YEAR IN REVIEW – Park renamed for black educators, Village redevelopment plan, and roller skating trend takes off

By DAVE SCHWAB

While COVID continued with new variants, residents in Pacific and Mission beaches, as well as La Jolla, persisted demonstrating their mental toughness, resolve, and ability to adapt quickly to changing times. Public meetings continued remotely, people did what was necessary to protect themselves and others during the pandemic, and communities forged ahead dealing with the day-to-day realities of the new normal. The following are some of the more important things that happened along the beachfront in 2021.

UC 'SAN DIEGONAUTS'

When NASA unveiled the initial team of astronauts for its ambitious moon exploration project, the news quickly spread that two of the announced 18 Artemis program team members hold degrees from UC San Diego. The alums are Jessica Meir, who received her Ph.D. in marine biology in 2009 from Scripps Institution of Oceanography, and Kate Rubins, who earned a bachelor of science degree in molecular biology in 1999. As members of the Artemis Team, Meir and Rubins will help pave the way for NASA's next lunar missions including sending the first woman and next man to walk on the moon in 2024.

JANUARY

SUNNY DISTRICT

Lysundra "Sunny" Lee took the baton from Sara Berns to become Discover PB's new executive director guiding the beach community's business improvement district through unprecedented pandemic times.

SEALEBRATION

For the seventh year, Casa Beach was closed January through May 15 to give the seals privacy prior to giving birth, delivering their pups safely away from human interference. Visitors were not able to access the sand as a chain link secured the stairs leading to seals on the beach.

PB PROTEST

Shock, anger, and disgust were the primary reactions of PB leaders and residents to the culture clash between supporters of former President Trump, Antifa, Black Lives Matter, and police on Jan. 9 along Mission Boulevard. San Diego Police declared an "unlawful assembly" due to acts of violence, reportedly from Antifa, that erupted during the assembly. Witnesses reported people threw rocks and glass.

FEBRUARY

RECALL RECALLED

An effort to recall District 2 Councilmember Dr. Jennifer Campbell was officially launched but ultimately failed to collect 14,421 signatures – 15% of District 2's 96,140 registered voters – to qualify the measure on a special election ballot.

SHORT-TERM RENTAL REGS

City Council voted 8-1 to adopt a new proposed ordinance that would regulate short-term rentals and become effective July 1, 2022. The short-term rental compromise was proposed by District 2 Councilmember Campbell.

MARCH

PANDEMIC AID

As part of efforts to protect vulnerable San Diegans from the impacts of the pandemic, Mayor Todd Gloria on March 15 announced the launch of the Housing Stability Assistance Program.

LA JOLLA ENHANCED

The first Enhance La Jolla Day was March 20 as Enhance La Jolla, the community's maintenance assessment district, and the La Jolla Village Merchants Association, joined to spruce up the Village with a community improvement project.

APRIL

BELMONT BACK

Belmont Park in Mission Beach bounced back, reopening some of its popular rides as San Diego sprung forward through reduced COVID tier restrictions.

PARK CURFEWS

Increasing crime in parts of Pacific Beach during the evening- and early-morning hours prompted the beach community to recommend curfews at Fanuel Park, Pacific Beach Library grounds, and Mission Bay Youth Fields. That recommendation was approved by the City Council.

SEAWORLD REOPENS

Having relaunched its rides on April 12, SeaWorld fully reopened its theme park with limited capacity featuring animal exhibits, presentations, and other entertainment experiences.

SLOW STREETS

Some PB neighbors wanted the brakes put on the Slow Streets pilot program on Diamond Street from Mission Boulevard to Haines Street, claiming it is adversely impacting their neighborhood and was no longer needed.

FIREWORKS OVER FIREWORKS

The resumption of fireworks at SeaWorld resurrected longtime opposition to the pyrotechnic displays, which opponents insist can be harmful to both animals (especially dogs) and people.

PB WOMAN'S CLUB

Escrow closed on the century-old PB Woman's Club and three parcels at 1721 Hornblend St. The buyer was Ramin Karimi, who purchased the three Hornblend parcels for $1.4 million.

