Mayor directs broad changes in addressing homeless encampments

Mayor Todd Gloria has announced a number of significant changes to policies governing how the City handles homeless encampments and unsheltered people’s belongings.

According to Gloria, all policies affecting unsheltered residents will be based on dignity and compassion. They are aimed at providing transparency and consistency to reduce negative impacts of City sidewalk-cleanup activities on people experiencing homelessness.

‘All policies affecting unsheltered residents will be based on dignity and compassion.’

“While the City has an obligation to make sure we don’t have another communicable disease outbreak like hepatitis A among our homeless population, we can do so with compassion and while respecting their dignity,” said Gloria.

After San Diego’s deadly hepatitis A outbreak in 2017, the City has an obligation to ensure that its sidewalks are clean to protect against future public health threats. Other cities with large homeless populations have seen outbreaks of typhus and other infectious diseases due to unsanitary conditions in encampments.

Gloria has committed to a new compassionate approach that will keep the public right-of-way clean and provide less uncertainty for unsheltered individuals. The changes, most of which are already in effect, include:

- Suspension of cleanups and enforcement during inclement weather.
- Suspension of cleanups at night.
- Easier means to retrieve personal items removed during cleanups.
- Clearer and more consistent noticing of cleanup schedules.

Monumental sculpture debuts at Jacobs Medical Center at UC San Diego

Patients, families and hospital employees at Jacobs Medical Center can already peruse lace-like sculptures in a garden, find a moment of solace near a wall of bright butterflies and ponder paintings of peaceful landscapes.

Now, a new monumental sculpture by artist Jeff Koons debuts as part of the 150-piece Healing Arts Collection at the UC San Diego Health hospital. The artwork, titled Party Hat (Orange), was purchased 15 years ago by longtime university donors Joan and Irwin Jacobs while it was still in production. The larger-than-life metallic party hat reflects the transformative power of the healing that happens on the premises, as well as the celebration of new life at the hospital's Birth Center.

"I wish to thank Joan and Irwin Jacobs for their ongoing generosity to UC San Diego," said Chancellor Pradeep K. Khosla. Spanning nearly five decades, their gifts have supported a broad range of initiatives, from scholarships and art commissions to health care and the top-ranked Jacobs School of Engineering.

"Jacobs Medical Center is a world-class medical destination in great part because of the creative vision and generous philanthropy of Joan and Irwin Jacobs," said Khosla. "We are proud to be the beneficiaries of the first installed Party Hat sculpture by prominent artist Jeff Koons. This exciting addition to the Healing Arts Collection helps elevate our efforts to foster a welcoming and healing space for our patients."

An imaginative feat of engineering

Purchased in 2005 by Joan and Irwin Jacobs, Party Hat (Orange) (1994–2019) by Jeff Koons is one of five unique versions of the sculpture from the Celebration series. The series of large-scale sculptures and oil paintings memorializes the festive sentimental rituals surrounding events such as birthdays, engagements and holidays.

Designed meticulously by the artist and fabricated in mirror-polished stainless steel with transparent color coating, the sculpture references a traditional party hat on a colossal scale. The artwork epitomizes Koons's ongoing fascination with childhood experiences and childlike consciousness. By transforming a simple paper party hat into a monumental reflective form, the artist achieves a perfect tension between representation and abstraction.

"The goal of the Healing Arts Collection is to increase feelings of well-being while promoting healing," explained Joan Jacobs. "When we saw the color of Party Hat for the first time, it was spectacular. The scale of the piece brings focus to the entire collection. It is such a jubilant, beautiful sculpture; it felt right to feature it in the hospital."

The location of Party Hat (Orange) is ideal, situated in the main lobby of Jacobs Medical Center, where it can be viewed from multiple levels and angles. In the morning, natural light streams through the floor-to-ceiling windows, making the myriad surfaces of the sculpture appear to change throughout the course of the day. Koons was involved in choosing the best location for the work to make an impact on passersby—an especially meaningful act given that this is the first sculpture to be displayed in the public space of the hospital (which is currently accessible only to patients and staff due to COVID-19 restrictions).

