Beach-side vendors, and civic leaders respond to City's new sidewalk-vending ordinance

COASTAL COMMISSION MUST APPROVE ACTION FOR BEACH AREAS

By DAVE SCHWAB

Reaction to a new sidewalk-vending ordinance authored by District 2 Councilmember Dr. Jennifer Campbell charging vendors $38 annually, approved May 17 by the City Council and set to begin in mid-June, has been intense.

City staff had originally recommended that the new vending permit fee be $230 per year, the same as a City business tax certificate. But that amount was decreased by City Council members, fearing it might harm those it was intended to help, along with the proviso that staff would do an analysis after one year to determine if any fee modifications are necessary.

"Enforcement will be handled mostly by Neighborhood Code Enforcement personnel and park rangers," said City spokesperson José Ysea of the new street-vending ordinance adding, "Maps for the 'designated' areas where vendors are to be allowed are still being developed. They should be coming soon."

Bob Evans, president of La Jolla Parks & Beaches, Inc., was not happy with the end result of the ordinance.

"It was the expected and typical business that is done by the City Council when there were a few amendments to be added from the first passing and discussions in March," said Evans, who pointed out that, while enforcement in Balboa Park and Downtown are to begin in mid-June, that is not true of beach communities.

"Beach communities will still require California Coastal Commission approval of new City ordinances," Evans said adding, "There's no agenda set yet with the Coastal Commission. I've heard guesses of at least a few months, and well past summer, as to when the Coastal Commission can review (the vending ordinance). Thus, sidewalk vending should be continuing as business as usual for vendors, and continued out of

Affordable housing shortage fueling increase in homelessness

2022 Point-in-Time Count in San Diego estimates a 10% surge in the unsheltered population

By DAVE SCHWAB

A nonprofit serving the coastal unsheltered believes this year's Point-In-Time Count estimating a 10% population increase of homeless people is likely low while stressing homelessness trends remain unchanged with an aging demographic and more vehicle dwellers.

The results of this February's Point-in-Time count conducted by the Regional Task Force on Homelessness, a snapshot in

POINT-IN-TIME COUNT

The Regional Task Force on Homelessness (RTFH) on May 19 released the topline results from the 2022 WeAllCount Point-in-Time Count, a one-day snapshot of the minimum number of San Diegans living in emergency shelters, transitional housing, safe havens, and on the streets and along riverbeds. Conducted on a February morning, at the tail end of the Omicron COVID-19 wave, this count was completed by 1,400 volunteers across San Diego County.

Overall, the Point-in-Time Count found no less than 8,427 individuals experiencing homelessness across San Diego County, a 10% increase from 2020. It's critical to understand this is a minimum number. The challenge of finding every person in a car, canyon, or under a bridge, is impossible, but every effort is made to find and engage as many people as possible. This number includes 4,106 unsheltered San Diegans with 4,321 individuals in shelters. Of those surveyed, 85% said they had fallen into homelessness in the region.

The Point-in-Time Count also brought into focus some concerning trends in the homeless population: 2022 saw an increase in families experiencing homelessness, up 56% from 2020. Black San Diegans, who make up under 5% of the total population in San Diego County, made up 24% of the region's unsheltered homeless population.

While 24% of San Diegans experiencing homelessness were over 55 in both 2020 and 2022, this year's count showed that 47% of those seniors were experiencing homelessness for the first time, with 57% having a physical disability. The oldest person surveyed living on the street in San Diego County was 87.

"The Point-in-Time Count is about much more than numbers – it's about people," RTFH CEO Tamera Kohler said. "Right now too many people are suffering in San Diego. They're mothers and daughters, fathers and sons. They fell into homelessness due to a lost job, a lost spouse, or some other crisis beyond their control."

time used to estimate the region's homeless numbers, concluded there are no less than 8,427 individuals experiencing homelessness today living on San Diego's streets.

"These counts are just an estimate, the best guess," said Caryn Blanton, board co-chair of homeless service provider Shoreline Community Services, newly headquartered at The Compass Station at 1004 Chalcedony St. in Pacific Beach. "I think that 10% increase estimate is way low. There's no way that we can get an accurate count. With some people hiding to keep warm, or pooling their money together to get hotel rooms – they don't get counted."

Blanton estimated there are somewhere between 300 and 400 individuals living on the street day-to-day in the central beach area, which includes Pacific Beach up through La Jolla Shores. Oddly enough though, she noted the central beach area gets lumped in with Downtown during the Point-In-Time homeless counts.

The unsheltered are drawn to the beach areas every bit as much – and for the same reasons – like those in the mainstream population. "They're trying to get away from the hustle and the chaos that is Downtown," noted Blanton adding, "There's more breathing room. I think we're unique here

(in PB) for a couple of reasons. We've got the boardwalk or walking on the beach or at the bay. And we've got beautiful parks. Fanuel and Kate Sessions are green, open, spacious, and beautiful areas. And those are public places where anybody can be."

The homeless demographic in the central beach area has remained pretty constant over the last couple of years as well, as many are living in conditions a little better than on the street.

"I think there are a lot more people living in their vehicles for whatever reason," Blanton said. "Some of them were evicted from housing, and then couldn't afford to get back into housing. People have money. But they don't have enough money to afford housing. And I would say it's still an aging population here at the beach. And it seems to be more men. They're making do in their vehicles. That's their living space."

Blanton described homelessness for most as a descent, rather than a fall, into living on the street.