MAY

VFW REOPENS

VFW Post 5985 in North Pacific Beach, closed 14 months due to the pandemic, reopened on Armed Services Day May 15 at 853 Turquoise St. where it has been since 1938.

Superintendent Search

San Diego Unified will host a community forum for the public to meet the superintendent finalists and provide feedback. The Board will formally introduce the permanent superintendent at the State of the District on January 18.

SESSION 2

5:00 - 6:00PM

Wilson Middle School, 3838 Orange Avenue, San Diego 92105

We believe that our students, families, staff, and the San Diego community have a unique stake in choosing San Diego Unified's next permanent superintendent. They, along with the Board of Education, will define the values we want the next permanent superintendent to embody. That is why it is so crucial that you participate in the superintendent selection process by providing your input.

On December 14, the Board of Education announced the selection of the following individuals as finalists for the superintendent position: Dr. Lamont A. Jackson & Dr. Susan Enfield. The board will officially introduce the permanent superintendent at the State of the District on January 18.

The superintendent, under the direction of the Board of Education, implements the school board's vision and policies by making day-to-day decisions about educational programs, spending, staff, and facilities. The superintendent works with school leaders to serve the needs of students and meet the district goals. The superintendent must also respond to the demands of all the other constituencies and interest groups in the district: teachers, students, parents, staff, advocates, and the community at large. The superintendent considers how to use the financial and human resources of the district to achieve the best results.

Make your voice heard and attend one of the community forums! The San Diego community has a unique opportunity to help select the next Superintendent of the San Diego Unified School District. We urge members of the community to participate and share their thoughts about the importance of an inclusive and equitable education for all students. —Chris Wilson

RE-TRIAL IN PB CARJACKING

A Texas man will have a re-trial on May 5, a judge set on Dec. 22, following an appeals court ruling overturning his carjacking and kidnapping convictions in which he abducted a college student in Pacific Beach in 2018. The 4th District Court of Appeal found judicial error as the reason to reverse the conviction of Skyler Jace Battreall, now 22, after finding that San Diego Superior Court Judge Sharon Majors-Lewis erred in not holding a mental competency hearing for Battreall when he exhibited unusual behavior during trial.

Batreall's attorney told Majors-Lewis his client wasn't able to keep his head up during trial, and had attempted suicide in jail. Battreall was hospitalized on a Friday, but the trial resumed on a Monday.

Majors-Lewis said her bailiff had spoken to the hospital staff and they told him they did not believe Battreall had taken an overdose of pills while in jail. She also refused to conduct a mental competency hearing because the trial had already started.

The 3-0 opinion, written by Justice William Dato with Justices Richard Huffman and Judith Haller concurring, recommends that Majors-Lewis not be given the case in re-trial. She has since retired.

The opinion faults Majors-Lewis for not conducting a mental competency hearing. The record showed Battreall's attorney kept the pressing the issue, but she didn't want to hear it.

They also faulted her for accepting heresay from her bailiff in concluding there was no suicide attempt from hospital staff.

The victim, Brett Charbonnel, then 22, testified Battreall asked him for a ride in Pacific Beach in Oct. 14, 2018, saying his motorcycle had been stolen. Once inside his car, Battreall pulled out a gun replica, pushed it towards his hip, and told him to keep driving. Charbonnel drove towards a populated area and Battreall grabbed the steering wheel.

Batreall hit Charbonnel in the face with the gun, knocking out a tooth, and shoved him out of the car. Battreall drove off, but crashed in the 1300 block of Emerald Street and the car was totaled.

Batreall remains in the George Bailey Detention Facility without bail. He has pleaded not guilty.

PANGA OPERATORS OFF LA JOLLA GET PRISON TERMS

Two operators of a panga boat involved in a deadly smuggling venture that resulted in one drowning death off La Jolla were sentenced Monday (Dec. 13) to 71 and 60 months in federal prison.