"I'm delighted to see my artwork, Party Hat (Orange), installed in the entrance hall of the Jacobs Medical Center," said Koons. "I am very grateful to Irwin and Joan Jacobs for creating this opportunity for so many people to interact with the work. I hope it will bring a sense of optimism and wonder to all who encounter it."

This is the first version of Party Hat to be unveiled after a rigorous 25-year production period. During the creation of the work, the Jacobses visited the fabricator, Arnold AG, in Germany to witness the sculpture come to life.

Giant Dipper, Beach Blaster, and Tilt-A-Whirl reopen at Belmont Park

By DAVE SCHWAB

Belmont Park in Mission Beach is bouncing back, reopening some of its most popular rides as San Diego County springs forward through reduced COVID tier restrictions.

“We are doing a phased reopening starting April 1,” said Steve Thomas, general manager for the historic, seven-acre beach-front amusement center, which has conducted limited operations throughout the pandemic.

“Given our staffing limitations, we are opening a few of our major rides on April 1, then progressively more in the weeks ahead. As we continue through the different color-coded tiers, we’ll be able to open up more and more things.”

According to Thomas, the popular rides being rolled out on April 1 include the iconic Giant Dipper roller coaster and Beach Blaster, as well as the Big Swing, the Tilt-A-Whirl, and the Bumper Cars rides.

“Our Go Karts, rock wall, ropes course, and mini golf course have been allowed to be open while we’ve been in the Red Tier,” noted Thomas, adding much of the park, other than restaurants, has been closed for 10 months since June 2020. “Our restaurants have been open in some capacity, whether it be take-out only or outside, the entire time,” he added.

This is the second time in Belmont Park’s 95-year history that it has had to temporarily close its doors for an extended time. Open since 1925, Belmont closed in 1976 before reopening in 1988. The historic Plunge Pool, a private membership club open to the public, officially re-opened on July 4, 2019, after being closed and renovated for five years.

Of Belmont Park’s return, Thomas said: “It’s been a challenge to get people to come back to work. But as we add staff, we can open up as quickly, and safely as possible.”

COVID has slowed, but not halted, Belmont Park’s revitalization.

“Our plan over the last handful of years has been to slowly bring Belmont Park up to a new level, which started with the Plunge Pool, the heart of the project, moving outward from there,” noted Thomas, but “COVID has been really impactful.”

As restrictions loosen, Thomas noted: “We’ll continue our improvement of the park, continue to refine it, given where it’s at – a prime piece of real estate next to the ocean and the bay. It deserves to be a beautiful property. And that’s where we’re headed with it.”

Added Thomas: “We’re always looking to update things. First and foremost, we’d like to add in a couple more rides where we can find space for them. We’re always trying to make things nicer, better, bigger. But right now, our plan for improvement is just to take the park from ordinary to exceptional in its current form. We intend to keep the quintessential boardwalk vibe, but give it some upgraded amenities.”

Thomas said Belmont enjoys numerous advantages other than its unparalleled location including a largely outdoor orientation with plenty of restaurant space, and no “pinch points,”

SEAWORLD FIREWORKS RETURN

The SeaWorld fireworks show is back. Celebrate spring with a visit to the marine amusement park and end the day watching fireworks light up the sky (beach residents know the best spots to check out the shows). Fireworks will begin at 7:45 p.m. nightly through April 11. Fireworks are subject to cancellation or change without notice. Visit seaworldsandiego.com for more information.

bottlenecks due to limited entrances/exits.

“We’re very open and outdoors, and that has worked in our favor,” Thomas said.

Belmont Park and its iconic Plunge Pool’s history date back to the 1920s and wealthy sugar magnate John D. Spreckels, who was pioneering San Diego’s early development. To stimulate real estate sales and promote his electric railway, Spreckels built the Mission Beach Amusement Center, now Belmont Park, in 1925.

Originally known as The Natatorium, the Plunge swimming pool was constructed as a centerpiece of the park. After acquiring the lease to Belmont Park in 2012, Pacifica Enterprises and the City of San Diego negotiated a new lease in 2015 and entered into a partnership. # Easy to grow a green thumb by 'letting the soil do the work'

By DAVE SCHWAB

Forty-four years ago Paul Backus started out at Green Gardens Nursery in Pacific Beach as a water boy. Now he not only owns the place, but his regional business continues to successfully serve coastal clients in the Pacific Beach and La Jolla areas.