"For many, it's a slow roll into homelessness," she said. "A man has a house, a wife, and kids and there's some family disaster. He gets sick and they lose the house and they end up living in a hotel. Then they can't afford the rent at the hotel and they move into a van. The van brakes down and they're flat out in the street."

What's the solution to improving homelessness along the beachfront, or anywhere else?

"There's a housing crisis and there truly are almost no places for these people to go," Blanton concluded. "The first homeless people who get to go (into housing) are the most vulnerable, those who are older or medically or mentally compromised. But now there's such a growing population of those people, that there aren't even places for them to go."

So what's the ultimate solution to the homelessness dilemma long-term? Blanton said her new messaging revolves around homeless providers doing the best they can to help the homeless deal with the realities of the housing crisis at the moment.

"They're here, and they're not going anywhere because there's nowhere for them to go," she said. "We need to find compassionate, caring ways to address their needs on a daily basis. The Compass Station opening this week is one answer. But our hours are 10 a.m.-4 p.m. What happens at 4 p.m. when I shut the door?"

Added Blanton: "There needs to be more places for people to live. That's the only answer. The longer I'm involved with this (homelessness) the more I see and know that housing is the most important piece."

control at all the coastal areas.”

Added Evans: “At Scripps Park/La Jolla Cove and Children’s Pool, it’s as busy and jammed as ever with more vendors overwhelming the area. And as we get into summer, I expect the scenic and natural beauty of the coastline parks and boardwalks to be completely unrecognizable with the sidewalk vendors taking over and no enforcement happening.”

Sidewalk vendors in Mission and Pacific beaches had a different take on the City Council’s new vending rules. While they felt the rules are necessary, those interviewed learned that the new ordinance would prohibit vending in those areas during the summer months, something they all took issue with.

“We don’t like some of the vendor rules, however, it needs to be implemented,” said RV dwellers Tawny and Michael White of Ocean Beach, who were selling their homemade incense from their booth named Laddy’s & Lassy’s House of Fragrances, on May 21 on the boardwalk in Mission Beach. “We had to jump through hoops to get a business license.”

“What I don’t like about it (ordinance) is there are only certain times of the year you’re able to sell,” said Michael White. “How can you promote entrepreneurship if you can’t sell your products? We’re just trying to make a living.”

“They (City) want us out between Memorial Day and Labor day, not [Mission Beach], not in any beach in the San Diego area, and not on any San Diego streets,” said Tawny White.

“We don’t mind paying a (vendor) fee, we’ve been doing it everywhere we’ve been,” said Michael White, who suffers from respiratory ailments.

“This is the first city, town, or state we’ve been in that wasn’t regulated (for vending),” noted Tawny White, adding they’ve traveled through and sold in, several states over the past few months.

Do the Whites think the new vending ordinance and its enforcement will make things better for vendors?

“I doubt it,” said Michael White.

“I don’t like the fact that they’re going to regulate what time of year we can set up,” said Tawny White. “June, July, and August, that’s someone’s busiest time. That could hold us through the winter.”

The circumstances were much different for another vendor on the boardwalk in Mission Beach, Andrew Zander representing G-Code Designs. He’s been vending for six years at Kobey’s and other swap meets and in Mission Beach and elsewhere along the coast. Zander and his business partner, Ariana Paige, do digitized canvas prints of original colored pencil drawings of famous people, typically in sports and music. Their artwork sells in the $15 to $200 range.

“To us, the ordinance is moot because we have all our documentation, business license, and permits, everything like that,” Zander said. “We’re prepared and we’re ready.”

Is Mission Beach a good place for vendors?

“MB is a beautiful place, the park is right here, the roller coaster,” said Zander. “And the vendors are really awesome too. It’s kind of a community that’s built up around here.”

Zander was not opposed to the City’s new vending ordinance. “Laws and rules always make sense to me,” he said. “We like to follow them.”

But Zander would just as soon be plying his wares at a farmers market or a swap meet rather than on the boardwalk or on the street. “We really enjoy farmers markets and swap meets because they’ve got security and your space is ‘this’ space,” he said. “But here (boardwalk), it’s first-come, first-served. Nobody pays for these spots. And no one’s owed these spots.”

On the boardwalk in Pacific Beach near Crystal Pier, PB residents Albert Garcia and his business partner and fiancée, Kaylee Vaughn, were busy selling their handmade jewelry – rings, necklaces, bracelets, and earrings. Their homegrown business started out as a hobby but has morphed into a full-time occupation.

PERMITTING REQUIREMENTS FOR SIDEWALK VENDORS

■ A sidewalk vending permit from the Office of the City Treasurer before conducting vending business activities in the City, valid for one year and reviewed annually.

■ Vending is prohibited during the summer moratorium – Saturday before Memorial Day and preceding Saturday and Sunday through Labor Day – in Balboa Park, Mission Bay Park, and shoreline parks – Newport Avenue between Abbott Street and Sunset Cliffs Boulevard in Ocean Beach, Ventura Place between Mission Boulevard and Ocean Front Walk in Mission Beach, Garnet Avenue between Ocean Front Walk and Cass Street in Pacific Beach, Coast Boulevard, between Cave Street and the 200 block of Coast Boulevard South, in La Jolla (pending the Coastal Commission approval).

■ A City business tax certificate due annually.

■ If applicable, sidewalk vendors must possess a valid, no-cost California Department of Tax and Fee Administration seller’s permit that designates “City of San Diego” as a location or sublocation. A seller’s permit allows sales tax collection from customers and reports those amounts to the state.