The panga's captain, Victor Alfonso Soto Aguilar, 37, received the 71 month term from U.S. District Court Judge John Houston. Jose Ramon Geraldo Romero, 24, who assisted Soto in boat operations in lieu of paying a smuggling fee, got the 5-year term.

Rogelio Perez Gutierrez, 43, a citizen of Mexico, was found unconscious in the water on May 20 in the early morning hours, but he was pronounced dead once life-guarders arrived on scene.

The small boat was overloaded beyond capacity. Around 5:23 a.m., the operators instructed all 14 passengers to remove their life jackets and jump in the water about 80 yards from Marine Street Beach in La Jolla, according to court documents.

They were told the water was shallow, but Gutierrez could not keep afloat and he drowned.

"A human being is not here because of the risk you were willing to take," said the judge to both defendants.

Houston spoke of the "extraordinary danger" of smuggling on the high seas. He said both men should tell people of the consequences of what they did.

"This was a tragedy that never should have happened," said Acting U.S. Attorney Randy Grossman in a press release afterwards.

"We urge anyone who is contemplating an attempt to cross the border illegally: Don't do it. Don't put your life in the hands of greedy smugglers who care about money, not you," said Grossman.

Reaction from the Coast Guard Monday was similar.

Expanded Museum of Contemporary Art San Diego in La Jolla to reopen in April

By DAVE SCHWAB

A glimpse into the new state-of-the-art Museum of Contemporary Art San Diego in La Jolla revealed a maze of indoor galleries in cavernous climate-controlled surroundings.

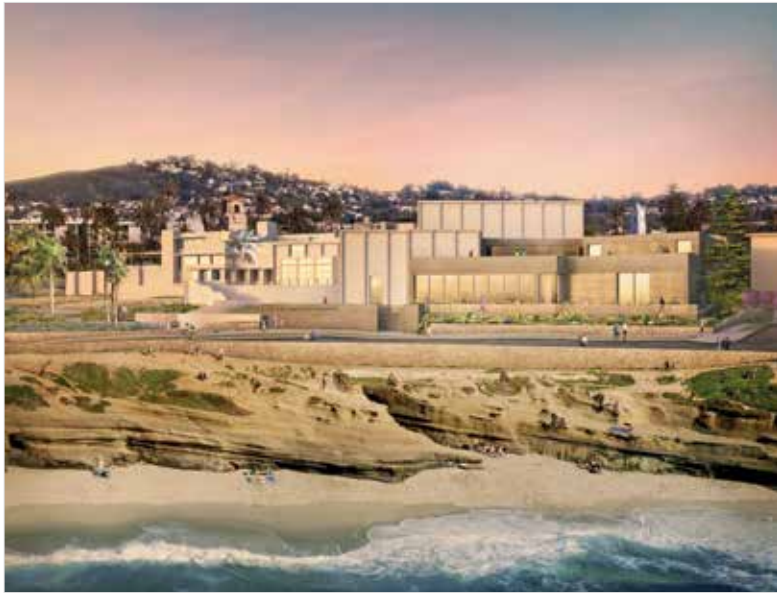

The museum's indoor exhibit space is now quadrupled offering outdoor patios with sweeping ocean views. The museum's remodel/expansion also pays homage to the building's extensive architectural heritage.

A special sneak peek at La Jolla's vastly improved $105 million renovations and expansion of MCASD by world-renowned Seldorf Architects was led on Dec. 15 by Kathryn Kanjo, the David C. Copley director/CEO of MCASD.

"We had the one chance to do the renovation," said Kanjo. "We went big. We went deep. We gathered the space."

Kanjo pointed out the updated MCASD has about 40,000 square feet of exhibit space compared with only about 10,000 feet previously. She said the museum is now appropriately sized to fulfill its many needs.

"With the Seldorf expansion, MCASD's flagship building is, at last, scaled to showcase the work it has collected over the past decades," she said. "Soaring ceilings and natural light allow for inviting displays of the collection alongside lively changing exhibitions."