Backus claims there's no mystery to having a green thumb.

Instead, he insists you succeed at gardening through know-how, keeping up with the times, staying ahead of industry trends, and giving customers what they need and want. "We're ambassadors to doing the right things in nature," contends Backus, whose organic nursery is at 4910 Cass St.

Of his business strategy, Backus noted: "We're not just selling you. We want to create happy gardeners that have good experiences that are going to be long-term customers. If we just sold somebody and didn't help them. And they got the wrong things and went home. Then you've lost that customer. If you nurture them and they get hooked: You've got a customer for life."

Backus was an SDSU student when he first went to work for Japanese landscapers back in the day. He liked gardening so much he changed his major to botany. He eventually saved up enough to buy the nursery, which he has since expanded purchasing the property next door, along with adding a gift shop.

Gardening, like clothing, is cyclical, noted Backus.

"Plants are like fashion," he said. "It changes as time goes on. It's a guessing game to see what is going to be in fashion. For instance, we were in a drought, and everyone was buying drought-tolerant plants. But that changed real quick. Now that we've had the rains, demand has shifted to the tropicals. But it will eventually go back."

Discussing advice for neophyte San Diego gardeners, Backus pointed out they have some things in their favor, and several things working against them.

"We're probably one of the best places in the country, besides Hawaii, to grow things year-round," he pointed out while warning, "But you have two strikes against you. We have some of the worst soils in the country here with this clay adobe soil, which has very little nutritional value. We also have probably the worst water in California, because it's all imported and picks up all these bad salts and minerals on the way."

So how do you combat that?

"The whole trick is to start with good soil," counseled Backus. "If you start with good soil, you're going to probably have a good experience. If you just go and buy a bunch of vegetables from me, and try to stick them in our crummy San Diego soil and water them with our crummy San Diego water – you're probably not going to have a good experience."

The key to gardening success instead, insists Backus, lies in turning negatives into positives by using the right materials.

"You add proper amendments to the soil," he advised. "Break up that soil with gypsum. Start adding fertilizers because our soils are void of fungi and other things that help plants uptake nutrients."

Backus had other advice.

"Certain plants are made to be together," he said. "If you plant the right combination of plants, you ward off insects. If you attract the right beneficial insects and pollenizers, like bees, you have a more productive garden."

Timing, and temperature, are also critical.

"We put these time frames on things, but it really boils down to the nighttime temperatures," noted Backus half-jokingly, adding, "Plants will tell you, 'I don't care what the calendar says, I'm not going until the temperature is this.'"

The nursery owner offered an example.

"We've been carrying peppers and tomatoes for several weeks," he said. "But it's still too cold in the nighttime for them to really start taking off. The early birds don't always catch the worm with spring planting. It all depends on the weather."

Backus pointed out COVID, in some ways, has actually had a positive impact on his business.

"People have been at home so what do they do?" asked Backus.

"Number one, they notice their backyards, and they want to get their hands dirty, and all of a sudden they're coming out of the woodwork," he answered. "Everyone wanted to grow their own veggies, herbs, and fruit trees. It became so popular, it was hard for us to even keep inventory in."

And the demographics of gardening have changed as well during the pandemic.

"Then we got a big wave of younger people who don't have gardens or yards. What we saw was a lot of younger people with stimulus checks coming in and buying house plants. House plants have had a tremendous boom," noted Backus.

Green Gardens Nursery has found organics work the best all-around for all concerned.

"We're all about organics, especially with soils," concluded Backus. "The worst thing you can do is try to enrich the soil with chemical fertilizers. What happens is the plants grow really well, really fast. But you don't want that, because fast-growing plants are going to be more prone to being attacked by insects and funguses. So then you have to run to the nursery to buy chemical fungicides or insecticides. And

GARDENING TIPS

Spring gardening tips by longtime home gardener Linda Marrone, a La Jolla Village News columnist and a La Jolla Realtor specializing in historical properties.