FOOD PRODUCT VENDORS ARE

■ Required to obtain and display a San Diego County Public Health Permit at all times.

■ Required to acquire a San Diego County Food Handler Card.

Roll into the weekend with Freeskate Fridays at the beach

By RACHEL ROSEN

On Friday mornings, a group of fun-loving, colorfully-clad roller-skaters gathers on the boardwalk in Mission Beach to participate in Freeskate Fridays. At this weekly meet-up, anyone with a set of wheels is welcome to join a 10-minute skate north to Pacific Beach.

Along the way, they dance to music, joke, laugh, and enjoy each other's company. Skaters of all abilities are welcome and often passersby in skates will join in on the fun.

This joyful event was started by Matt Tyce a little over a year ago.

"The Friday skate started as me and another person," said Tyce. "We got together and said we wanted to start something on Fridays at 10 a.m., go out and skate and bring everybody together. And then, just by word of mouth and Instagram, basically, got a lot of people out here."

Tyce is one of the founders of JMKRIDE, a shop that sells freeskates, which are made of small plates attached to two wheels. They are essentially roller skates minus the shoe.

"The best thing is they're not attached so you can just put them anywhere, in a backpack, take them out, put them down and go," Tyce explained before demonstrating one of the many tricks he can perform.

You don't have to own a pair of freeskates to participate in Freeskate Fridays. In fact, the event is about bringing people from all worlds of roller skating together. Before the pandemic, skating was divided among those who only liked doing tricks at outdoor skate parks, dance skating in rinks, or skating on a roller derby team. COVID caused a boom in the popularity of roller skating, especially outdoors, and created a community that didn't exist before.

"People would go out skating before but it was nothing like this," observed one of the skaters present last Friday. When asked why they come out every week to participate, every skater simply responded: "It's fun."

"Roller skaters are the 'funnest' people," said Miles, who works at a roller skating rink. "If you want to be around fun people that are hard-working because [with] roller skating, you have to work for everything. No one wakes up being able to do spins. So you're around everyone here who's really hard working. On top of that, they're really introspective about themselves because they're constantly critiquing their own skating ability."

San Diego is particularly well suited for roller skating.

"It's a different culture up there," said Miles, who is originally from Sacramento. "Here you can skate all year round. At 9 in the morning, we're out here on the beach.

Sacramento, the Bay Area, that's not possible, it's not flat enough. You don't really want to skate outside."

Isabelle Ringer often participates in Freeskate Fridays. She owns Derby United, an outdoor roller skating facility that offers classes and roller derby, which is slowly coming back after a decline during the pandemic.

"Lots of people from lots of different backgrounds came out and found skating to participate in [during] the pandemic," said Ringer. "Skating that felt joyful and safe for them, so sometimes roller derby people ended up at freeskate parks. They ended up at the beach... I think a lot of us learned during the pandemic, you gotta just do something that gives you what you need to feel good. So coming here on Friday morning makes me feel pretty good."

Ringer said that she has already seen a decline in her business since the height of the popularity of skating during the pandemic. Now that the world has started to open back up, skating is in competition with social events like going to restaurants or concerts. Freeskate Fridays is part of an effort to give people opportunities to skate with others and find community.

"Skating has these rises and falls that we've seen all throughout time, so to be in a boom right now is amazing," she said. "It's amazing for all of the skate community and it's amazing for the rinks, all the culture around skating."

"But we want to keep these skaters skating. We want to give them places to go and groups to be a part of and classes – anything to keep folks from saying 'now that the world is back open, I'm done with skating; that was my pandemic hobby.' Because then we have more. We have more meet-ups, more rinks, more skate parties, more camps and conventions, and all the things that we love, but we need a lot of skaters to keep it alive."

A partnership between a group fitness provider and six resorts is providing a free outdoor fitness series along Mission Bay now through July 9.

NXPT Fitness, specializing in group fitness accommodating all skill levels, has teamed with San Diego Mission Bay Resort, Hyatt Regency Mission Bay Spa and Marina, Catamaran Resort Hotel and Spa, Bahia Resort Hotel, The Dana on Mission Bay, and Paradise Point Resort and Spa to host outdoor classes. The collaboration is known as the Discover Mission Bay Fitness Series presented by NXPT.

Participants will have water views and bay breezes while working up a sweat at a trainer-led group fitness class by NXPT. Classes are free and open to all ages and fitness levels, featuring a 5K obstacle course, cycling/spin classes, 5K run/walk/jog, yoga, and more.

"We've collaborated with six resorts in Mission Bay to put on outdoor events at each resort location every other week throughout the summer," said Dan Hark, owner and founder of NXPT, which stands for No Excuses Physical Training.

"Each event is unique to the layout of that resort. We have events ranging from yoga classes overlooking the bay, to our 5K obstacle course class. It's great for us to combine fitness as a vehicle we use to bring our community together and give maximum exposure to Mission Bay."

NXPT instructors range from qualified and passionate trainers to professional athletes who love to teach what they practice. The goal is to create an environment where participants can get world-class training getting to know their trainers' names while making an investment in improving their health.

Of NXPT's outdoor fitness series, Hark noted it offers something for all ages and skill levels.

"We range from the low-intensity yoga demographic all the way up to the competitive athlete looking to challenge themselves, and everyone in-between," he said adding, "There's a little something for everybody, from outdoor spin cycling to yoga and our obstacle course for those who love that fitness challenge, or for avid workout enthusiasts."

