he insisted that we go up the following week."

7 Things You Must Know Before Putting Your Home Up for Sale

A new report has just been released which reveals 7 costly mistakes that most homeowners make when selling their home, and a 9 Step System that can help you sell your home fast and for the most amount of money.

This industry report shows clearly how the traditional ways of selling a home have become increasingly less and less effective in today's market. The fact of the matter is that 75% of home sellers don't get what they want for their homes and become disillusioned and - worse - financially disadvantaged when they put their homes on the market.

As the report uncovers, most home sellers make 7 deadly mistakes that cost them literally thousands of dollars. The good news is that each and every one of these mistakes is entirely preventable. In response to this issue, industry insiders have prepared a free report entitled "The 9 Step System to Get Your Home Sold Fast and for Top Dollar".

To hear a brief recorded message about how to order your FREE copy of this report call toll-free 1-800-691-9384 and then enter ID# 2000. You can call any time, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Get your free special report NOW to find out how you can get the most money for your home.

leagues for joining me in approving this new park that will give Peninsula families another place to take their kids, walk their dogs or just enjoy a beautiful San Diego day."

The $840,000 project cost earmarks $328,889 for engineering, $390,648 for construction and $120,463 for contingencies. Park cost is to include $11,075 annually for ongoing maintenance, to be reflected in the city's fiscal year 2019 Park and Recreation Budget.

It is the first public park approved in the Roseville section of Point Loma, which is "under-parked" in terms of being well below the city's population-based minimum standard of 2.8 acres in parkland per 1,000 population.

A local institution, United Portuguese SES, has consented to be the nonprofit buttressing creation of the new pocket park. UPSES and other local civic clubs are pledging money to help pay for extras the community wants in its next park.

Much of the credit for shepherding the new pocket park through the cumbersome city approval process goes to Don Sevens and Jon Linney, community activists and members of the Peninsula Community Planning Board, who were working on their own behalves to fill a perceived neighborhood need.

"Just 28 years in the making, a new park is coming to Point Loma," enthused Sevens following the council vote.

Linney concurred.

"This is a big, big day for us and our team," Linney said, noting he and Sevens have led a 20-month effort to create the park.

Linney pointed out his and Sevens' work is far from over.

"We expect we will be raising $100,000 for the extras," he said.

Students' Coffeehouse show highlights local talent

Coffeehouse, a wild ride of comedic sketches and the best of Point Loma High School students as singers, dancers and actors, will be held Thursday through Saturday, March 17 through 19, at 7 p.m. in the Larry Zeiger Performing Arts Center, 2335 Chatsworth Blvd. in Point Loma.

The show, in its 26th year, is unique in that it is a student production – auditions and casting, writing and directing are handled by PLHS thespians. Theater and dance director Christina Fulcher oversees the students' rehearsals and produces the show. Three student directors, Krysten Chermak, Sofia Scafidi and Brooklyn White, are leading actors through rehearsals and also starring in the skits.

This year's Coffeehouse has a cast and crew of nearly 50 students, a quarter of whom are International Thespian Society members. Twenty dancers from PLHS Dance Company will perform, and students in Theatre I and II will be featured in the production.

Students began preparations in January, soon after their fall production of the "Addams Family Musical." After several days of nerve-racking auditions, where more than 40 students tried out, the thespians began writing skits and choreographing dances.

Coffeehouse has a long tradition of fun, with skits that include student impressions of teachers. It is also a main source of income, benefiting from ticket sales, concessions and an opportunity drawing, with help provided by parent volunteers.

Advance tickets are $7 for students and $8 for nonstudents, $10 for adults and $20 for VIP seating at the door/online. Tickets may be purchased on PointLomaHigh.com or at the PLHS Finance Office.

Seniors Supplement Retirement while Helping Other Seniors

A recent Gallup survey found that 63 percent of workers planned to work part-time when they reached retirement age. Seniors return to work after retiring for financial reasons but others are looking for opportunities to give back. A local company, Seniors Helping Seniors, offers a unique opportunity for retirees to supplement retirement income and help other seniors. The company matches active seniors with seniors who need some assistance to remain independent. The senior caregivers are employed by Seniors Helping Seniors and provide a variety of services including companionship and socialization, rides to doctors, shopping, help around the house and medication reminders. The services often allow a senior to remain in their own home instead of moving to an assisted living setting. If you have a heart for helping fellow seniors, want to earn some extra income and have your own car, call Seniors Helping Seniors. They are hiring and provide free training. Call 800-481-2488 or visit the company website – homecarebyse-niors.com - to learn more.