– I like to purchase 4-inch pots of foxgloves, usually the hybrid "Camelot" and plant them in a fairly sunny spot in the garden. I have found that when you purchase foxgloves in 4-inch pots, find ones that have a small flower spike forming. Foxgloves are bi-annual and sometimes the 6-pack plants don't bloom the first year you plant them. I have several planted last year from 6-packs that did not bloom. They will bloom later this spring.

– I like to plant spring flowering plants in different heights and then sow some seeds of flowers that will bloom in the summer months, such as cosmos, coreopsis, Mexican marigolds, or small varieties of sunflowers.

– Always plant a few plants that will attract beneficial insects to your garden. Plants with smaller flowers, such as alyssum, Santa Barbara daisies, and many flowering herbs will do the trick.

– Sometimes, Green Gardens and Walter Anderson's Nursery carries Praying Mantis egg sacks this time of year. Place the sack in a tree or bush, at least 3-4 feet above the ground. I like to place it in a plastic mesh bag that has holes for the baby mantis' to emerge. When the weather heats up, hundreds will emerge and help protect your garden from unwanted invaders. I usually have about 6-8 that survive to adulthood in my garden, the rest are prey when they are so small. It is very interesting to watch them in your garden (see the photo of a Praying Mantis near my foxglove garden a few springs ago).

– Before you plant, feed your soil with organic earthworm castings and a box of some type of seaweed fertilizer. I used to love to supplement my soil with bat guano, but with COVID, I am not sure I want to use it anymore. Having healthy organic soil and using organic fertilizers, makes healthy plants that can resist pest infestation. Chemical fertilizers can make plants large with lots of flowers, but the plant sometimes can become weak and susceptible to pest infestation.

Scuderie Italia features handmade pastas, Napoletana pizzas

By DAVE SCHWAB

Scuderie Italia is dishing out elevated cuisine at reasonable prices with a casual atmosphere showcasing its Italian race car-themed eatery in Pacific Beach.

The improved Italian bistro at 1525 Garnet Ave., previously Caffè Bella Italia, is now also serving a weekend lunch offering its full menu of flavorful Italian dishes, along with American classics, on Fridays through Sundays from noon to 4 p.m.

"Italy is a big country with a lot of different recipes and all different influences between its different regions," noted Florence, Italy, native and restaurateur Leo Landini, who also owns Landini's Pizzeria in Little Italy and at Liberty Public Market. "We serve Napoletana pizzas straight from Naples made in wood-fired ovens with Tuscany recipes, along with some other northern Italian influences."

That North Italy connection is where the revamped restaurant's car theme comes from. That region of Italy is the birthplace of Ferrari and other high-profile luxury and sports cars.

About his hybrid Italian-restaurant concept, Landini said: "We were trying to figure out a way to design it to be interesting for younger PB people, and at the same time, be appealing to residents close by in North PB and on Mt. Soledad. We also didn't want to deal with high-volume music. So I came up with this concept of trying to be interesting for both those [markets]."

Added Landini: "I love all the (Italian) cars. So I came out with this idea of creating a restaurant, built not only around food but as a place where people can get together and see all these cool Italian cars and engines."

Scuderie Italia's menu features handmade Italian pastas, charcuterie, and more, all made with fresh local ingredients. Signature dishes include shrimp with garlic; Calabrian chili and crostini; gnocchi with butternut squash puree, pine nuts, and sage; handmade ravioli filled with eggplant and topped with Pomodoro and fresh basil; prosciutto Cotto and mushroom pizza with sauce and mozzarella; and truffle pizza topped with mozzarella, mushrooms, arugula, shaved parmesan, and truffle oil; among others.

Available for lunch-only on the menu are the multigrain salad of farro, quinoa, shrimp, fennel, cucumber, tomatoes, and herbs with lemon vinaigrette; fish sandwich made with localmuenster cheese, lettuce, tomatoes, red onion, and remoulade sauce. Each of the lunch dishes is served with a choice of chips or salad.

Landini talked about why he picked PB for Scuderie Italia.

"We are centrally located on Garnet and I really love the energy in PB," he said. "I also loved the (circular) shape of that building when I saw it was closed. I knew it would be a big challenge to remodel because of the shape. The first thing I did was open it up by putting in a sliding doorway. Because it was round, we had to work really hard to make the doors slide completely open."