Hark pointed out San Diego's bayfront is ideal for hosting outdoor fitness with its water views and year-round mild weather. "This is the first time the resorts have collectively gathered their resources to put this outdoor exercise program together, so it's broken ground for them and for us," he said adding, "It was a game-changer. Now we were able to be on-campus at each of the resorts using the engine of their social media to help drive exposure to our events."

Added Hark: "We love the outdoor concept. Especially now, on the other side of the pandemic, we just wanted to reach people to bring them outside creative events that they can participate in with their children, families, and friends to try different types of fitness and get some sunshine and begin their journey back to their pre-COVID reality."

LJHS baseball: Vikings win 10 of 11 to clinch league co-championship

By ED PIPER

On April 13, La Jolla's baseball team sat at 7-9, not only a mediocre record but also a losing one. "The team was trying to decide what kind of team it wanted to be," recalled head coach Gary Frank. This was the time.

The Vikings embarked on a streak, winning 10 of 11 games, and clinched a share of the City League title, they're first since 2014. Their record after the tear: 17-10.

"Our pitchers have been lights out," said Frank. "(Righthander) Kevin (Steel) and (lefthander) Beau (Brown) have carried the team through much of it."

But, as the coach is quick to point out, "every member" of the squad has made "substantial contributions" during a 2022 campaign that has been surprising as well as satisfying in so many ways after tough, COVID-interrupted years of 2020 and 2021.

A particular highlight from the depth of the relatively young team, which didn't develop during COVID in the usual way because of the delays, postponements, and downright cancellations that wreaked havoc with in-person school, practice, and games: In a game at home April 22 against the newly-renamed Canyon Hills

Rattlers, a non-senior, junior Max Hurley, had the game-tying hit. In the bottom of the sixth inning, a non-senior, Nicky Jamieson-Cacalano, another junior, got the game-winning hit for a 7-2 triumph.

Every school's team had to deal with adversity during the COVID mess, so the Vikings weren't unique in that. But the timing and frequency of injuries weren't kind, either. Starting catcher Cole Duffy went down with a left-hand injury in the second game of the season (La Jolla started off with an 0-4 record), in which doctors had to operate and remove a bone from the hand. "I still have the scar," the likable Duffy said, displaying the hand.

John Hartford, a junior, ably filled in behind the plate. Connor Hobbs, another senior and the starting centerfielder tore an ACL with three weeks to go in the season. Declan Kelly, a sophomore, provided the substitute there.

Besides Steel's dominant 9-2 record and 1.87 ERA on the mound, alongside a .378/.447/.479 slash line (batting average/OBP/slugging percentage), and Brown's .304/.440/.405, with a 1.46 ERA in 57 2/3 innings, though his 5-4 record doesn't show his real value, Hobbs carved out a .315 average and had 29 putouts in centerfield in his 18 games.

Another senior, Spence Carswell, nicknamed "Puma", with surfer good looks, batted leadoff, scored 19 runs to lead the team, and served as the closer. "He's unflappable," said Frank. "He's a three-sport athlete, with experience in CIF football and soccer."

Nicky Reynolds, a 12th-grade utility player, stole 10 bases in 14 attempts to lead the squad.

Senior Dillon Popkins provided a reliable third option as a starting pitcher and drove in 19 runs, batting in the fifth or sixth slot in the order.

"The things the team had against them — COVID, the first full year coming back from that, less time for home, less time for friends... (What they accomplished) is very inspiring to a coach."

Headway Hair Studio of London celebrates 15 years in La Jolla

By DAVE SCHWAB

Native Brit Irv Wolff, formerly of London, has successfully invaded America marking his 15th anniversary this year as one of La Jolla's favorite hairstylists in the Crosby Center.

"Stay (age) 27, eat spinach sandwiches, and have a great sense of humor," joked the 79-year-old Wolff of Clairemont about his secrets for success, which have helped him launch and maintain Suite N in the Crosby Center business complex at 7742 Herschel Ave.

"I just signed a new lease here, so hopefully I'm going to be here another 15 years, the second 15 years," he added.

Wolff has been in the States for 50 years, starting out in Maryland and gradually working his way west. He credits the so-called "British invasion" of culture and music, which swept across the United States in the '60s, for being here at all.

"England was leading the world in music, fashion, and hair," noted Wolff adding he started out as a barber in Maryland for a shop that was looking for stylists who "knew how to work with long hair." His future place of employment approved 20 or 30 people from England to come work for them. "And I was one of them, so I was part of the British invasion," noted Wolff.

The hairstylist got his green card on his first day in America, on Jan. 22, 1972. But it wasn't until 2007 that Wolff hung his shingle out in La Jolla, debuting his Headway Hair Studio of London, which is distinctively British right down to its Union Jack-upholstered barber's chair.

"Eventually, I became a citizen," Wolff noted adding he got exposed to California visiting family here. "I said, 'This is bloody marvelous, I'll move here.' And I did. And I've been here ever since."

Before setting up shop in the Jewel, Wolff worked for the Navy Exchange on Nimitz Boulevard in Point Loma, before deciding to strike out with his own independent hairstyling shop.

Wolff does mostly boys' and men's hairdressing though he does have a few ladies among his clientele. Wolff noted he's taken by both his intimate workspace and his clients who frequent it. "Everybody is friendly here, gets along," he said. "There's nothing here not to like."