The renovated and expanded Museum of Contemporary Art San Diego in La Jolla, as seen from the ocean in this artist's rendering, will reopen in April. COURTESY GRAPHIC

Added Kanjo: "The design honors the museum's rich architectural history as it frames distinctive views of La Jolla Village and the coast, providing an updated space for the art and today's audience. We look forward to inviting the public to explore our world, our region, and ourselves through the prism of contemporary art."

MCASD La Jolla is scheduled to reopen to the public in April.

Of the museum's refit, principal architect Annabelle Selldorf said, "Our goal for the museum was to allow the fantastic site and views of the Pacific Ocean to guide a coherent circulation path and instill a generous and inclusive spirit to bring people to the great collection of MCASD."

MCASD traces its roots to La Jolla philanthropist Ellen Browning Scripps whose modern oceanfront dwelling in La Jolla, completed in 1916 by noted architect Irving Gill (1870-1936), served as the museum's first location in 1941. The property has since undergone several architecturally distinct expansions. Mosher & Drew completed a series of expansions in 1950, 1960, and again in the late 1970s.

There was also a 1996 renovation of the La Jolla property by Venturi, Scott Brown and Kathryn Kanjo, the David C. Copley director/CEO of MCASD.

Associates, which restored the Scripps House facade, added Axline Court, and enhanced the museum's garden and cafe.

"We are an 80-year-old institution collecting art from 1950," said Kanjo. "We needed more space to show our collection of more than 5,000 pieces, which are now in a 25,000-square-foot storage facility. We're expecting to bring pieces back and have them on a longer-term view, while simultaneously being able to have special exhibitions."

Kanjo conducted a grand tour of the new, improved, and expanded museum, winding through its diverse exhibit spaces with towering ceilings located on multiple levels.

Asked why Annabelle Selldorf from the East Coast was selected to do the museum remodel, Kanjo replied, "She had designed such exquisite art spaces, not just for museums but also for commercial art galleries. Also, we chose her for her ability to deal with historical renovations. She is not the kind of architect who comes in and plops something new down. She works very pragmatically with the community and with what she's given."

Kanjo noted permitting delays not related to COVID have extended the museum's renovation/expansion. "Construction has taken 32 months so far, and it was supposed to have taken 28," she said.

INAUGURAL MCASD EXHIBITION

For its inaugural curated exhibition, MCASD in April will introduce a presentation titled "Niki de Saint Phalle in the 1960s." It will be the first exhibition to focus on the experimental and prolific work of trailblazing French-American artist and sculptor Niki de Saint Phalle (1930-2002), during this formative decade of her work.

On view through July, the Saint Phalle exhibit will feature numerous works from European collections, many seen in the United States for the first time. The exhibition will explore this transformative 10-year period of Saint Phalle's work when she embarked on two of her most significant series: the tirs, or "shooting paintings," and the exuberant sculptures of women she called Nanas.

Affirming the artist's place in post-war art history, this show will highlight her prescient works of performance, participatory, and feminist art, as well as her many transatlantic projects and collaborations.

"While local audiences are familiar with Saint Phalle's later fantastical works of public art, we in Southern California have had less exposure to her radical work of the 1960s, which put into circulation strikingly original representations that resonate strongly in our moment," said Jill Dawsey, MCASD La Jolla's curator. "Saint Phalle had an important relationship to this region. In the early '60s, she staged several shooting sessions in Los Angeles, in what were among the earliest instances of performance art in Southern California. She would eventually settle in San Diego in the 1990s."

"Having spent the last years of her life in La Jolla, many of Saint Phalle's fantastical creatures and visionary environments cover our landscape and resonate with the community," said Kathryn Kanjo, MCASD's director/CEO. "This rare presentation from a pivotal period in the artist's career is a gift to our public and a homecoming for the artist."

"We absorbed a lot of the delays because it was such a big project."

Kanjo said the museum's re-configured space now includes onsite underground staff parking. The former Sherwood Auditorium has been converted into an exhibition space.