Landini's business strategy is uncomplicated.

"I believe in keeping simplicity in the food, and in being honest and loyal with your employee team," he said. "I won't change that. Many of my employees have been with me for double-digit years. Really, my success is due to them. They're the ones, every day, who make sure the food is served in the right way. Having a good team around you, that's what allows you to be a success."

Crown Point neighbors upset with proposed mixed-use building

By DAVE SCHWAB

An infill development has touched off a land-use controversy over zoning in Pacific Beach’s Crown Point neighborhood. At issue is a project at 4033 and 4039 Lamont St. proposing a three-story mixed-use building with 18 residential units and ground floor commercial. The project includes two affordable dwelling units.

A neighbor, Andre Desjardins, has disputed the project’s legality, claiming it is not allowed under current zoning for that site. He contends the project is also out of character with the surrounding neighborhood.

“There are no pure commercial uses located anywhere on Lamont Street, south of Grand Avenue,” said Desjardins. “This is a residential neighborhood, plain and simple. The proposed pure commercial and/or office component of the project does not solve any unmet need in the immediate area.

“Home office use is already allowed in the underlying zone. Perhaps a better use of the space contained in the two commercial suites (proposed) would be some form of amenities for the larger project.”

Added Desjardins: “The project has all nearby residents very concerned about the negative implications of introducing a ‘commercial land use’ in a 100 percent residential area. I am in favor of increasing the housing stock in PB. I am not opposed to the development of new housing units.

“However, I am (and many others are) opposed to putting commercial uses in purely residential areas – community plans and zoning laws exist for a reason – and this project seeks to circumvent the PB Community Plan and existing residential zoning.”

“The reality is this is a pair of 300-foot commercial suites, and there’s not much else you can do with them other than put in professional offices,” said project architect Tim Golba. “In the RM-2-5 zone, which this site is, mixed-use is currently allowed by right. For the Paull project, we are using a development incentive not to ‘add’ commercial.

“Rather, we used an incentive to ‘expand’ the rather limited uses allowed for commercial by right in the RM2-5 zone, so that they would be more neighborhood-serving. That expansion through the incentive will allow professional offices such as accountants, artisans, massage therapy, consultation, and anything along that line, whereas the base zoning allows limited offices and instructional studios by right.”

Added Golba: “My clients are a family who loves Crown Point, not some Vegas developer or a local entrepreneur. We could have done 21 units by right, but we chose to do 18, which fit more with the property and the proposed design on the site. We’re not rezoning the property, it’s already allowed by right.

“All we’re trying to do is provide a viable alternative. The PB Planning Group picked up on that. They said, ‘This is a great idea. Someone could rent there, use the commercial suite downstairs, and never even need a car, which is what the City is pushing.’”

Desjardins disputes Golba’s take on allowable commercial uses for the Lamont Street infill site. He claims the project opens the door for a plethora of possible uses.

“The only ‘by right’ allowed quasi-commercial use is ‘instruction studios,’” contends Desjardins. “Office uses are not allowed. The commercial uses allowed under this zone include retail sales, eating and drinking establishments, financial institutions, maintenance and repair facilities.

CITY PROPOSES WATER AND SEWER RATE INCREASES

The City of San Diego is looking to increase wastewater rates, by 5%, starting in January 2022. In addition, the City's Public Utilities Department (PUD), which provides water and sewer services to customers, is proposing to pass through regional water cost increases to its customers. The rate increases for sewer services will help the City continue to upgrade core infrastructure by replacing aging pipes and sewer mains; and fund future investments like Pure Water, a water recycling project.

PUD is one of the nation's largest water and sewer utilities serving over 2.2 million customers in the region. The department maintains over 3,400 miles of water pipelines and 3,000 miles of sewer mains, also operating 82 pump stations to keep wastewater flowing out of every community.

The City of San Diego currently imports as much as 90% of its water, the bulk of which is purchased from the San Diego County Water Authority (CWA) which serves 24 cities and water districts throughout the region. While the costs of purchasing water from CWA have risen over the past several years, the City is now proposing to pass on a rate adjustment for the first time in two years of approximately 2% starting in 2022. Water and sewer rates in San Diego are comprised of base fees and usage charges for various customer classes. More information is available from the City at wastenowater.org.