Wolff advertises his hair-cutting services mostly by word of mouth and by his sign in front of the center. He designed his studio to be "neutral" in most respects so it could draw a broader clientele.

"I didn't want to make it masculine, I didn't want to make it feminine, I just wanted to make it homey with an English theme," he pointed out adding his clients "come in here with an American accent and leave with an English accent. I make friends with all my clients. I want to make them all comfortable."

Of what most clients want, and expect, from a haircut, Wolff said, "In San Diego, it's more being casual, but also looking respectable, especially with more mature people."

Would Wolff encourage others to pick up a pair of clippers and try their hand at being a barber? "Oh yeah, sure, it's a terrific profession," he concluded adding that, a number of years ago, the Wall Street Journal published an article discussing what activities offer the best value for money.

"You know what No. 1 was?" asked Wolff? "A haircut," he answered.

Wolff feels fortunate in one other important respect.

"You've got to like what you're doing — and I do," he concluded.

LA JOLLA ART WALK CELEBRATES PRIDE

The next First Friday Art Walk in the Village of La Jolla on Friday, June 3 will be dedicated to celebrating pride among the LGBTQ+ community. Every year, during June, the LGBTQ+ community and supporters celebrate the influence LGBTQ+ people have had around the world. June was chosen because it is when the Stonewall Riots took place in 1969, ushering in the start of the gay rights movement.

This June, the La Jolla First Friday Art Walk shines the light on LGBTQ+ community's groups, artists and impacts. In the spirit of diversity, equality, and inclusion, La Jolla Village strives to be a place that welcomes everyone — no matter who they love. The La Jolla Village Merchants Association has issued a special thanks to LGBTQ+ organizations joining in this special evening. If your organization would like to partner with one of La Jolla's art galleries for the June 3 Art Walk, email jodi@lajollabythesea.com.

"We'd love to show off the many groups that support and promote LGBTQ+ rights and resources," said LJVM executive director Jodi Rudick who added, "This month we are thrilled to feature a free patio performance at The Conrad Performing Arts Center featuring pop-up artist Edna Pine."

While the art walk is free and no tickets are required, guests are being asked to pre-register at <https://bit.ly/3PKWSq2> to help galleries estimate attendance. When you do, you will be offered a free parking pass for the event, compliments of ACE Mobility.

PANNIKIN'S REPLACEMENT

Formerly Pannikin Coffee & Tea at 7461 Girard Ave., an Italian cafe is expected to open there this summer. The new eatery will be run by Italian natives Edoardo Ciulli, Stefania Sciomachen and Giuseppe Scognamiglio. They signed a 15-year lease to open their own coffee shop, Il Giardino di Lilli.

Pannikin, which failed to come to lease terms with the building's owner, is moving soon into the space that previously housed Rubio's Coastal Grill at 7530 Fay Ave.

Friends of Vista Hill 'thank-you for being a friend' at annual fashion show

Fashion Files

Diana Cavagnaro

Friends of Vista Hill presented a tribute to the "Golden Girls" on May 6 at the Town & Country Resort & Convention Center for its 30th luncheon and fashion show. The event began with shopping from many local boutiques and stores. The guests came and shopped until they dropped finding apparel, jewelry, and other specialties.

This year, the co-chairs were Barbie Spinazzola and Maureen Sage. The mistress of ceremonies was Rory Devine. The theme for the day was "Thank You for Being A Friend!" This was a tribute to the 1980s TV show "Golden Girls."

Gretchen Productions produced and directed the fashion show. The runway revealed the latest fashion trends from local boutiques and Macy's in Fashion Valley.

The opening segment was a dance number with all the models dressed to impress in all white including Gretchen Burns. Her signature has always been to appear in the first number singing and dancing. She has been choreographing for the past 45 years in Southern California, Hawaii, and Mexico.

Additional singers and dancers were incorporated into the show making it a thoroughly enjoyable afternoon. They even had the characters from "Golden Girls," Dorothy, Sophia, Blanche, and Rose make an appearance on the catwalk.

One of the standouts was the bohemian styles from Satori. Another crowd-pleaser was a segment with Sprit, Derick, Brinja, and Blaze. These furry canine models strutted their four paws on the runway and delighting the audience.

The grand finale showed off eveningwear in beautiful shades of mauve, blush, and silver. Adding to the excitement on the runway was Andria Elam, Mrs. California 2021. As this entertaining show concluded, the guests returned to continue shopping in the boutiques.

Vista Hill's mission is to provide mental/behavioral health, educational, and social services to enhance families and individuals. This year, the beneficiary was Stein Education Center Adult Services "Golden Family" Program.

The Stein Education Center is located in Chula Vista and empowers adults with developmental disabilities. Vista Hills was established in 1957 and has been bringing "Stronger Families...Brighter Futures" since then. For more information about Vista Hill, visit vista-hill.org.

Mission Bay boys volleyball finishes successful season

By HECTOR TRUJILLO

The Mission Bay boys volleyball team wrapped up an impressive season finishing with a 17-9 mark, which is their second-best record in the last 25 years placing third in the league and making it to the second round of the CIF Division II playoffs. The Bucs accomplished this feat despite only having six returning players from last year with seniors Jake Kepner, Aric Johnson, Alex Morch, Brooks Robinson, junior Zane Caufield, and sophomore Maxime Vergnet.

"Fortunately, we had a really good group of younger players come out for beach volleyball in the fall, and a large group of freshmen, sophomores, and a couple of juniors come out for indoor volleyball in the spring," said head coach Nikki Caufield.