ADMINISTERING YOUR TRUST UPON YOUR DEATH

By: Dick McEntyre and Chris von der Lieth, Attorneys at Law

You may wonder what is involved when your successor trustee administers your revocable living trust following your death. Here are the primary actions (not necessarily sequential) your successor trustee will need to take:

1. Arrange for the on-going care of your pets; secure your home; and make the final arrangements for the disposition of your body.
2. Order several Death Certificates through the mortuary to be used in connection with closing financial accounts and transferring title to real property.
3. Mail out "Notice to Beneficiary/Heir" letters as required by California law.
4. Obtain preliminary value of your estate to determine whether a federal estate tax return may need to be filed with the IRS (within nine (9) months from the date of your death).
5. Notify the California Department of Health Care Services as required by California law if you received or may have received any benefits from Medi-Cal.
6. Open a new checking account in the trust name (or convert an existing account). This account will be used to pay all of your debts and on-going trust expenses. In this connection, obtain from the IRS a new income tax reporting number (EIN) for the trust which the bank will require, since your trust became irrevocable upon your death.
7. Transfer title to all financial/brokerage accounts from your name into the successor trustee's name, or close (sell the assets in) all or some of such accounts and transfer the proceeds into the new account in the trust referred to in Para. 6 above.
8. Locate all outstanding bills and pay same from the account referred to in Para 6. above.
9. Make claim for any death benefit(s) payable on your death.

10. As to any personal property in your estate, have an appraisal of such property made by an estate personal property appraiser, and sell such property and deposit the sale proceeds into the trust bank account, or divide such property among the entitled beneficiaries based on value or as otherwise required by the terms of your trust.

11. Obtain date of death values of all other property in your estate. Your banks and brokerage firms can provide the trustee with a statement(s) covering the time of your death and/or a letter providing the date of death value(s) of such account(s). The trustee will probably need to hire a qualified real estate appraiser to value your real property(ies) (needed for income tax basis purposes).

12. The trustee should keep a good record of all trust income and expenses and trust distributions, since an accounting should typically be provided to each beneficiary at the end of the trust administration.

13. The trustee should pay to himself or herself the compensation he or she is entitled to under the terms of the trust; and if none is provided for, "reasonable compensation" as authorized by California law.

14. After all estate expenses and debts have been paid, make the distributions to your beneficiaries called for by the trust.

15. Have an accountant prepare and file the needed income tax returns for you and for the trust.

Facing another probably challenging new year with courage, resilience and hope

Doing it Better

By Natasha Josefowitz, Ph.D.

I began writing my columns in 1980. It was a weekly then, first for the San Diego Business Journal, followed by the San Diego Daily Transcript, then syndicated with Copley News for several years, then the La Jolla Light. At present, it is a bimonthly column with the La Jolla Villages News and sdnews.com (part of the San Diego Community Newspaper Group). My columns also appear in the international online paper, San Diego Jewish World. In addition, my columns are published on LinkedIn, as well as on my own website (www.natashaswords.com). I used to be a regular blogger for The Huffington Post. So here we are about 2,000 columns later... It feels as if I have written about practically every subject under the sun, although I'm sure it's not true. My writings are from my heart and what is on my mind as well as what I want to learn more about.

This New Year I would like to tell you, my readers, that I will be 96 by the end of the year. I feel very motherly or should I say grandmotherly towards you. I want you to do well. Be healthy. Live intelligently. By this I mean that you should live your life, in order that by the end of your life you will not have too many regrets nor too much remorse.

Go everywhere in the world so that by the time you're my age, you will be happy to stay home as there would be no more places needing to be explored.

Get to know a large variety of people from different countries, different beliefs, different politics, different religious, and different persuasions.

Read everything, both fiction and non-fiction, from academic journals to health magazines.

Become broadly knowledgeable from the latest on technology to the current research on nutrition.

Take classes. Practice new skills. Learn new songs and dance steps.

Exercise regularly. Do your Kegel exercises. Breathe deeply. Meditate. Walk in nature.