Former Point Loma lighthouse keeper honored for rescues at sea

By KIM FAHLEN | THE BEACON

What have a modern U.S. Coast Guard cutter and a bygone-days lighthouse keeper to do with Point Loma's Cabrillo National Monument?

Displayed in the rehabilitated Assistant Keepers Quarters, beside the Old Point Loma Lighthouse, is a 1936 photograph showing a pleasant scene of families enjoying a picnic. The unique setting is within the compound of Point Loma Light Station, activated March 23, 1891. The skeletal-style lighthouse tower stands in the background.

Seated at the rough table are two assistant keepers, James Dudley (far right) and Milford Johnson, and their families. The handsome man wearing his United States Lighthouse Service uniform cap, wife Theodora beside him, is George Douglas Cobb, Head Keeper and the co-subject of this story.

Cobb was born in Kent, England in March of 1873. At 16, he went to sea and soon after immigrated to America, where it is believed he traveled directly to the U.S. West Coast. It was during a time when new immigrants were encouraged to head west to better balance the influx settling the eastern states.

It is believed that Cobb may have begun his lifelong career with the United States Lighthouse Establishment/Service as assistant keeper at

Open Tower Day celebrates Old and New Point Loma Lighthouses on March 22

Cabrillo National Monument commemorates the 125th anniversary of the last lighting of Old Point Loma Lighthouse and the transfer of operation to two new lighthouses. Everyone is welcome to join the festivities of Open Tower Day, Tuesday, March 22. San Diego's only national park is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Among the celebrated guests will be descendants of several former San Diego light keepers. These include the last living adult children who actually lived at the lower, and still active, light station.

Join the event throughout the day to hear stories and see pictures from family photo albums and enjoy a special presentation in the CNM auditorium at 11:30 a.m.

Lighthouse interpreters, Living History volunteers, and aids to navigation personnel will be on hand to enhance visits.

home ported in San Pedro, with a complement of two officers and 22 enlisted crew. "California's Keeper" George Cobb is responsible for 186 floating aids to navigation along the California coast, including the major ports of San Francisco, Los Angeles/Long Beach and San Diego. Particular characteristics of USCGC George Cobb may be reviewed on the USCG website, uscg.mil.

Commanding Officer Lt. Stephen Brickey, in a 2014 interview aboard the George Cobb, remarked that he feels privileged to be on the sea, that rescue is their most cherished mission — protecting those going, coming from and those focused on the sea.

"The crew," he said, "has to be qualified to wear different hats, trained in everything. It's trust-based. I like reading history that shows how the service was shaped and how we do what we do now. It is an honor to have Cobb as namesake and carry on in his tradition."

In a rather touching veneration to Cobb's memory, as the commander enters or exits the ship, two bells are sounded, and a crewmate calls out, "George Cobb arriving/departing!"

Patricia Dudley Goulart, daughter of former Point Loma Light Station keeper James Dudley, remembers Mr. Cobb was always genteel and wore his USLHS uniform for all occasions.

It is said that a photograph is worth a thousand words...

the Oakland Harbor Lighthouse in San Francisco Bay in 1890. The lighthouse was positioned on 11 piles mid-channel in the bay.

The day after Christmas in 1896, Cobb was on watch at the Oakland Lighthouse when he witnessed a small boat with three young men capsize in the bay. Two managed to cling to the overturned boat; the third swam to the south "training" wall (jetty). Cobb lowered the lighthouse boat from its davits, exposing himself to the fury of wind and sea in a heavy boat designed for two oarsmen.

At Cobb's peril, as he "maintained the poise of his boat" past the rocks, he reached the two men, who were numbed by the cold and nearly unconscious and helpless, and managed to get them aboard. Cobb then rowed 200 yards among jagged rock to the wall to retrieve the battered, unconscious third man. A witness to Cobb's heroic deed testified that the three would surely have perished without Cobb's selfless actions.

"Regulations for the Lighthouse Service as noted by Department of Treasury, Circular 46, 1900" states that life-saving medals could be awarded "to persons making signal exertions in rescuing and succoring shipwrecked or drowning persons in United States waters."