Mission Bay moved up to Division II this year, the highest division ranking in school history, after having a strong showing in Division III in 2021 where they also made it to the second round of the playoffs.

The team started off this season with three-straight victories versus La Jolla Country Day, Kearny, and Montgomery before dropping their first match against Madison on April 25. The Bucs bounced back with a dominating victory over Mira Mesa before dropping back-to-back matches to Morse and Elsinore.

Mission Bay then went on a four-game winning streak with victories over Del Lago Academy, Victory Christian Academy, El Capitan, and Granite Hills without losing a single set in any of those matches. Their winning streak came to an end on March 5 in a rematch with Morse after which the team was able to regroup by winning back-to-back games versus Kearny and Clairemont.

After falling to Patrick Henry on March 22, the Bucs won three straight, defeating Point Loma, Christian, and Hoover only losing one set during that span.

two to Mira Mesa and Patrick Henry but recovered by winning the following three against the same teams they defeated in their most recent win streak ending the regular season with a loss at Mira Mesa.

"After moving up a division and also moving up a league, our goal was to make the playoffs," Caufield added. "Our only losses this year were to teams that finished in the top five of their divisions and have done well in the playoffs. Our senior guys all really stepped up and helped the younger guys transition to varsity and we are really going to miss them next year."

The Bucs defeated Escondido in dramatic fashion, 3-2, in their first-round playoff match after dropping the first set to the Cougars. Mission Bay would see their outstanding season come to an end in the second round at Santa Fe Christian, 3-0.

Mission Beach Women's Club members have fun visit to Hubbs-SeaWorld Research Institute

By NANCY PERSON

Who knew baby halibuts could be so darn cute? Those little transparent bodies, happily darting around the fish tank made such an impression on me. They were part of a study to identify the water temperature at which female halibut babies become male. Can you imagine if taking a hot bath could change your gender?

Procreation of the species does require both genders, which is why the Hubbs-SeaWorld Research Institute is trying to replenish the wild fishery before it becomes too depleted. This is just one of the incredible studies from HSWRI happening right in our own backyard.

Several of the Mission Beach Women's Club members took advantage of a recent invitation to tour the facility, located on the grounds of the long-shuttered Atlantis Restaurant. I was a bit skeptical because I'm not much of a science person, and thought I'd be bored. I definitely was not! I've also heard so much controversy about SeaWorld and how they exploit their animals. However, after learning how much care the animals at SeaWorld get, as well as the ways in which they are used to help species in the wild, I am a new supporter of their mission.

President and CEO Donald Kent was our tour guide and showed us many experiments and new projects underway at the Hubbs-SeaWorld Research Institute. He started there as an SDSU graduate student in the late '70s and has led the Institute since 1996. Kent's passion for sea life and the environment was apparent. He explained in detail how some of their different research programs work to solve statewide, national, and even global issues.

Kent was instrumental in initiating the Ocean Resources Enhancement and Hatchery Program (OREHP). This partnership between the recreational/commercial fishing communities and the California Dept. of Fish and Wildlife has created ways to counteract the depletion of California's coastal marine fisheries through stock replenishment. He is also responsible for the planning and construction of the Leon Raymond Hubbard, Jr. Marine Fish Hatchery in Carlsbad, where they have reared, raised, and released more than 2.4 million white sea-bass into California waters.

The institute acknowledges that humans use the ocean for a variety of activities — food, recreation, energy production, transportation, and military maneuvers. Therefore, their scientists seek "win-win" solutions that allow humans and marine life to thrive together while sharing the seas. They work with anglers, resource managers, industry, and collaborators to minimize injuries or deaths of dolphins, killer whales, polar bears and other marine life resulting from interactions with human-made sounds and objects. Their work includes not only potential negative impacts of human-produced noise, but also the potential lifesaving benefits of sounds or gear modifications to keep marine life out of hazardous situations.

I expected that all the research at HSWRI would be focused on fish and seafood. I was surprised to learn about the polar bear study. Of course, if there weren't polar bears at SeaWorld that could be used in these investigations, these studies might not happen. How easy do you think it would be to befriend and monitor a wild polar bear?

As the Mission Beach Women's Club's director of philanthropy this year, I am happy to say we will be sharing some of our grant money with the HSWRI. We are fortunate to have such a dedicated organization helping to solve some of the world's problems, in terms of food supply, and animal welfare.

Pacific Beach residents carry on legacy of their former dog-walker with animal advocacy

Pacific Beach residents Catherine Chow and her partner Dr. Stanley Perkins could never have guessed their animal-loving friend John Peterson – a former Navy serviceman who often walked their dogs and occasionally house-sat for them – was wealthy. He was quiet and unassuming; he enjoyed a simple, unpretentious lifestyle that revolved around his animals.

Imagine their surprise when Peterson approached them to request they be executors of his estate – which, it turns out, was sizable – upon his passing and dedicate all of his accumulated wealth to helping animals in need.

“‘Stunned’ would be an understatement,” said Chow of her initial reaction to Peterson’s request. “We’d known him for years and had no idea he had this kind of wealth. But we also felt so honored he would choose us for something so important.”

After Peterson’s death from late-stage cancer in 2019, Chow and Perkins got to work, forming the John R. Peterson Foundation to ensure better, longer lives for companion animals, just as their friend had asked of them.

Since its creation in 2020, the private foundation has kept Peterson’s legacy and love for animals alive, distributing more than $1 million from his estate to animal welfare organizations, including San Diego Humane Society.