For me the meaning of life is one word: "service." This means that if you see something that requires fixing, if you can, fix it. If you see someone needing help, go lend a helping hand. If you have an idea that may be constructive, share it. If you have an opinion different from others, speak it. If you have a special skill (whether singing or construction work), use it. If you are in a power position, share it. If you love someone, tell them. If you care for someone, show it. The best thing you can give your children is a social consciousness. With that their lives will be meaningful. Making others happy lights up the rewards centers of our brains. Stay open-minded about others' beliefs and learn what motivates these people's behaviors, as well as your own. Love with all your heart and all your being.

Life is an adventure. We are all explorers. Know what you can handle. Be both brave and cautious when necessary. There is no one in the world like you! Celebrate your uniqueness and the gifts you have to offer. Give them freely.

Pain and suffering are inevitable. Respond with the hope that the end is in sight and that solutions can be found. Enter the doors that are even a crack open. Identify the fear and then go there. Sometimes you need to follow and other times you will need to lead. Wrong answers are only vehicles for learning the right ones. You will know when you have arrived. It is a place of peace and availability. Be there for others. Always accept with gratitude those who are there for you.

This new year may not be easy following the last two years of unprecedented challenges. We will experience new COVID variants with more illnesses and deaths, hopefully with new ways to combat various viruses. Resilience will be important.

We will also continue to face unforeseeable and destructive climate changes. Unrest lingers in the world. Do your part in reducing your carbon footprints, be as green as possible. Treat everyone with respect and dignity. Become aware of your unconscious biases and prejudices and act to rectify them. Be fair. Be kind.

Best wishes, dear readers, for the year 2022. Hope some of your dreams will be fulfilled. Keep your eyes open for the next opportunity.

Your loving columnist, Natasha.

Glory days recalled at revived Holiday Classic

By ED PIPER

Back in my former life, as a fit 23-year-old, I jogged with a UC Santa Barbara woman long-distance runner while I interviewed her. I wrestled two Dos Pueblos High grapplers — neither could pin me despite my junior-high wrestling knowledge — in my coverage of the Japanese sports exchange program they were headed to. And, in my favorite sport, daily faced off against local basketball talent on the outdoor courts at UCSB.

One weekday-warrior incident precipitated a worrying reaction by my editor, Barb, as to whether I could perform my nightly weekday sports editor functions at the tiny (3,000-circulation) newspaper, The Goleta Today, one afternoon. Extending my right arm to block an opponent's shot, I instead came up with splinters in my right hand from an aging wooden backboard on the asphalt courts. As I headed to ER, Barb began gathering up wire reports to fill my page-and-a-half of sports, if needed.

Much to her relief, in the late afternoon, I walked into the newsroom, the webbing between the ring finger and pinkie on my right hand disinfected and bandaged up — my legend as a "playground hero" now cemented among my colleagues. I was good to go to type gimpy-handed on the heavy-duty manual Underwood typewriter I churned feature stories out on. I don't remember if I successfully blocked my opponent's shot.

All of this was memory background when I attended three of the four days of the Holiday Classic on Dec. 27-30 at Torrey Pines High School, as well as a morning at a secondary site, St. Augustine High. John Olive, the long-time Falcons boys basketball coach, was able to resume the nationally-recognized tourney after a hiatus due to COVID in 2021. DeMatha and Iona Prep, two Eastern entities, had to cancel before the tournament even started, and many more had to have their respective participation adjusted.

But the show went on, and mindful of last year's shutdown and my long participation in and reporting of sports over the years, I relished getting out, informally rating the prospects I observed, and enjoying the roundball sport in person once again.

At Torrey on Thursday of tournament week, 6 feet

9 inches tall senior Otto Landrum, the big redhead, was everything advertised (fellow students had affirmed his skills during my substitute-teaching assignments at the high school). While he patrolled — and frequently dunked — inside, guard Logan Houston deftly slashed from the outside and managed the Falcons' floor game. Torrey Pines easily swamped opposing Poway, 87-46.

Meanwhile, the best I could do for Plimptonian antics was apply self-treatment with a shiny new red muscle roller Santa brought me for Christmas on a troublesome knotted upper right thigh, which probably resulted more from sleeping awkwardly than anything else.