BEACH CLEANUP AND RALLY FOR GREEN ENERGY

On Saturday, April 3, SanDiego350 will hold Build Back Fossil Free – an event that includes an “oil spill” art installation and morning beach clean-up near 3021 Mission Blvd. parking lot at Mission Beach from 9-11 a.m., followed by a countywide virtual rally from 1-2 p.m.

Activists will call on local and state officials to phase out fossil fuels in the process of economic recovery from COVID-19. As President Biden prepares to advance his infrastructure package, the event is designed to hold him accountable for climate action promises.

Activists will demand that Biden stops the Line 3 and Dakota Access Pipelines and promote an equitable recovery that prioritizes climate justice, renewable energy, sustainable transit infrastructure, and good-paying union jobs.

Activists will also call on state legislators and Gov. Newsom to pass Senate Bill 467, which would end extreme fossil fuel extraction in California and create safety buffers to protect the health of BIPOC and working-class communities living near drilling sites.

FANS TO RETURN TO DEL MAR RACETRACK

With improving trends in public health data, growth in vaccination rates and the gradual relaxation of limits on attendance at sporting and performance venues in the state, Del Mar Thoroughbred Club officials are looking forward to a return of fans to the seaside track when it opens for its 82nd summer season on Friday, July 16, track officials said.

Track personnel are planning for spectators on site when the racetrack kicks off a 31-day season that will feature 34 major stakes, a substantial increase in purses and a return to the sun and fun vibe that has been part of its culture since it first opened its gates in 1937.

With its traditional opening day feature – the Runhappy Oceanside Stakes – topping the bill on Friday.

PB Middle student collects sports equipment for foster children

A Pacific Beach Middle School student has collected sports equipment that she has donated to benefit local foster-care families.

As part of a school community service project, Mary Reger and her friend, Vanessa Gardner, developed a Powerpoint presentation to solicit donations of used and unused sports equipment. They then contacted various agencies to garner their support, as well as setting up a collection site.

"I feel like kids in foster care don't get enough appreciation, or do as many fun activities as other kids do," said Mary, discussing the motivation behind her sports-equipment drive. "We got a whole bunch of baseball bats, new soccer balls and basketballs, and some other equipment that other people have used, but not really that much."

"Then we got out a Google form to all my eighth-grade friends in my classes that people filled out and signed. Then I set up a collection site in front of my house, and all the neighbors who wanted to donate things."

"Mary was an absolute joy and her and Vanessa's hard work was on display with all of the items they collected," said Missy Bell, church and community engagement associate with the San Diego chapter of Olive Crest, a leader in the prevention and treatment of child abuse, serving nearly 5,300 children and families throughout the Pacific Northwest. "These items will encourage the foster kids and foster families that Olive Crest serves."

Mary dropped off donated sports items on March 26 at Olive Crest, noting her offering was well received. "They were super appreciative and very forthcoming and very nice about us bringing things," she said adding, "We're hoping to promote money donations and get the word out to help support foster children and the families that house them. We love children, and we want to help children have all the love and support they can get."

Bell said Mary approached their foster organization telling them about her school project.

"She shared that she had collected sports equipment and knick-knacks for foster kids and asked if we would accept them," Missy said, adding she was impressed that someone so young would be so socially conscious. "Not many eighth-graders are that interested in foster care."

Are you a St. Bernard, an owl, a lion, or a chameleon? Read to find out.

Doing it Better

By Natasha Josefowitz, Ph.D.

As we are reentering groups of people in our communities following a year in isolation, we have the opportunity to observe ourselves in how we relate to others. Isolation has changed us; for some in perceptible ways, for others in imperceptible ones. We are all different from who we were a year ago. We each have an interpersonal style. Has this style changed? To this end I have chosen four styles of relationships to others defined by the animals represented. Everyone has a characteristic interpersonal style that is their preferred way of relating to other people; even though they may change styles to accommodate particular situations, under stress we revert to one's particular style. Returning to community after a year's absence is stressful. This is why we have a unique opportunity to observe ourselves. All inter-personal styles have strengths and weaknesses. Weaknesses are strengths used to excess.