The foundation’s mission employs three key strategies to extend kindness to animals:

- Increasing community participation in spay and neuter programs;

- Supporting veterinary care programs that address disease prevention and treatment; and;
- Contributing to community efforts that enable people to keep their pets in tough times.

May is “Be Kind to Animals” month, and Chow recommends reaching out to an animal welfare organization to offer up whatever it is you have to give. “Not everyone can give like John, and that’s OK,” she said. “You can foster animals; you can volunteer your time to walk dogs. There are lots of ways to help.”

The foundation currently supports a variety of projects toward those efforts, including funding spay/neuter clinics in San Diego and Hawaii, sponsoring a veterinary residency at San Diego Humane Society’s Pilar & Chuck Bahde Center for Shelter Medicine, and funding educational opportunities to help animal owners understand the needs of their pets.

GARDEN COORDINATOR

The Native Plant Garden at Rose Creek in Pacific Beach was started in the mid-1990s by The Nature

School. Since 2004, the Friends of Rose Creek have managed and expanded the garden. The group is seeking a new “coordinator” to water newly planted native plants as needed, trim and remove non-native invasive species, expand the native plant garden by preparing the area, obtaining plants, and installing plants, partner with volunteers and community groups to managed the garden. Time commitment is 4-10 hours per month. This is a volunteer opportunity. Contact Karin Zirk at 858-405-7503 or

LJ ELEMENTARY CONSTRUCTION

A new classroom facility is one “beam” closer to completion at La Jolla Elementary School. Students recently were joined by Board of Education President Dr. Sharon Whitehurst-Payne, La Jolla Elementary Principal Stephanie Hasselbrink, school staff, and construction crews to sign one of the final steel beams for their upcoming classroom and student services facility. Moments after signing, the group watched as it was hoisted into place. “It’s surreal,” said Hasselbrink. “Just yesterday we were meeting with parents and the community. Now, we are watching in real-time as our visions are coming to life.” When complete, the state-of-the-art facility will create a secure point-of-entry at Girard Avenue and will include 10 general-education classrooms and an engineering and robotics maker space to boost STEAM learning.

Surprising findings about some of our super powers

Doing it Better

By Natasha Josefowitz, Ph.D.

A recent issue of Psychology Today (April 2022) featured an article titled: “Your Hidden Super Powers: Ten Ways You Are Stronger Than You Think.” As I read the piece, I was intrigued by how counter-intuitive these super powers seemed.

The following eight stood out as particularly compelling: imperfection, generativity, routine, satisfaction, daydreaming, nostalgia, hope, and restlessness. Perhaps you, my readers, will also find them as intriguing as I did.

Imperfection: Conventional wisdom points to the expectation that putting your best foot forward is necessary to be appreciated, even liked. We are conscious of how we present ourselves and strive to be as good as we can at whatever we are doing. We place a high value on being perceived as successful and self-assured. However, research has shown that it is when we make mistakes and show our vulnerabilities that we are the most likable. So what we admire most about ourselves is not necessarily what is most appealing; drop the facade and be yourself. Let people discover the true, imperfect humanity in you, and they will like you better for it.

Generativity: Again, conventional wisdom stresses the importance of achieving our own personal goals. In the desire to feel better about ourselves, we indulge in self-improvement, expanding our minds, strengthening our bodies, and improving our homes. However, research suggests that caring more about the next generation (hence the term “generativity,” a theory first proposed by Erik Erikson) and including our elders, increases our sense of well-being. In other words, investing and attending to the concerns of others offers a sense of fulfillment that caring for ourselves does not. Being there for others is a form of self-care and will increase your own good health.

Routine: Sticking to a routine may sound rigid and unimaginative, but developing a routine is actually beneficial. A steady routine combats the inaction that can come from overthinking little decisions. Routine takes care of itself. Primary routines include hygiene, sleep, and eating, while secondary routines include work and social activities. Studies have shown that routines benefit mental health by reducing stress and anxiety. Routine gives us a sense of control via a regular set of actions we do consistently without pressure.

Satisfaction: We tend to measure our satisfaction by measuring success, achievements, acquisitions, and upward mobility. People who subscribe to these external measures of success are not satisfied because the goal is a forever moving target. People who avoid comparing themselves to others, and who prioritize relationships, find their self-worth as unique individuals.

Daydreaming: It is not a form of procrastination, nor is it a sign of an idle mind. Contrary to expectations, a wandering mind lends itself to creative problem-solving. Surprisingly, brain scans have found that our brains are more active when our minds wander than when we are focused on specific content. So carve out some time for yourselves to allow your mind to wander and see where it takes you.

Nostalgia: Letting your mind recall past events is not an escape from the present. It is a way for our memory to access the continuity of our personhood. Reminiscing offers some direct mental health benefits as a protective factor against depression and anxiety. People who wax nostalgic have a sense of self-continuity and a strong sense of their life’s meaning. Looking back helps to fit together all of our experiences into a coherent narrative.

Hope: Hope is not a delusion, nor is it living in a fantasy world. Hope is a perception that gives us the power to create reality out of something that does not yet exist. When people have hope, their goals are more likely to become reality because they are more likely to take steps to make them happen. Hopeful people believe in themselves and their capabilities.