New state laws address animal welfare, police reform, and cocktails

By DAVE SCHWAB

New laws on the books in California in 2022 address everything from COVID guidelines to racial profiling and systemic racism to a minimum-wage hike, price gouging, property taxes, domestic abuse, and fire protection.

Here are a few of the more noteworthy laws that took effect Jan. 1:

– Minimum Wage: All employees in San Diego who perform at least two hours of work in one or more calendar weeks of the year within the City will receive a wage increase from $14 to $15 an hour. SB 3 requires the minimum wage for all industries employing 26 or more employees to rise to $15, and $14 for employers employing 25 or fewer workers.

– Animal Welfare: Proposition 12, approved by voters in 2018, makes metal enclosures that restrict pigs from turning around and cages that prevent hens from opening their wings illegal.

– Cocktails to-go: SB 389 allows getting cocktails and wine to go with your dinner order at restaurants extended until Dec. 31, 2026. The delivery of cocktails alone, however, ended Dec. 31, 2021.

– Food Delivery Apps: In an effort to support delivery workers and increase billing transparency, AB 286 makes it illegal for food delivery apps to retain any portion of a tip or gratuity. If the order is for delivery, that tip must go to the individual worker. If the order is for pickup, the gratuity must go to the restaurant.

– Police Reform: AB 1475 protects the rights of people arrested but not yet prosecuted, forbidding law enforcement from posting mug shots of those arrested on suspicion of non-violent crimes.

– Rape: A new law alters California's penal code to make rape within marriage the same in every legal sense as any instance of rape.

– Police Decertification: Another noteworthy new law allows police officers who've committed misconduct to be decertified. Previously, problematic officers could sometimes find employment in other areas without repercussions. Now they will have their license revoked and not be able to simply switch departments after being fired.

– Campus Products: AB 367 requires California public schools, including colleges, to provide free menstrual products to students. The signing of the bill followed a nationwide push for affordable access to pads, tampons and other items.

– Traffic Safety: AB 43 authorizes local authorities to reduce speed limits to protect the safety of vulnerable groups such as pedestrians and cyclists.

YEAR IN REVIEW »

TAR BALL INFESTATION

Tarballs were discovered on Oct. 8 at La Jolla Shores, Mission Beach and elsewhere along the San Diego coast from an oil spill near Huntington Beach.

ART & WINE FEST RETURNS

After a year's COVID hiatus, La Jolla Art & Wine Festival returned Oct. 9-10 along La Jolla's Girard Avenue featuring more than 170 artists, gourmet food, interactive activities, live art and music and adoptable animals, with wine, craft breweries, and a spirits garden. The event boasts a collection of internationally recognized talent, as well as fresh up-and-coming artists just waiting to be discovered.

MISSION BAY PARKING CLOSURE

Mission Bay Park Committee voted unanimously on Oct. 5 to support closing some Mission Bay parking lots overnight preventing public access which had become problematic due to increased crime and homeless habitation.

NOVEMBER

PB CRIME

SDPD stats showed 2020 violent crimes were down in PB for 2021, but the beach community still ranked second behind only East Village out of 125 City communities in violent crimes reported, and that trend continued.

TROLLEY EXTENSION OPENS

On Nov. 21, public officials formally dedicated the 11-mile Blue Line Trolley extension at the UC San Diego Central Campus Station. The extension stretches from the U.S.-Mexico border with new stations at Tecolote Road, Clairemont Drive, Balboa Avenue, Nobel Drive, VA Medical Center, UC San Diego Central Campus, UC San Diego Health La Jolla, Executive Drive, and the UTC transit center.

VISITOR CENTER REDO

Closed since 2011, the former Mission Bay Visitor Information Center has been refurbished as the Mission Bay Beach Club and reopened with a vegan cafe, and a pizzeria with a vineyard to follow.

DECEMBER

VACCINATION MANDATE PASSED

City Council voted 8-1 to pass an emergency ordinance requiring all current – and future – City employees to be fully vaccinated against COVID-19 or face termination.

ART WALK COMEBACK

Art walks returned by popular demand to the Village of La Jolla starting Dec. 3.