As federal government machination would have it, it was not until March of 1903 (while stationed at Point Bonita Lighthouse, San Francisco) that Cobb was honored with the Silver Lifesaving Medal he had earned seven years earlier. The medal would be worn on his uniform.

It is further recorded that Cobb was commended by the secretary of commerce, through the commissioner of lighthouses, for rendering assistance with the Coast Guard on December 14, 1916 in the rescue of 27 men from U.S. Submarine H-3. It had run aground seven miles north of Humboldt Fog Signal Station, and "the work of rescue [by breeches buoy] was attended with great difficulty."

Having served at the California light stations of Oakland, Point Bonita, Point Arena, Fort Point and Humboldt Fog Signal Station, Cobb was transferred to Point Loma Light Station in 1934, from where he retired in 1938. He died in December of 1940.

In the 1990s, the United States Coast Guard commissioned a new keeper class of buoy tender. Each ship would be named for a former lighthouse keeper distinguished for varying achievements. The 14th and final keeper-class cutter was named for George Douglas Cobb.

Formally commissioned by the Coast Guard on June 22, 2000, USCGC George Cobb (WLM-564) is to promote worthy causes, like supporting development of a new community pocket park.

"We're sponsors, have a park account and have an agreement with the park committee to actually head up its fundraising effort," said

Silva. "We think it's a great project to beautify our city and Point Loma."

Silva said UPSES's main mission is to "serve as a community hall."

A highlight of the hall's calendar each year is the Festa do Espírito Santo, this year to be held on Sunday, May 15. The festa dates back to the time when the first families settled in Point Loma in 1884 and was formally organized in 1910.

Today, as it has been since 1922, the chapel next door to the UPSES hall is used to house the Crown of the Holy Spirit during the festa. On Pentecost Sunday devotees of the Holy Spirit visit the chapel to pray and offer a donation of monies or Portuguese sweetbreads (sold to raise funds) to assure the continuation of this unique ethnic and religious celebration.

Since 1922, the Portuguese colony has made a procession (now a full parade) from UPSES Hall chapel with the annual Queen Saint Isabel personage holding the community's Crown of the Holy Spirit, up to St. Agnes Church for a celebratory Mass followed by another procession/parade back down to the hall afterward.

"We (UPSES) serve about 3,000 traditional Portuguese meals at the festa, including about 300 to the homebound and ill, which are delivered," noted Silva.

A Portuguese market, open Tuesday through Sunday located at the back of the Portuguese Hall, carries numerous Portuguese products like linguicas, cheeses from Pico and Madeira, different flours and condiments, as well as a wide variety of fish and liquors. Staffed by community volunteers and UPSES board directors, market proceeds fund the Portuguese Hall.

Silva said UPSES is a slice of the past in the present.

"We're a little Portugal, a little Roseville, bringing back what our ancestors and the founders of our city tried to do — bring a little of history to our society," said Silva, noting the hall is governed by 24 directors who hold an annual meeting in January, when an annual report is given to the community on how the organization is faring.

Silva said there are about 3,500 core members in the UPSES organization located throughout the city.

In the future, Silva said, UPSES will be hosting a Taste of Point Loma restaurant walk along with the community's chamber of commerce.

And don't forget weekly bingo at Portuguese Hall held every Thursday night starting at 6:30 p.m., with doors opening at 4 p.m. Friends and family can buy into a full evening of fun for as little as $21 vying for hundreds of dollars in payouts weekly.

Correia Middle students win prizes in C-SPAN's StudentCam competition

C-SPAN television recently announced that seventh grade students at Correia Middle School are winners in the channel's national 2016 StudentCam competition.

Tristan Cooper has won honorable mention and will receive $250 for his documentary, "Syrian Refugee Crisis." Stella Bruce and Jacqui Power have won honorable mention and will receive $250 for their documentary, "Oceanic Pollution."

The national competition, now in its 12th year, invites middle school and high school students to produce a five- to seven-minute documentary on a national policy issue.

This year, students used video cameras to address the theme "Road to the White House: What's the issue you most want candidates to discuss during the 2016 presidential campaign?" In response, C-SPAN received a record 2,887 video submissions from almost 6,000 students in 45 states and Washington, D.C.

"With the presidential campaign in the forefront of people's minds, we wanted to hear from students across the country about the issues that matter to them," said Craig McAndrew, C-SPAN's manager of education relations.