Restlessness: Restlessness relates to the brain’s desire for novelty. Restless people, whose urge is to engage in new experiences, have an advantage. Some who are able to find new hobbies, new ways of connecting to others, and aspire to new goals enjoy health benefits. Simply taking a different path on your way home counts as the fulfillment of the need for diversity. Brain scans have demonstrated a correlation between experiencing environmental diversity and feeling positive emotions. Even going to new places within one’s home territory also increases feelings of happiness. To find new things to do, new places to go to, and new people to meet. Look for novelty in your daily life and you will be rewarded with well-being.

I encourage everyone to embrace their own unique super powers and live their best life!

“Our pets don’t have choices – they’re entirely dependent on us,” said Chow, chief executive officer and board member of the John R. Peterson Foundation. “It’s our responsibility to care for them. They provide unconditional love without expectation of anything in return. I think that’s why John was such an animal person.”

Chow devotes her time to running the foundation.

The Social Diary – Louis Vuitton’s ‘it’ crowd gathers at Salk Institute, La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club, and MCASD

By MARGO SCHWAB

The four-day fête everyone is talking about and can’t stop talking about! The world’s No. 1 luxury brand Louis Vuitton came to La Jolla for an unparalleled four-day social and #Cruise2023 fashion experience. People were flown in from around the globe, yes the Parisian caterer too! The invite was “tellement” coveted.

The main draw was the fashion show at the Salk Institute. Clean Louis Kahn architecture provided the perfect backdrop at sunset to the knife-edged vision of new and brilliantly sculpted power silhouettes by Louis Vuitton designer Nicolas Ghesquière.

Noted among the models was Lauren Wasser a very can-do and abled double amputee, and Olympic gold medalist, 400m hurdle winner Dalilah Muhammad.

Guests included Stephanie Kourie, Louis Vuitton VP Christine Westerby, Stefan McKellar, Nate Whitton, actress Emma Roberts, and Ella Emhoff. Emhoff is the stepdaughter of Vice President Kamala Harris, hence the presence of the Secret Service.

MCASD later rocked the after-party. The next day, a smaller posh gathering was held at the La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club starting with tropical vibe cocktails on the beach, followed by lunch at The Marine Room. You know, the place that just hosted Top Gun’s Tom Cruise two weeks earlier.

Get a social shout-out in my next column. Be the first to correctly identify my outfit’s designers on the cover shot with Insta influencer @LilyMayMac. Good try on the last one Hugh Davies! Send answers to mschwab@san.rr.com. ‘Til next time!

Salk Institute hosts Louis Vuitton fashion show on its iconic campus

French luxury fashion house Louis Vuitton presented Nicolas Ghesquière’s Cruise 2023 Collection at the Salk Institute in La Jolla as the sun set over the Pacific Ocean. The private fashion show on May 12 was the first event of its kind to be held at the Institute.

Designed to resonate with the striking Brutalist setting of this architectural masterpiece, the collection invited the sun as the guest of honor, which played an active part in the evolution of this wardrobe where changes in temperature set a stylistic tempo.

“The Salk campus with Louis Kahn’s dramatic architecture was the ideal backdrop for Louis Vuitton’s artistry and imagination,” says Rebecca Newman, Salk’s vice president of external relations. “The show itself was stunning, and the aftermath, with icons of fashion and science mingling together to watch the sun set

– REBECCA NEWMAN,
SALK’S VP OF EXTERNAL RELATIONS

over the Pacific, was a perfect conclusion to an extraordinary event.”

The Institute’s travertine courtyard was converted into a temporary runway for the event. The models and guests were flanked by the Institute’s two mirror-image concrete buildings, where Salk scientists make life-changing discoveries in the fields of aging, cancer, neuroscience, immunology, climate change and other areas to benefit global health and well-being.

Salk and Kahn created spacious, unobstructed laboratory spaces that can adapt to the ever-changing needs of science, using concrete, teak, lead, glass and steel – materials that would last generations. The “River of Life” water feature cutting through the courtyard represents the constant trickle of discovery spilling into the great body of knowledge, symbolized by the Pacific Ocean.

“Salk has a global reputation as ‘a cathedral to science, an homage to art,’” says Salk President Rusty Gage. “The Institute’s founder, Jonas Salk, understood that art and science come from the same creative source. It was his intention that his Institute become a place where scientists and artists could both find inspiration, and we’re honored that Louis Vuitton found inspiration here.”

The Salk Institute was established in 1960 by Salk, developer of the first safe and effective polio vaccine. Salk collaborated with architect Kahn to design a research institute not only renowned for its leading-edge science, but also revered around the world as a modern architectural treasure. The Institute’s iconic use of space, natural light, materials and bold lines served as the setting on Thursday to showcase Louis Vuitton’s collection.

“The Louis Vuitton show was fantastic because it introduced the fashion community to the Salk Institute and its science,” says Greg Lemke, professor in Salk’s Molecular Neurobiology Laboratory and Françoise Gilot-Salk Chair.

“Bringing creative people with very different interests to the Institute is an important cross-fertilization. They were able to experience our iconic buildings and hear about our work firsthand.”

In 1992, the Institute received a 25-Year Award from the American Institute of Architects and was featured in the group’s exhibit “Structures of Our Time: 31 Buildings That Changed Modern Life.” The Salk Institute has been described in local publications as “the single most significant architectural site in San Diego.”

The Salk Institute was featured as the location of the Louis Vuitton 2019 Travel Campaign, and then once again in the “LV Book #10 – The California Issue.” The Institute continues to be a lasting reference and source of inspiration for the brand.

A recording of the show can be viewed on YouTube at: <https://youtu.be/qu3fySrXLpY>.