Let us start with the St. Bernard. St. Bernard people are helpful and friendly. They are warm-hearted and their main concern is the welfare of others, wishing to protect. They are open and responsive to the needs of others, looking for ways to make their lives easier. They try to avoid being a burden to others. The downside is that they may be push-overs used indiscriminately due to their good nature. St. Bernards avoid conflict, dislike arguments, and can be seen as impractical, gullible, and too submissive. St. Bernards need to learn to be more of service. Being genuinely helpful and caring about the feelings and well-being of others, is really a wonderful way of relating to people. Their basic style is altruistic and nurturing.

Let's take the owl. Owls are analytical. They are thinkers, planners, are concerned that things have been thought through. They see themselves as objective and fair, in control of emotions. The down size of owls is that they are loners, being nitpickers. They don't trust others for getting things properly; they have issues with spontaneity. They are seen as rigid, unfeeling, suspicious. They see themselves as independent and self-sufficient. They respect logic, facts, and wisdom. They know they should be more trusting, but have a hard time being so. They are methodical and fair.

The lion likes to be in control. Lions like to compete and win. They are assertive, ambitious, self-confident, forceful. They want authority, responsibility, and leadership. They push for immediate action, challenging others, and are risk-takers. Lions can be ruthless, arrogant, dictatorial, and combative. They despise indecisiveness. The down size of lions is that they can be slave drivers and bullies in their drive for task accomplishment, ride rough shod over people. Lions don't always acknowledge that they can be more considerate.

Chameleons are different. Their concern is being a good group member. They are willing to adapt and change and like to be seen as flexible. They know a lot of people and want to be known by a lot of people. Their main concern is the welfare of the group and its membership. They are curious about what others think and feel. They are open-minded and experiment with how to best act. The down side of a chameleon is that they are seen as wishy-washy and unpredictable. Chameleons wonder whether they should be more decisive and hold on to their opinions, which is hard for them to do, and are not sure what their own opinions really are.

Most people don't fit into just one category, but use a combination of different behaviors under various situations. I can think of other styles of relating to others such as the kitten, used by people trying to be childlike and playful; this can be acceptable in some situations or seen as seductive. I also thought of the laughing hyena; people who relate to others by making everything into a joke, which can become irksome. Then there is the lone wolf – the person who stays out of the conversation, not engaged nor engaging, and ends up being overlooked and dismissed.

As you read this, do you identify yourself more with one style of relating than another? Do you get a gut reaction "yes, that's me"? Your initial reaction is probably the right one because as one ponders, it is easy to rationalize and put oneself in a different category while we see ourselves in a better light. Before the pandemic, I admit to being a lion and a St. Bernard, but will tilt more to the St. Bernard as I re-enter my community.

LAWRENCE FAMILY JEWISH COMMUNITY CENTER HOSTS PICKLEBALL CLINICS

The Lawrence Family Jewish Community Center Jacobs Family Campus offers beginner, intermediate, and youth pickleball clinics open to the community. Pickleball is growing in popularity. The sport – a mix of tennis, badminton, and ping pong – is now becoming even more popular as an outdoor, socially distanced sport. Beginners can learn easily, and advanced players can enjoy the fast-paced, competitive game. To learn more about pickleball, visit usapickleball.org.

The JCC encourages players to bring their own pickleball paddle to the court. The level of intensity is a player's preference and JCC offers different clinics based on experience:

- Beginner Clinics – overview of court and game, basic rules, scoring, proper grip and body placement, and groundstrokes;
- Intermediate Clinics – serve and return techniques, improve consistency, develop strategies, drop shots, and point play.

Adult beginner clinic will be from 9:30-11 a.m. on Sunday, April 18. Intermediate clinics will be April 25, also from 9:30-11 a.m. Instructors are advanced pickleball players, as well as experienced coaches and teachers. Beginner and intermediate clinics are $24 per session, or $20 for JCC members. For JCC members only private, semi-private, and group clinics are available. For more information on pickleball clinics or pricing, visit lfjcc.org/qualcomm/tennis.

The JCC follows all county and state COVID-19 protocol and the procedures implemented to reduce the virus spreading.