BELVEDERE CONTROVERSY

Replacement of a belvedere destroyed by vandals years ago at Windansea in La Jolla became a bone of contention between competing groups arguing over whether a new structure there would block views and threaten shoreline erosion.

Rebecca Smith was the winner of the Del Mar Opening Day Hat Contest on July 16. Smith wore a custom red rose hat designed and made by Christine A. Moore.

Fashion Week San Diego collaborates with Young Black and 'N Business

Fashion Files

Diana Cavagnaro

In December, Fashion Week San Diego collaborated with Young Black and 'N Business, a new local magazine and network organization in San Diego. This inaugural "Year of the Partnership Gala" was a black-tie event at Sycuan Casino and Resort. Together FWSD and the Young Black and 'N Business kickstarted the Diversity Designer and Cultural Program, which will raise funds for designers in underserved areas of the community. The event will be featured in the official first print of the Young Black and 'N Business manuscript in 2022.

During this event FWSD's current top designer, Sierra Mitchell, showed a six-piece collection using multinational models. She creates garments by combining hand-cut materials with traditional sewing techniques. FWSD hopes to bring awareness to talented designers of various cultural backgrounds such as African American, Native American, Pacific Islander, Hispanic, and more.

Meteorologist of CBS8 News, Karlene Chavis, was mistress of ceremonies for the evening. San Diego Mayor Todd Gloria gave the opening remarks and presented the City of San Diego Certificate of Recognition to the Young Black and 'N Business. The keynote address was given by Councilwoman Monica Montgomery Steppe.

She also presented Young Black and 'N Business Day in San Diego by Declaration of the City Council. The affair also included a red carpet mixer, a resource fair, and power networking.

The proceeds of the event go to the Diversity Designer & Cultural Program.

Gwen Bates, director at FWSD said: "We are proud to work with Young Black and 'N Business to bridge the gap between these two organizations and come together for a good cause ending the year on a high note of togetherness and achievement. The goal of this program is to provide a showcase, create exposure and help under-represented brands with a successful launch."

FWSD is hoping to raise enough to give one or two designers, in an underserved community a full business package and showcase of their iconic platform. FWSD is a launching pad for emerging designers bringing consumers direct contact with designers through

The Social Diary – 'And Just Like That,' 2021 closed with a furious festive bang!

By MARGO SCHWAB

'And just like that' it was 2022... But not before 2021 off-the-charts fun! Sex and the City's Carrie Bradshaw would approve.

One of the best events period of 2021, A Night of Rebetika & Symranika Greek, music by the best of the best, Polyxeni and The Gents, Oriste (fab) catering by Nasia Ampelas, think incredible tarlette bites of crème fraiche and caviar, petite Spanakopita, and let's circle back to bottomless Veuve, and caviar with salmon! All at the chic venue of Greek gallery owner Theo's L&G Projects in La Jolla with a milieu of art by Otto, Laurie Raskins, and Dimitri Lkissas.

The music, joyful, and heartfelt. As Polyxeni explained: "It's a celebration of epochs long gone and a musical tradition that is deep rooted in my core through my ancestors. We need to keep the candle burning."

More to come as added by Nasia Ampelas: "I felt we stayed true to our roots and our ancestors would be proud. My goal is to do more of these nights highlighting more Greek music and pairing it with great food." You mean epic food Nasia!

Meanwhile Gloria and Charlie McCoy hosted the Patron's of the Prado Director's Circle with beneficiary recognition, carolers, and Catering Solutions Ron McMillan manning the kitchen and delectable eats. Highlight, singing by the patrons!

More heartfelt came with the holiday party benefiting the League House owned by the Social Service League of La Jolla. As explained by president Suzanne Ward: "League House provides affordable housing and meals for eligible seniors. Our volunteer members worked very hard to create a memorable evening and I thank them as well as our guests for their support."

Then it was no stopping the glam squad who came to cheer in the New Year at Dolce's. With a theme of black and white dress, some of the town's most DNA blessed gals upped the level of cheer for the New Year. All organized by the ever fun and creative Karian Forsyth. "Til next time!
